The officials, who were virtually certain two months ago that the Jordanians would buy similar air-defense system from Moscow, were clearly relieved at King Hussein's decision to retain the Uoited States as his prime supplier of arms.

There had been considerable oncern in Washington most of the spring that for a variety of reasons, the Jordanians would accept Soviet offers to supply a sopbisticated air-defense system, opening Jordan 10 major Soviet influence for the first time.

Soviet Remains in Olympic Games

The Soviet Union withdrew its threat to pull out of the Montreal Olympics yesterday and the closing phases of competition went on without incident. The Soviet had said earlier it might leave before the closing ceremony unless Canada returned a 17-year-old diver who defected.

The Soviet called the "kidnapping" of Sergei Newtsanov "one point in a big chain of anti-Soviet compaign here in Canada." A Russian press officer suggested that all sports ties with Canada would be severed unless the refugee status of the young diver was resolved.

While a packed stadium wanted for the main event, the marathon, three Soviet wrestlers were clirching gold medals. Administration officials in Washington said yesterday that Jordan had decided not to buy an air-defense system from the Soviet Union, as Washington was virtually certain it would, and is close to buying it from the United States for $540 million. The officials were said to be clearly relieved at King Hussein's decision to reain the United States as his prime supplier of arms. The purchase from the United States could be vetoed by Congress, but this is not expected. The purchase would be financed by Saudi Arabia. Hussein changed his mind, the Administra-tion officials said, mainly because of the willingness of Saudi Arabia to pay as much as $540 million for the air-defense system after refusing for four months to give Jordan more than $300 million. [Page 1, Column 8.]

The Ford Administration has decided to sell a new generation of missiles and so-called "smart" bombs to Saudi Arabia as part of a continuing effort to develop that country's armed forces. Administration officials said the sale would include Maverick air-to-surface missiles, "TOW" — tube-launched, optically tracked, wire guided missiles—and an early version of the "smart" bombs, so called because they are guided by laser beams to their targets. The officials emphasized that these are not as sophisticated as the "smart" bomhs the United States had supplied to Israel. [1:6-7.]

President Tito of Yugoslavia denounced the United States Ambassador, Laurence H. Silberman, and said that he had initiated a campaign against Yugoslavia and was try-ing to upset Yugoslavia's relations with other nonaligned nations. Tensions between Mr. Silberman and his staff and the Yugoslav Government has been growing in the past year, partly because of Yugoslavia's imprisonment of Lazlo Toth, an American citizen who had been accused of spying. Mr. Toth was recently released. President Tito's remarks were made in an interview with the Yugoslav national news agency, Tanjug. It was the first time in memory that President Tito had denounced a foreign diplomat by name and there was speculation that Mr. Siltian commanders. The evacuation has pregrata. [1:6-7.]

The International Red Cross, which had sought to evacuate the first of about 4,000 wounded civilians, mainly women and childreo, from the besieged Palestinian camp of Tell Zaatar on the outskirts of Beirut were refused entry hy extremist right-wing Christion commanders. The evacuation has previously been postponed repeatedly by Christian leaders. Tell Zaatar has been under siege for nearly a month, and is being constantly pounded by mortar shells and antiaircraft guns. Two Swedish physicians serving as volunteers in the camp told a Swedish journalist by radio that there were 30,000 civilians in the defense perimeter, about half of them children. He said many were dying of dehydra-tion, dysentary and a lack of medicine. [16:1.]

Decision to End Long Delay Follows Assembly Protest

> By MARVINE HOWE Special to The New York Times

LISBON, July 31 -- Portugal will try political police agents of the former right-wing dictatorship before special military courts in September, it was announced today after more than two year of unexplained delay.

More than 2,000 people have been arrested and accused of having belonged to the political police. Only 19 of them, however, remain in jail.

The arrests were made immediately after the overthrow of the dictatorship on April 25, 1974. In the months that followed, some political policemen mysteriously escaped from prisoo, others were quietly set free and most of the rest freed on hail on ball.

The release on bail this week of three of the most notorious former police inspectors brought a storm of protests in the National Assembly.

Unanimou Protest

"The Assembly of the Repub-lic, deeply concerned over the freeing of ome of those most responsible for tortures as well as over the delay in bringing the cases to trial, expresses its deep regret and protests against these fact," declared a motion approved unanimously yester-

A Socialist deputy and news-paper publisher. Paul Rego, called the Assembly's attention to the continued release without trial of former political police officials, specifically three inspectors — Abilio Pires, Armando Rego and José Ga-

"The country does not want vengeance, but it wants justice brought upon those who did so much tortoure." Rego said to a standing ovation from most of the Assembly. The leftist Association of Anti-Fascist Former Political Prisoners issued a communique protesting the latest releases. Giving Up Vacation

In apparent reaction to the protests, military authorities announced that the trials of the police agents would begin in September. It was emphasized that the military courts were sacrificing one month of their vacation to accelerate the process.

Ten military courts have been set up for the trials, five in Lisbon, two in Oporto, one in Tomar, one in Coimbra and

The trials will begin with minor agents, who had ittle responsibility and have been released on bail, official sources

Among the former police of-ficials still detained are Maj. Fernando Silvo Pais, former chief of the political police who has been implicated in the mur-der of Gen. Humberto Delgado, the former opposition leader. The principal question is how have been freed will be present for the trials. Many of them have fled to Spain and France.

Delay Is Criticized The commission that was responsible for preparting the trials has come under attack for the delay in bringing charges against the prisoners.

Capt. Rodrigo Sousa e Castro, a member of the military Council of the Revolution who was named to supervise the commission, explained that the delays were a result of various political pressures on the commission, In another development, the military commission set up to investigate allegations of mistreatment and torture of political prisoners after the 1974 revolution has completed its work and is to submit a reporti to President António Ramalho Eanes on Monday.

The report is said to relate specific cases of torture that occurred in certain military units. It is said that more than 2.500 people other than former political policemen were ar-rested for political reasons between September 1974 and November 1975, when the Communists were trying to take power in Portugal.

HUNGARIANS YIKLD TO RISE IN PRICES

They Grumbie but Refrain, Unlike Poles, From Riots

BUDAPEST, July 31 (Ren-ters)—Twelve days after Polish workers moted over higher food prices, forcing their Government to capitulate, Hungary enforced similar increases, Hengarians grumbled, but they paid up.

The difference Mustrates public relations technique perfected by the Hungarian leader, Janos Kadar, in 20 years as Eastern Europe's most pragmatic Communist Party chief.

Poland and Hungary had good prices: both suffer from a money squeeze because of inflation and rising prices for Soviet raw materials. Both Governments spend heavily on food subsidies, and both know that increased food production depends on higher market payments for farmers.

The Polish price boost, endag a five-year freeze, was imposed virtually overnight, raising food costs by an average of 60 percent. Workers rebelled, actories and shops were looted and strikes and protest meetings forced an abrupt cancellation of the new prices pending conomic reasons for raising ion of the new prices pending official rethinking.

Since then, the Polish Government has announced plans or limited increases, with the or immed increases, with the cost of meat due to rise 35 perent—half the original increase. Polish officials have now romised consultation with corkers before the new prices reput into effect.

At least two groups of work-rs have been jailed for rioting. Hungary Explained Reasons

In Hungary, the Government unounced higher prices—about 0 percent more for meat—sevn months before the new rates /ere enforced. The reasons /ere carefully explained in ewspapers, on radio and tele-lsion, and wage bonuses helped ffset the higher costs. Since 1975, when Soviet crude costs rose one and a half mes, Hungarians have faced a ries of price increases for igar, huilding materials, furni-ire, and now for fish and ilami as well as regular meat. estaurant and factory cafe-via meets also cost more. ria meals also cost more.

The increases, introduced radually, were carried through ithout trouble.

Mr. Kadar's Government, in ower since the anti-Soviet reolt in 1956, has warned Hunarians frankly that the county's boom has ended and that ibsidized food prices must be aligned to reflect economic

POLISH PRIMATE NEARS MILESTONE

At 75, He Shows No Signs of Giving Up Leadership

WARSAW, July 31 (Reuters) -Stefan Cardinal Wyszynski, leader of Poland's 30 million Roman Catholics, marks his 75th birthday oo Tuesday with no signs of giving up his long and shrewd defense of the interests of the church in this Communist state.

The most durable of all church leaders in Communist Europe, Cardinal Wyszynski has steered midway between martyrdom and compromise. As a result the Catholic faith bere is alive and strong after 30 years of intermitteot Communist harassment.

Churches are full, recruitment

to the priesthood is flourishing and for the foreseeable future the church seems likely to occupy a powerful role.

Under modern Vatican provisions, however, each bishop bas to examine his conscience when he becomes 75, and decide whether to go oo or hand over to a younger man.

Churchmen here have no doubt about the outcome in the Polish primate's case.

Why should he retire? He is well and looks 10 years young-er than his age," said a cleric close to the cardinal.

The authorities here seem, on balance, to favor a continuation of Cardinal Wyszynski's leadership. "They know Cardinal Wyszynski. They would rather have the priest they know than the priest they don't know." the priest they don't know," said a senior churchman, And it now seems certalo that the Vatican has no reservations about the correctness of Catholic leadership in Po-

At Odds With Pope

Ten years ago, wheo Pope Paul VI was inaugurating a policy of improved relations Communist Governments in Eastern Europe to alleviate the situation of millions of Catholics, it seemed that the Pope and the Polish Cardinal were not always pursuing the same course. Cardinal Wyszynski was relentlessly opposing the theo-Communist leader, Wladyslaw Gomulka, who had chosen a policy of confrontation.

But today, state policy is one of containment and io these conditions, maintained by the more pragmatic Communist leader Edward Gierek, thera is some stability in courch-state relatioos.

Both sides here know from postwar experience that io times of economic trouble the church automatically gains and the Communist Party loses. Shortly after Cardinal Wyszynski took over as primate in 1949, the Stalinist period eotered its coldest phase and for a time it seemed that he was beading for a martyr's crown. Both he and Mr. Gomulka were iocarcerated. Cardinal Wyszynski in a monastery in southeast Poland, and Mr. Go mulka in a security police de-tention bloc near Warsaw.

Both returned in 1956 when Mr. Gomulka came in triumph to head the party again. When Mr. Gomulka fell after the 1970 food riots and he was succeeded by Mr. Gierek, the new party leader needed a period of tranquility.

Confrontation eoded and the was opened for relations oased on negotiatioo, diploma-cy and a kind of coexistence.

RIGHTISTS BLOCK LEBANON RESCUE

Extremists Bar Red Cross
From Starting Evacuation of Wounded Palestinians

By HENRY TANNER

Special to The New York Times
BEIRUT, July 31—Extremist rightwing Christian commanders formally refused permission today for the Red Cross to enter the beleaguered Palestinian camp of Tell Zatar to evacuate the first of about 4,000 wounded civilians, most of them women and children,

The evacution bad been set for early morning after repeated postponements resulting from objections by Christian leaders.

Michele Mercier, spokeswoman for the Red Cross mission said that a right-wing commander whom she would not name told the Red Cross this morning that its convoy would not be permitted to go "beyond a certain point" outside the camp.

Other officials said that if the conditions of the right-wing Christians were accepted, the wounded would have to be brought out of the camp by the defenders through a stretch of no man's land and would "be gunned down" before they reached the Red Cross convoy.

"We cannot go there and say it is okay if 10 die and we bring out the other 90," Miss Mercier said, explaining why the Red Cross refused to try the evacuation from the point designated by the Christian commander. The plan had been to bring out 100 wounded the first day

Teli Zaatar, a fortified camp surrounded by low-cost bousing, has been under siege for 29 days, pounded by mortar and antiaircraft guns.

A few days ago the last water main ruoning through the area was cut off.

Thousands Could Die

Last right, Laps Smedman, one of two Swedish physicians serving as volunteers in the camp told a Swedish journalist by radio that there were 30,000 civilians io the defense perimeter, half of them children. He said many were dying of dehydration, dysentery and a simple lack of medicine.

The Red Cross has been trying to organize the evacuation of the wounded from Tell Zaatar for the last four weeks.

plans with the defenders. Agreement Drafted

Early this week a written agreement was drafted. In agreement was drafted. In it the commanders of the principal militias were to guarantee safe conduct to the convoy of wounded. But Christian militia leaders bave so far refused to sign the agreement, according to Red Cross officials. It has been signed by the representatives of the Palestinian Liberation Organization and the Lebanese Leftist-Moslem alliance headed by Kamai Jumblat.

Red Cross officials said two days ago that Interior Minister Camille Chamoun, whose militia is the main force "involved in the siege of Tell Zaatar, had asked for a 24-hour delay in which he was going to give instructions to his troops to refrain from shooting either at the Red Cross convoy going io or the wounded it might hring out.

Then today, Red Cross officials were surprised to receive from the Christiao extremists the notification that the convoy would not be permitted to enter the camp.

The Geneva conventions for the protection of civilian lives and prisoners have never been observed in the 16-month-old Lebanese war. More than 20,000 people have been killed, most of them civilians.

Just how deep the hatred and fanaticism bas become, was evident eight days ago when correspoodeots accompanied thrdee Red Cross delegates as far as a Christian forward command post just outside Tell Zaatar.

Abou Arz, leader of the Guardians of the Cedars, a small extremist right-wing Christian splinter group, told a correspondent that his own private army would permit the Red Cross delegates to go into the camp only if they obtained the evacuation of everyone there.

friends are fine, but old friends, tried and true, are finah, that's why. And to give you a quick refresher course on the old virtues of Old Maine Trotters.

As follows. (a) The factory's in old Penobscot, old Maine. Some of the craftsmen are Penobscot Indians. (And you know Indians invented moccasins, the swift, soft, silent shoes.)

(b.) They're rich, creamysleek rosewood color calfskin that's been handwaxed to a dreamy gleam. (c.) They have soft, bouncy crepe soles that make tough city pavements feel like mossy forest paths. (d.) Even the white stitching details were done by hand.

(e.) Everybody loves them. One of our junior executives, who just graduated from Barnard, says she wore one pair to school nearly everyday for two years.

Now don't think we've forgotten about Fashion. Would Sonny forget about Cher? These classic shapes will be just perfect with the classic clothes that are top news for fall. You'll trot out your Trotters with kilted skirts, tweed trousers, your new knit knickers and of course textured stockings.

We've picked a trio from our comfortable collection, each with a comfortable price tag, 34.00.

And we suggest that you race in and put your money on your favorite, because these pace setting Trotters are bred to keep you ahead of the field from starting gate to finish line, even if you think Yonkers is just a stop on the way to Greenwich.

_NEW QUAKE ALERT ISSUED BY PEKING

Most of Capital's Buildings Evacuated, With Danger Reported Continuing

PEKING, July 31 (Reuters)— More warnings that another earthquake could strike, were issued today to Peking's six million people, who have been camped in the city's streets since early Wednesday.

Almost every building has been evacuated and foreigners also were advised to sleep out of doors. Embassies were sup-

Troops with fixed bayonets patrolled the boulevards.

The fresh alerts came three days after a huge quake leveled the industrial city of Tangshan, reportedly killing many thou-sands of peoplee in the worst Chinese disaster since the Com-munists came to power 36 years

HOUSE 'FORUM' SET ON ACADEMY CODE

16 Congressmen to Explore Cadets' Side of Scandal in an 'informal Hearing'

By JAMES FERON

Representatives will "informal hearing" Wednesday to explore what one of them said yesterday was "the cadets' side" of the West Point cheating scandal.

This "public forum" approach is unusual but not unique in Washington. It has been used by legislators seeking to draw attention to issues that committee leadera have been reluctant to examine on an official basis.

Next week's session in the Capitol will draw testimony from several cadets as well as from Army lawyers, faculty members and others involved in a continuing dispute with Military Academy officials over the cheating and the adminis-tration of the honor code, which says cadets "will not lie, cheat or steal, nor tolerate those who do."

177 Cadets Charged

A total of 177 cadets have been officially charged with collaboration on a take-bome engineering examination in March. Eleven other cases were dismissed before reaching boards of officers, or trials, and nine other cadets have re-signed. The boards so far have sustained 46 guilty verdicts and cleared 24 cadets.

A Senate armed services subcommittee investigating military academy honor codes following the furor at West Point adjourned a month ago after baving beard West Point officials, but not the cadets, lawyers and others who have chal lenged the codes.

An administrative aide in the House said that "the Senate leaders don't want to polarize the situation by bringing cadets in 10 testify and the House leaders don't want to get involved at all, but there are important issues at stake here." Seven of the 16 House sponsors are members of the Armed Services Committee.

A' spokesman for Senator Sam Num, Democrat of Georgia and chairman of the Senate subcommittee, said hearings would be resumed this month to hear "outside exerts" to hear "outside experts" on honor codes, but not cadets or others involved in the current

Inequity Alleged

The cadets, supported by tes timony from Army lawyers and faculty members at West Point board hearings, have argued that more than half of last year's junior class of 875 cadets were involved in the cheating. They have also asserted that the honor code is being administered inequitably and unjustly and that the entire system needs re-examination.

More recently, the cadets have focused on the alleged il-legal nature of an "internal review panel dominated by offi cers and appointed by West Point in place of the cadet honor committee at the beginning of summer vacation to bandle the cheating scandal.

In a related matter, the Court of Military Appeals in Washing ton agreed yesterday to hear arguments Aug. 16 on a request by West Point cadets to halt current inquiry and trials at West Point until the review panels role is examined.

Scope of Hearing Representative Thomas

Downey, Democrat of West Islip, said the informal hearing was intended to examine "the process by which the Military Academy is bandling the cheat ing cases, claims by the cadets their honor - committee functions have been removed. the honor system as cadets see it and possible solutions to this and other cases

He said the hearing sponsors were all Democrats "but they range from liberal to conservative". They include Representative Samuel S. Stratton of New York, Mendel J. Davis of South Carolina. Barhara C. Jordan of Texas, Richard Bolling of Mis-souri, Floyd V. Hicks of Washington and Charles H. Wilson and Jim Lloyd of California.

Mr. Downey, who conducted an earlier inquiry of the cheat-ing incident, said he was spon-soring legislation with Benja-min A. Gilman, Republican of Middletown, to establish an outside investigation of hono codes at the Government military academies. Army lawyers at West Point are preparing a petition to ask theDefense De-partment to do the same.

General Declines Invitation

Mr. Downey said he had asked the West Point superintendent, Lieut. Gen. Sidney B. Berry to attend the Wednesday session or to send a representa tive or a statement "but he de-Mr. Downey said, "saying he did not want to interfere with the conduct of the current investigation."

General Berry has repeatedly denied allegations of a coverup. He testified before the Senate subcommittee that all cases brought to the Acadamy's attention were being investigate

The superintendent also has taken issue with contentions of Army lawyers at West Point that the Academy sought to use a proposed petition to persuade the Secretary of the Army. Martin Hoffmann, to waive an active-service requirement for expelled cadets, thus encouraging their resignation.

SCHOOLS ACCUSED ON CONTRACT BIDS

Sees 'Contempt' in Way Test Publisher Is Picked

By EDWARD RANZAL

The New York City Comptroller, Harrison J. Goldin, accused the Board of Education yesterday of ignoring, or circumventing, competitive bid requirements over the last 12 years to award $6.4 million in citywide school test contracts to Harcourt, Brace, Jovanich Inc., a leading publisher.

Mr. Goldin said that the pat tern of an audit by his office was "one of contempt by school authorities for the competitive-bidding requirements of law, favoritism for a single supplier, and an abysmal failure to protect public funds through competition in the marketplace."

A spokesman for Harcourt Brace, publishers of general and professional books, periodicals and educational books, tests and films, said the com-pany would have "no com-

The tests iovolved are the standard citywide reading and mathematics test administered each year in the school system. Harcourt, Brace was awarded the current $650,000 contract to provide the Board of Education with the tests. It has beld these contracts since 1965.

The audit said there was no competitive bidding for tests administered from 1965 through 1974. This practice was de-fended by the board at the time on the ground that "the items . . . are of a nature that they can be obtained from no other company through com-petitive bidding procedures," the audit asserted

Board Position Contested

But the audit alleged that the board is contention was "un-doubtedly inaccurate." The report noted that when an invitation to submit bids was finally offered for 1974-75, five publishers, including Harcourt, Brace, sought the contract.

A 1973 memorandum discovered by auditors in the board's files suggested that several other publishers, including Mc-Graw Hill and Houghton-Mif-flin, were qualified to provide "valid, well-constructed tests." The memo warned that the board's practices "could be construed as collusion to insure H. B. J. repeating as the sole contractor."

A spokesman for the board said that "all individuals involved in the contract process prior to 1972-73 are no longer employed by the Board of Edu-cation and, as such, it is impossible at this point to ascer tain the background of the transpired actions."

The audit said that the office of the Brooklyn District Attorney has been investigating a number of allegations concern-ing the contract awards, including possible payoffs. spokesman for the district at torney's office said there would he "no commeot" oo whether or not there was an investiga-

Blds Sought for 1975 Tests

In March 1974, the board de-cided to solicit bids for the first time for the 1975 city-wide test, including scoring. Six publishers, including Harcourt, Brace, responded. In May, Mr. Goldin said the board changed the bid specifications but the process was a "sham," the audit said, because "H. B. J. appears to have been placed in an advantageous position."

There bad been severe cism of the results of the 1973 test: There were allegations that teachers bad provided stu-dents with samples and answers of previous tests in an effort to raise their marks on the new test. The board's new specifica-tions for 1974 call for a "se-cure" test—test material not previously published, as well as "norms" to be provided at time of the test. Norms are measuring tonls for performance and are used to compare one stu-dent against another, the audit

In awarding the 1975 con-tract to Harcourt, Brace, the board held that it was the only company that could meet the specifications. The audit concluded that board's position had not been justified.

The report was also critical of the board for approving $170,131 in extra charges assessed by the publishing house for the 1975 test. When the auditors said they attempted to validate the extra charges, "we were informed by the regional manager of Harcourt, Brace that there was no auditable information available."

To some extent, Mr. Ford's preference would be dictated by the style he chooses for the fall campaign against the Democratic ticket of Jimmy Carter, the former Georgia Governor and Walter F. Mondale, the Senator from Minnesota.

A Young Pollster Plays Key Role for Car

Special to The Kee York Times

PLAINS, GA., July 31-One day in early June when Jimmy Carter had tled up the Demo-cratic Presidential nomination six weeks before the party's convention, his campaign manager, Hamilton Jordan, and his television and advertising consultant, Jerald Rafshoon, were giddy with pleasure and the taste of success.

Boxed into the narrow fuse age of an executive turboprop craft on a flight from Plains to Atlanta, Mr. Jordan said with a broad smile: "You know why Jimmy Carter is going to be President? Because of Pat Caddell—it's all because of Pat mood, his reading of the chang-ing values, fears, disenchant-ments and hopes of the country.

Yet there seems to be no conflict or tension, and Mr. Carter clearly values and respects Mr.

Caddell's contributions.

One defeated member of the anti-Carter resistance movement in the Democratic Party said: "It's a marriage made in purgatory. Jimmy and Pat both think in themes, and the themes are almost identical."

A political journalist said:
"Jimmy would cut the cards if he was playing poker with his mother. But he trusts Caddell."
This is one reason Mr. Carter is unlikely to pay much heed to criticisms of the young poll-taker, who has already begun an extensive national public opinion survey program for the fall election.

These criticisms range from a suggestion that Mr. Caddell's polls inaccurately overestimat-ed Mr. Carter's strength in some key primary elections to suggestions that his dual roles as an adviser to Mr. Carter and as a commercial polister who sells reports to major corpora-tions and the Saudi Arabian Government raise conflict-ofinterest questions and the issue of an ethical code for politak-

Sale, new and used genuine Orientals... over $1,000,000 worth!

Each rug is truly a masterpiece! Unparalleled beauties rich in color and tradition . . . hand woven of pure wool pile by artisans, perfectionists in these age-old skills. Simply put—Orientals are treasures that become more and more precious with each passing year. And, now they are here . . . on Macy's 7th Floor! Come see, you'll surely be delighted with the choice . . . and at these utterly reasonable prices—it just doesn't pay to search farther.

And don't be afraid to ask questions. If there's anything you want to know about the Oriental you select—symbols, quality, colors, patterns—simply ask our consultant who will be here all this week.

All old rugs are washed and serviced. Old rugs are graded: E for excellent, G for good, F for fair, and W for worn. New rugs are labelled N. Hurry in, all rugs are subject to prior sale. Since rugs are handmade sizes are approximate.

Oriental Rugs (Dept. 190), 7th Floor, Macy's Herald Square only.

Uproar Over Cock Fight Ruffles Virginia Gentry

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., July 31—A substitute police court judge here has ordered the trial of 11 Virginia gentlemen for engaging in an il-legal cockfight, giving a new fillup to a sumer diversion that has caused more uproar the recent visit of Queen Elizabeth.

It had been widely assumed it had been widely assumed that the charges would be gracefully dropped. "There are faces and mouths falling al, over the place," one resident said today.

Yesterday's ruling, setting a trial date of Aug. 19, was the latest surprise in months of controversy here over of controversy here over which was more scandalous: grown men of substantial means cheering on the combat unto death of two gladiator chickens, or a system of law enforcement so insertilaw enforcement so insensi-tive to a traditional pasttime of the gentry as to organize a 20-man police raid on the specially built "cocker's"

Bred to Fight

Cockfighting involves roosters especially bred for aggressiveness and a will to fight even when mortally wounded. The roosters fight with their beaks and with sharp gaffs attached to their less.

The sport is fairly common in some parts of the country and is not illegal in Virginia unless it involves an admission fee, gambling or the award of a prize or trophy of any value, such as the silver cup that the police contend was seized in the cockfight raid here on May 7 at Inglecress Farm.

Until yesterday, the law-man's side in the community debate seemed to be losing. The leader of the raid, a young deputy sheriff named John Albert, was placed on six months probation by Sheriff George W. Balley shortly after Mr. Albert and 20 state troopers burst in or 20 state troopers burst in on a Friday night audience of 60 to 70 persons who were gathered for cocktails and cockfighting at Inglecress, a rolling white-fenced estate in Albemarle County. At the time the sheriff sald that the "inexperienced" deputy had worked on the case on his own time, had been out of uniform on the raid and had been outside the part of Albemarie County assigned to him. More-over, "hetre is a serious question in my mind whether the violation occurred," the the sheriff said.

Nowarrants had been issued for the raid and the sheriff reportedly was not informed that it was being being planned.

Pat Wechsler, a young woman reporter for the Chariottesville Daily Progess, wrote an article about the wrote an article about the raid and was suspended for days, officially for working unauthorized overtime and wearing blue jeans on assignment. The article had been "censored" before publication, according to staff members on the newspaper, but it bers on the newspaper, but it did contain the names of those arrested. Thomas Worrell, one of the owners of the Daily Progress had attended the cockfight but he was not charged.

The newspaper said that the disciplining of the reporter was not related to the cockfight article. The Daily Progress carried a full ac-count today of yesterday's count hearing.

But it was the decision yesterday by Judge Eaton Brooks, a substitute on the bench of the Albemarie County District Court, that kept the controversy alive.

A week ago, lawyrs for the 11 prominent defendants ar-gued forcefully that the evi-dence obtained by the police in the cockfight raid - a champagne-filled silver cur awarded to the owner of a winning cock, together with an onlooker's photograph of the victor drinking from it had been illegally seized. Judge Brooks said that he would take their motions to dismissed the charges under

Unexpected Ruling
His unexpected ruling yesterday was that the Virginia had held that the Admentment to the United States Constitution, which forbids warrantless searches and seizures, applies to private homes but not to outbuildings, such as the occkrighting barn at Ingle-cress Farm. Defense lawyers are regarded as certain to appeal the ruling.

The cockfighting has had to many Southern gothic overtones that last week Judge Brooks himself ob-served that many here had viewed the case with "amuse

It's Onward and Uptown For Hebrew Publishing

The Hebrew Publishing Company has been going strong—also sometimes weak for 75 years. Come fall it will leave its native Lower East Side and move uptown, leaving behind its architectural mishmash at the corner of Delancey and Allen Streets. Once this building was the Bank of United States, and that name is still legible behind the facade's ante-diluvian grime. Above the name are four great Corin-thian columns. Since everything is more or less backward in a company that spe-cializes in Yiddish and Hebrew, the building supports the columns instead of the Downstairs is the company's bookstore, more or less seif-supporting. The line has been expanded to include such ritual fringe benefits as cassettes of Hebrew popular music and a line of Israeli traffic signs. An investor has bought the building, his plans mysterious. But there is no mystery about what the Rebrew Publishing Company plans. It has leased space for the book-store at 314 Grant Street, and its main business—publishing will move to mid-town. Lawrence Werbel, the president, is looking for space near a kosher restau-

"Milchik or flayshik [dairy or meat]," he said. "That particular I'm not. I'm desperate."

Let the giants—the Simons and the Schusters, the Shockens and the Steins-tremble. The Hebrew Publishing Company is flexing its muscles, which is the least it will have to do to pick itself up from the detritus of 75 years.

Employees preparing to move are discovering a matchmaker's ransom in classics-Yiddish translations of Chekhov, Mark Twain, Jules Verne—that no one wants. They also found Uncle Tom's Cabin in Yiddish, by Harriet Bitsher Stov, and sheet music for every minor key. One song is a Yiddish lament ("A Watery Grave") for the Titanic, and there is the very original score for "King Lear" (in the king's Yiddish).

The Lower East Side is a fine place for improving on Shakespeare, but an incon-venient place to manage a business, let alone a tune. "For anyone to come to see us means a special trip," said David M. L. Olivestone, the company's editor.

Mr. Werbel sees the move as one from past to present. as one from past to present. He is a great-grandson of the founder, Joseph L. Werbel-owsky, one of four bookbusiness when Jewish immigrants were thick on the Lower East Side ground, and thin in the pocket.

I Stole a Horse?

"My grandparents weren't horse-thieves," Mr. Werbel said, "but they did steal copy-rights all over Europe." (The minutes of the first board meeting in 1901 show the board split 5 to 1 in favor of buying a horse.)

Mr. Werbel is a new breed, who speaks Semitic languages only in the future perfect. To learn Hebrew, he is attend-ing an intensive course at a fashionable academy on Park Avenue. He has been going for a year, and is already in the beginner's class.

When his father died two years ago, he dutifully assumed the challenge of the presidency, attentive to the demands of tradition and moderative He kept the photomodernity. He kept the photograph of Joseph Warbelow-

Bills used to be scratched out by pen in Yiddish; now they clatter from a regular billing machine that knows even less Yiddish than Mr. Werbel.

Next to bills, the principal stock in trade is orthodox religious literature, especially when translated and edited by Philip Birnbaum, one of the most obscure best-selling authors, deep in learning and decades. There is also a venerable line in Hebrew textbooks. "If the Board of Education will pay its bills," said Mr. Werbel, "we'll be glad to continue."

A visitor recently asked Mr. Werbel, who never remainders a book, what the worst-sellers were. I could name a hundred," he replied.
Under the sands of timeless dust are pristine relics.
"The Citizen" is a paperback preparation for naturalization with questions such as:

"For how long is a United States Senator elected?" Another treasure is an 1874 Jewish catechism - "Source of Salvation"-published by a predecessor company. Rosenbaum & Werbelowsky. Sample: "What are the consequences of an inactive life? The consequences of an inactive life are disease, poverty, and misery."

The "Yiddish-English Letter Writer" includes patterns for affairs of business ("Dear Mr. Ourbach . . . We are now in the market for linens . . . ") and of the heart ("Dear Marjorie, I am writing to you because the burning love which is consuming my heart must find some expression.") Occasional Certificates

A catalogue offers bar mitzvak cartificates, birth certificates, book plates (in honor of) and book plates (in memory of). The year Mr. Werbel took over, the company published two new books, this year it will publish 18. He has doubled its retail branches by opening a summer book store in Woodbourne, in the heart of the Catskills' Jewish bungalow district.

Negotiations are under way for a subsidiary in Israel and another in Loudon. "We're becoming a multi-national giant," Mr. Werbel said. "I can see Philip and Elizabeth in bed at night, petrified. Hebrew Publishing Company about to take over the Commonwealth!"

Tomorrow, the world, more or less. Mr. Werbel's aunts own about 70 percent of the stock and their aim is clear. "If I ever start losing money," he said, "Til down faster than the Titanic."

Court Halts Dam Project As Peril to Fish Species

CINCINNATI, July 31 (AP)— A Federal appeals court, con-cerned about the fate of a species of tiny fish, has halted the construction of a $100 mil-

The Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit issued a temporary injunction Wednesday against the Tellico Dam project on the Little Tennessee River in Tennessee. The court ordered an October hearing to examine arguments that the dam would cause the extinction of the fish, called the snail darter, which feeds on snails.

The Tennessee Valley Authority, which is building the dam, opposed the injunction, saying a halt in construction would cost T.V.A. $1 million.

Opera: A Fine 'Tristan und Isolde'

Mr. Everding and Mr. Svo-boda joined forces for the memorable "Tristan und Isolde" at the Metropolitan Opera several years ago. It was one of the last productions of the Rudolf Bing regime, and ooe of the best. The 'Tristan' that Mr. Everding and Mr. Symbode here ing and Mr. Svoboda have created for Bayreuth has a few points in common with the Metropolitan production, but is nowhere near as spec-tacular. It is quiet, more stylized, with a much greater stress oo the poetic elemeots.

Each act has a sort of cur-tain made of metal wires that breaks up light. Thus the scenery seen behind the cur-tain has a pointillistic quality. The last act, for instance, has the usual battlements, behind which, through the screen, is seen the suggestion of a large tree, in full bloom,

In the second act, there is is a stylized forest and an equally stylized tower. When the two lovers start their "O sink hernieder," the stage darkers, and they are two faint blobs of light lost in their own universe of night. their own universe of night. This is a remarkably handsome, sensitive production of the great opera. There is not a cheap or false touch to it.

Catarina Ligendza, the Isolde, is a famous international singer, but the Tristan, a Bulgarian tenor named Spaf Wenkoff, was new. He Spaf Wenkoff, was new. He is a rather short man, though well: huilt, and he has a strong, rather thick voice that suggests a pushed-up baritone. The range in the top-register appears to be limited and Mr. Wenkoff did a certain amount of forcing. On the other hand, considering the dearth of heldeotenors, there was much to admire in his singing. He competently went through most of the role, his low ootes were solemnly placed, and his scale was even. Tristant is such a freakish role that one must hear Mr. Wenkoff in other sides of the repertory before passing full jodgment oo his voice, but he is an interesting new

Miss Ligeodza, too, is in-teresting. The Swedish so-prano, an attractive woman and a reliable actress, can produce an impressive amount of well-controlled sound. The cast was full of fine singers. Nobody around to-day can sing the Brangaene "Warning" more beautifully than Yvonne Minton. NEW EASY RIDERS BIGGER JAZZ BAND

Bill Bissonette Expands the Group to Eight Pieces

Bill Bissonette's Easy Riders azz Band, a New Orleansoriented group that flourished Connecticut in the 1960's un-Mr. Bissonette moved to California in 1968, was a loud, lusty, rought-hewn group that often seemed more concerned with physical involvement than with fine musical points. A new version of the Easy Riders, formed last fell by Mr. Bissonette following his return to Connecticut, made its first appearance in a New York club Friday evening at Storyville, 58th Street and Madison Avenue and proved to be a very legiti-mate descendant of the earlier Easy Riders.

The new group has been ex-pended from the former six pieces to eight because Mr. issonette, a trombonist, says he wanted to get away from simply copying the groups of veteran New Orleans musicians who are now in the twilights of their careers, to achieve the higher careers, to achieve the highers band sound that two trumpets, two saxophones and a trombone might provide and to move into areas that the New Orleans veterans might now be exploring if they were younger.

What he has at the moment what he has at the momenty is a boisterous, noisy, frequently clumsy band that, in some degree, makes up in energy and enthusiasm for what it lacks in polish or discipline. The repertory remains standard New Orleans—marches, hymns, hlues and pre-World War II pop tunes and pre-Wo —hirt the five-horn ensemble often has a swing band attack rather than the lighter inter-weaving of the typical three-changed much over the last few the Watsons' shows, is also an man New Orleans front line.

Dance: New 'Sylphide'

Eric Bruhn Restages the Classic for Ballet Theater Production

The Romantic Danish choreographer August Bournonville saw the stuff of magic in a commonplace brace of characters like Effic and James. His triumph is in making us see that magic as well in "La Sylphide," which details their comings and goings along with some mysterious highland creatures like Madge and the Sylphide herself. Eleanor d'Antiono was the sprite and Fernando Bujones the benighted Scotsman Friday evening in American Ballet Theater's production of the classic at the New York State Theater.
"La Sylphide" is one of the most perfect ballets of the Romantic period; though scanty in length it has packed a whole world into its compass. Erik Brahn re-staged the production and has, in general, opened it up to a grander scale than the traditional one maintained by the Royal Danish Ballet. The older production was an in-timate tragedy, while this one strives for a larger, bolder impact. It was to this enlarged scale that both enlarged scale that both principals were attracted.

Miss D'Antuono was more coquettish than elfin in her rapid shifts between giee and chagrin. Her approach to

James was a shade more purposeful and less childlike as she beguiled his imagination. That lack of childlike innocense, however, removed something essential from the role. Mr. Bujones, who radiates pleasure at conquer-ing technical difficulties, snared speciacularly through this Act I variation and his pas-de-deux with Miss d'Antuono in the glen. But even as one enjoyed his skill, there was a sense of lost restraint that is essential to Bournonville. It was a performance of demonstrable strengths and also some mis-witch Madge was evilly adept. His glare radiated malevolence and his second, "the double-take" reading of Effie's palm was a masterly stroke of timing. John Prinz, as Gurn, played the role with less of a bumpkin charac-terization than is usual and was effective. Marianna Tcherkassky's Effie was touchingly distraught. The lighting was somewhat muddy and dim throughout, lending more mystery than was needed to the events on

Ocean Liner Passengers Acquire Taste for Wine

By WERNER BAMBERGER is observing its 187th birthday today.

Wine and water, as a rule, do not mix, except on ocean pleasure cruises, where appreciation of wine is a growing factor in enoiving life in the grand manner. One authority on this development is Douglas MacNeill, the leading wine steward aboard the Cunard liner Queen Elizabeth 2.

In a recent interview, Mr. MacNeill, whose experience at decanting and dispensing some of the world's finest wines goes back to the days of the old Queens of the sea, said, "We definitely sell more wine now than we did on the old Queens." .

And those who consume it, he added, appear to be more knowledgeable in their tastes. Even though wines aboard a passenger liner are considerably cheaper than at a good land-based restaurant averaging around retail prices at the local wine emporium-inflation has left its mark on ship's wine lists. On the QueeElizabeth today, a oottle of Dom Perignon champagne, which cost $10.50 several years ago, oow commands $25. And a bottle of Chateau Lafite, formerly priced at $11.20, now sets lovers of vintage Bordeaux back to the tune of

Hamphrey Would Sell Nutrition by Billboard

WASHINGTON, July 31 (AP)—Perhaps the Govern-ment should sell nutrition the way Burma Shave used to sell shaving soap, Senator Hubert H. Humphrey, Democrat of Minnesota, says.

At a hearing Tuesday, Fed eral bealth officials stressed the need to encourage Americans to take more interest in nutritional eating habits.

Mr. Humphrey said that the Pentagon spent millions of dollars for roadside advertising in its search for enistees and asked why should billboards not tell people that eating right could help them to live longer?

Who Will Play Rhett and Scarlett In 'GWTW, Continued'?

Two Hollywood producers are now planning a sequel to the 1939 classic "Gone With the Wind."

Everyone Else Does It More Poorly,' Says the First Tevye

With Zero Mostel once again pulling his weathered milkcart, "Fiddler on the Roof" is returning from its diaspora. Sixteen years after opening in New York, and four years after closing, the legendary musical is on its

At the moment, it is stopping at the Kennedy Center, where each night capacity audiences laugh and cry over the poignant lives of Tevve the milkman, his wife and daughters, and the impoverished Jewish community of the village called Anatevka in Czarist Russia.

By now the story, based on the work of Sholom Aleichem is familiar to almost everyone. Tevye's tragedy is that he lived in tumultuous times, in which his childreo reject his authority and the Czar will not let his people alone. The denouement of "Fiddler" find Tevye's family, like all the Jews of Anatevka, spread to the winds. Mostel created the role of Tevve, for which he won a Tony, and played it for more than a year in New York. "Fiddler" went on to have the longest run in Broadway history, and to play in 32 countries in 16 languages Last June, Mostel picked up Tevye in a new summer stock production in Los Angeles. Having already played Denver and St. Louis, he will lead the Anatevkans onward Toronto, Philadelphia, Chicago, Detroit, Boston and Miami. Current plans are to have "Fiddier" climax its tour on Broadway in December with a run of 16 weeks.

Mostel is as irrepressible as ever. While he is, of course, a bit of the milkman envisaged by Jerome Robbins, the original director of the show, he is, more than anyone, Zero the charismatic —a man of huge talent, a Yiddish scholar, a shtetl fugitive himself, an incurable scenestealer.

With sagging jowls and throbbing paunch, Mostel still brings the zaniness of a young nightclub comic to the puzzled, reverent charac- Continued on Page 5

ter whose world is collapsing around him. Mostel says he has matured in the part, yet fiercely denies that Tevye could be anyone but him.

"If you read Sholom Aleichem," says Mostel, his eyes piercing like lances, "you know there is only one way to interpret this character. I made Tevye. Every movement I put in they continued to use. Therefore, everyone else can only do it more poorly. The others didn't dance. They didn't sing. They didn't tear themselves apart the way I do every night. Do I look as if I'm stale? Do I look as if Tm not giving everything I have to the part? I have to do it my way, but it's the only way to do it."

Interviewing Zero Mostel is not unlike watching him on the stage. He twists his plasmaces, and untwists it into ridiculous toothy grins. He runs his fingers through his untidy black beard, then reaches down to grab a handful of salad. He makes funny chirps, gurgles and roars. He clearly measures an interview not by his success in ow, at the height of the outdoor-music season, may be a good time to point out that most outdoor music is a fraud. A comparatively genial and harmless fraud, as frauds go, but not to be excused for that. Outdoor music means amplification, and amplification means invariably that you the listener are having the wool pulled over your ears. Take a recent, unusually blatant example, which came to notice at the opening concert of Philadelphia's new 10,000-seat Robio Hood Dell West amphitheater. Brahms's Double Concerto was being performed, with each of the soloists playing into his own microphone, ostensibly to amplify the sound for the benefit of the thousands outside the covered pavilion itself.

It immediately became obvious that one of the soloists, a great name in music a generation ago, either had lost his touch or was having a worse night than this listener can ever recall a major performer suffering through. When the playing became particularly execrable, the sound engineer evidently would simply tune him out by turning down one microphone and turning up the other, which made the play-

COMEDY, ITALIAN STYLE - "My Friends" opeoed at the 68th Street Playhouse last week to fine reviews. Mario Monicelli took over the direction of the movie after the death of Pietro Germi who made "Divorca-Italian Style." The film is about foor middle-aged men (Ugo Tognaz-zi, Gastone Moshin, Philippa Noiret, Duilio Del Prete) whose lives are going nowhere and whose fulfillment comes through their camaraderie. They collaborate on practical jokes, more or lass elaborate - obscene phone calls, charades, a slap in the face to the passengers on a departing train-possibly as a way of gatting evan for the prac-tical joke they feel that life bas played

To Laugh or Not to Laugh Is the Question of 'Measure for Measure'

By MARK RASMUSSEN

Among Shakespeare critics and scholars, "Measure for Measure" is known discreetly as a "problem" comedy. More directly, Shakespeare's last and thorniest comic work, which is due to open at the Delacorte Theater in Central Park on August 4, might be called a problem child. Indeed, John Pasquin, the young director of the new production, sighs with almost parental weariness when asked to discuss the play. "It's almost too complicated," he says, referring to the forthcoming production which will feature Sam Waterston, Meryl Streep and John Cazale.

Difficult offspring are often the most interesting. The poet Coleridge found "Measure for Measure" the "most painful" of Shakespeare's works; surely it is the most starkly and relentlessly questioning. Human conflicts, social issues and ethical dilemmas are confronted head-on and in realistic terms. Gone is the fantasy and airiness of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" or "As You Like It" -and the elevating nobility of "King Lear" is just as re-

The play plots a collision course between non-willed characters. For mysterious reasons, Duke Vincentio of Vienna has stepped down from office, appointing as a stand-in his virtuous-seezing deputy, Angelo. As magistrate, Angelo immediately cracks down on all offenders with a neurotic, inhuman zeal. Among his victims is one Claudio, whom Angelo condemns to death for making his fiancee pregnant.

Isabel, Claudio's sister and a novitiate, goes to Angelo to plead for har hrother's life. The scene between suppliant and judge is one of Shakespeare's masterpieces. At first Isabel holds back, reluctant to plead forgiveness for what she regards as an abhorrent sin. But sisterly love and a passion for justice ignite her eloquence and ardor. Angelo is felled, by both her logic and beauty, and, in a second interview, he offers Claudio's freedom if Isabel will sleep with bim. Isabel returns to ber brother and tells him to prepare him self for death: "more than our brother is our chastity."

Claudio begs his sister to abandon principle to save him. Both brother and sister come close to hysteria. By the play's midpoint, each of the three focal characters is at the edge of collapse. Now the Duke steps in.

Moving about the grey, corrupt world of Vienna disguised as a friar, he masterminds an elaborate plot which will lead to a happy ending. In the final scene of judgment, Angelo's guilt is exposed, and he is forced to marry his jilted fiancee, Mariana; Claudio is rejoined with his lover; and Isabel becomes petrothed to the Duke. And with that harmonious ending lies the chief problem of "Measure for Measure."

Mark Rasmussen is a freelance writer whn lives in New York City.

Tha first half of the play probes serious questions with a flerce intellectual drive; the latter half shows us a peripatetic Duke shifting bodies around like an anxious windowdresser as he tries to set up a grand finale, Shakespeare's conclusion a dramatic lapse? Or is the play's contrived ending itself an important part of what he wants to say? How to carry off that ending, and what significance to give it, is of course the key problem that faces a director of "Measure for Measure." Pasquin, light-haired, bearded, with a soft but urgent manner, begins a discussion of the play by pushing aside all questions about his own background. "I don't even let them run a bio in the program," he insists. Pasquin won an Ohie for his 1973 picnic. What I've done is to set up a smaller stage area within the stage, so that we can at least focus in on the intimate encounters, and then let the group scenes

With the work itself, the chief difficulty is that second half. The early confrontations play themselves, but after their conflict and poetry, the audience has to feel let down when the level of excitement drops as the Duke steps in. There are certain things the director can do. You push the comedy, you concentrate on the relation of the Duke and Isabel as they plot the ending together, and you rely a lot on the charm of the actor who plays the Duke. He really has to hold the stage.

"The other problem you face-and it's related-is an preduction Michael Weller's play "Moonchildren" about the college generation of the 1960s. But, he says. "Since I did Moonchildren" my ideas and feelings about the theater have changed tremendously. I don't want to be known by what happened before. How content I am and bow upset I am will. appear in my work."

Turning to "Measure for Measure." Pasquin says, "It's about corruption, about sexual chaos, about the decay of a city. In that sense, I'm glad to be doing it at the Delacorte, with the New York skyline as our backdrop. That should work well. The set itself is a steel construct. I tried for a look that was cold, city-like, and that emphasized its own theatri-

The Delacorte does posa problems, though. That stage is so big, and this is an intimate play. We've got an audience that wants spectacle, wants to have a good time, smoke a joint, have a mmense difficulty of tone. At times in this play there's a very real question whether what we see should make us laugh or make us sweat. The clesest thing to it is a program like 'Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman, where you have an incident that can be very funny one moment, and then two seconds later it's just awful. Your perspective can totally snift."

Precisely because it unsettles the audience, Pasquin feels that the disjunction of pace and tone in this play Shakespears's themes. "A fundamental part of the experience of "Measure for Measure' is that you never know quite where you stand. The play is ambiguous about its motives, and often it's contradictory about its characters. I don't want to back away from that. I've gone out of my way to make sure there are no good guys and no bad guys in this production. Angelo isn't evil; he's repressed, and this play is about the horror of his discovering just how much he's pushed aside. Isabel is glorious, but she's also a lot like him-she wants to run away from herself by becoming a nun. The Duke in this play behaves like God, but he has important human failings as

"That's the wonderful thing about the play-that the characters in it are so complex. We spent roughly twothirds of our rehearsal time talking out our options. The actors would improvise a scene, first one way and then another. We might run through a comic scene slapstick style once, and the next time play it very serious. And once you've played a scene several ways, even if finally some of the various layers get dropped, the colors will come out. It tends to make things fuller, more complex.

"That's important because this play wants to defeat the audience's expectations. thwart its snap judgments. Each of its characters reveals a side of himself that neither he nor the audience suspects is there. Of course, you can't entirely avoid the audience's urge to judge quickly. But by presenting the characters fully, with all their inconsistencies. I feel I can do a lot to frustrate that urge."

Pasquin's approach does not sound revolutionary. But in fact the tendency of many directors of "Measure for Measure" has been to idealize its characters, to weed Inconsistencies out. So Isabel becomes either a saint or a harpy-and when on occasion the lordly Vincentio acts ill-tempered, directors excise the lines as a dramatic lapse. Often it is felt that a realistic portrayal of the characters will only compound the perilous imbalance between the human tensions of the play's first part and the embroidered resolution of its second. Pasquin, who has directed a nearly uncut text, believes that the ambiguities, the conflicting motives of the characters, are exactly what give body to the play's ordered conclusion.

"To me, the whole play is about reaching self-knowl-Continued on Poge 10

ne comes out of the new all-hlack version of "Guya and Dolls" singing the songs and singing the praises of Frank Loesser. Is there a richer, more harmonious and more American score in the modern musical theater? Was there a composer-lyricist more adept at integrating words, usic and character? Songs not only flow out of the Abe Bur-Swerling book but they flow into one another. For example, "Marry the Man Today," the long-engaged Adelaide and alvation Army Sarah weave their individual romantic lamits into a universal tapestry about the plight of women the hands of men.

The success of this "Guys and Dolls" (a success despite ie fact that the sets are flimsy the choreography sparse, e production seemingly more geared to quick out-of-town avel than to the long Broadway residency the musical early merits) makes one wonder about the impact of race

Perhaps the most surprising conclusion about Loesser's core, as performed at the Broadway Theater, is that it has definite line of black sensibility and thythm. When Ken age, in his smashing Broadway debut as Nicely-Nicely hinson, swings into "Sit Down, You're Rockin' the Boat," se number becomes a hand-clapping tambourine-slapping ospel song. What once was a showstopper is now a soulopper (two deserved encores on opening night) that almost diterates the memory of the seemingly unforgettable Stubby aye in the original 1950 Broadway production.

"Sit Down" is the clearest, although not the only, cample of the blackness that has been discovered within Guys and Dolls"-largely, one assumes, by director-choreorapher Billy Wilson. "A Bushel and a Peck" becomes a downme, cotton-pickin' country tune, "If I Were a Bell," sung may Ernestine Jackson (as Sarah) is given a funky beat. "My ime of Day," as crooned by James Randolph (as Sky

• • ory turns black. Mindy's cheesecake is now apple pie and cream. Adelaide retains her nasality, but, being black, ses her New York accent. The new tone is accentuated in recters slap hands). Certainly, the milieu—compulsive betrs, sidewalk sharpies, storefront salvation centers—is as

demic to blacks as it is to whites. Nathan Detroit, that charming rascal first personified stage by Sam Lavene (and later by the very different ank Sinatra in the Lovie version) is now enacted by Robert tillaume, deadoon and cirhanded, somewhat in the manner Bill: Cosby In fact, there were montents as I watched the fly amusing Mr. Guillaume and the tall, stalwart Mr. ndolph out-play the gemblers from Chicago that I was ninded of those Cosby-Sidney Poitier movie comedies. This regree likelys and Dolls" is a musical "Let's Do It Again Uptown turday Night." As in those movies, the Cosby character steals the sbow. e securingly secondary comedy leads, Mr. Guillaume and ligence behind Adelaide's guilibility; she makes this lady's ennousiess enormously endearing. And Mr. Guillaume's ual con-man is a perfect match. Unavoidably, the romanleads, Mr. Randolph and Miss Jackson, finish second. In cases, it is the singing (their voices are good) more than characters that we may remember, which of course, has ays been true of "Guys and Dolls." The crucial question is whether a play should be cast rely with black performers or with a mixed company. former can seem racist if there is no artistic validity for switch in color. Then its only justification is to give rity actors employment. The mixed company makes far sense, but there are those special cases, such as "Guys Dolls," and there are other, possibly adaptable candidates, as "Pal Joey" and "How to Succeed in Business Without ly Trying." There's no need to limit such productions to musicals with urban backgrounds. One could imagine, municie, a black "Carousel" with a Southern background. to are times when a black company can itself act as a iterpretation of a show.

Guillaume and Donaldson in "Guys and Dolls"-- "a success."

There are, of course, many musicals that would be distorted if played by all-black companies-for example. "My Fair Lady" and "Oklahoma!" In each case, the atmosphere is essential to the show. Musicals embedded in a specific ethnic or national landscape are difficult, if not impossible, to translate. Some shows are simply more indigenous than othersand that is as true of black shows as it is of white shows. What would be the point of doing a white "Raisin" or "Ain't Supposed to Die a Natural Death"?

In the Circle in the Square production of "Death of a Salesman," the fact that the neighbors of Willy Loman were black was sociologically jolting, considering the time and place of the play. On the other hand, several seasons ago, Center Stage in Baltimore presented an all-black "Death of Salesman," which proved that Willy could be black, that his drive to be liked could be viewed from a black perspective as a quest for acceptance and assimilation. "Salesman," like "Guys and Dolls," is relevant to the black experience, wherehe Cherry Orchard." production at the Public Theater, seemed irrelevant,

In almost all cases, the healthiest approach is the integrated company. Pearl Bailey's "Hello, Dolly" would have made much more sense if the production had not been all black. We kept wondering what all those blacks were doing in Yonkers at that time. Yet a black Dolly Levi is imaginable, if she has the force of personality of a Pearl Bailey. "Hello, Dolly" is about its star's force of personality, whether that star is Miss Bailey or Carol Channing. There is no reason why a strong black performer could not play "Gypsy" or Sally Bowles in "Cabaret." If the King of Siam could be played by Yul Brynner, why could the role not also be played by a black man? Some years ago I saw Godfrey Cambridge do the Zero Mostel role in an otherwise white production of "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum." Having one black slave added an edge of irony to the musical. Actually, the further a show is from contemporary society, the easier it is to make a switch in color.

Just as black actors move with relative freedom in the classics-James Earl Jones has played Lear and Claudius, as well as Othello-increasingly, there's more opportunity for them to perform freely in American musicals. It is a position that is being recognized by many of those who are creating musicals today. "A Chorus Line" bas no color line. Ben Vercen had the original lead in "Pippin," a show about France in the time of Charlemagne. Were Frank Loesser alive and writing today, one assumes that his musicals would be cast without regard to color. But black or whiteor black and white-it is a tremendous pleasure to have "Guys and Dolls" back on Broadway.

"I was raised on Sholom Aleichem," be says. "I read his stories in Yiddish over and over again. They weren't the same in a translation. When Joseph Stein, the writer, brought the script to me, he said he knew Yiddish but he didn't. He didn't have as deep an understanding of the lives he was writing about as I did."

Mostel said it was he who persuaded "them" to have all the other Jewish characters in the play follow the orthodox tradition of kissing the Mezuzah with the fingers each time they passed through a doorway on the Mostel says the original producers of the play were convinced that if they weren't careful, "Fiddler" would appeal only to Jewish audiences, and so they made changes in the script. In the original story, for example, Sholom Aleichem poked fun at a priest and made the non-Jewish constable a rather vicious fellow. In the Broadway show, the priest was dropped and the constable was turned into an innocuous character. When he finished telling the story, Mostel shrugged his huge shoulders and contorted his face into a perplexed ex-

While be pursues his one-way dialogue, he shakes his arm, wrings his sleeve and drips milk on his shoes. The routine could easily become slapstick, but Mostel does it with remarkable subtlety. He says every other actor to play Tevye has tried to duplicate his success in this scene, but none has succeeded.

'Everyone Else Does It

Since leaving "Fiddler" a decade ago, Mostel bas acted in a succession of movies and plays and was even awarded an honorary doctorate in literature by Middleoury College. But, though he has prospered, his career has scarcely soared; several of the films he made abroad have failed to gain distribution. He once quipped "I'm the king of the unreleased movies." Two years ago, he was back on Broadway in "Ulysses in Nighttown," which he had triumphed in years ago Off Broadway, but this time the majority of the critics were cool, and the production quickly closed. "My motto is upward and downward," he says, laughing in delight at self deprecating little ioke.

At 61, however, Mostel is not contemplating a slowdown. He was in an automobile accident in 1960, which severely injured one of his legs, and he still sleeps with it elevated to keep down the swelling, But, after watching bim dance and prance across the stage for nearly three hours in "Fiddler," an audience could hardly be hlamed for rejecting his description of himself as a cripple.

Mostel boasts a little of his rigorous self-discipline. Even on the road, he works out every day on the Exercycle he keeps in his hotel room. He smokes moderately and normally limits his drinking to a beer in the evening after Tetye is Zero, that figures.

the theater. He says he eats lightly, though one who has scared lunch with him might find the evidence equivocal. When Mostel says he is in good shape, however, he means it. He growls noisily at any suggestion to the contrary, as if the wearing-looking face and roly-poly belly are merely stage props be has acquired, the better to play Tavye.

Mostel is now under contract for a six-month run of "Ficoler." though he might be persuaded to extend his Broadway engagement. He says he recently turned down an offer from David Merrick to play the lead in a new musical, "The Baker's Wife," though he won't say why. Instead, he plans to be on Broadway next spring as Shylock in "The Merchant," Arrold Wesker's variation on "The Merchant of Venice." And next month, the actoronce a casualty of McCarthyism-will be seen as a blacklist victim in Martin Ritt's film, "The Front," starring Woody Allen.

One thing which is certain, according to Mostel, is that this is his farewell performance as Tevye. In saving this. he makes it sound not only as if he is through with "Fiddier." but that Tevve, too. ""! " into retirement. If

In the days of vandeville. old troupers used to say, "Any place outside of New York is Bridgeport." And today, the big city still carries that importance. It is the proving ground, the only place that counts in terms of making a reputation. But if the potential rewards are still great the costs are excruciatingly high so high as to prompt me to wonder if my returning to New York this week is a sign of masochism, stupidity, or the result of some vague illusion. When my company—the Nikolais Dance Theater opens Tuesday night at the Beacon Theater for a twoweek cun, I will be a trembling mass of regret, enger, fear and self-questioning wondering why I go through the torture. For this adventure. I will have to pay a high price-not only in emotional stress, but in cold cash.

It has become so expensive for my 10-member company to appear in New York that the Big Apple looks more and more like the forbidden fruit. Two years ago when we performed at the Lyceum Theater to sold-out houses, the Murray Louis company and mine, together, in four weeks lost $75,000. Shortly thereafter, Martha Graham had an even greater loss on Broad-__ $125,000 in three weeks. Later, Miss Graham called on Rudolf Nureyev and Margot Fonteyn to help her recoup her losses by appearing at a special benefit performance. I thought of pleading with the Virgin Mary to come to my aid; she would have looked fabulous levitating in one of my multimedia slides. Ever since the financial flasco at the Lyceum, we have had a cash-flow problem common to most organizations such as ours.

This past February, my company was scheduled to return to Broadway for a run at the Uris. But we had to cancel the eogagement because of the unrealistic demands of the musicians' union (Local 802). I use electronic music, so there was no need for live musicians. Nevertheless, the union insisted that I pay 24 musicians for not playing. "What a great idea," I thought. "Perhaps I should pay a dozen dancers not to dance."

Alwin Nikolais is director of the Nikolais Dance Theater.

"It has become so expensive for my company to appear here that the Big Apple looks more and more like forbidden fruit." (Alwin Nikolais)

"Not to do" is a recurring theme on Broadway. It applies to much besides the musicians. The theory is that you pay four people at the theater to do what two can do. Moreover, the system is so complex that a dance company has to hire a professional arranger of not-doers just to organize the whole process. He's called a production manager. Fortunately, the system has not yet reached the point of paying the production manager not to production-manage. Perhaps ultimately I can be paid not to create theater pieces. Then we could pay critics not to review and pay audiences to stay home. It would be an excellent exercise in selfdestruct. Meanwhile, ooe has to raise funds to finance the reality of "Not to do."

I'd like to point out that there is another expensive aspect to this horreodous process of keeping a company afloat. I still can recall when I could create directly without requiring a bureaucracy to surround my every function. But all this has changed. My company is now an institution-a tax-exempt foundation—so the need for office space and staff exceeds my own studio space and number of performers. It's like an iceberg turned unside down. This is because the United States has become very concerned about the artist. So to satisfy the bureaocracy involved in this concern - the Internal Revenue Service, the National Endowment for the Arts, State Arts Councils-and to induce people of wealth to give tax-deductible funds to the artist, a company such as mine needs an executive director to oversee the sysform 2 Board and a fund-raiser. As a result, the artist is forced to change his whole life style. Not only is his creative time greatly diminished, but his focus and energies are diverted. He needs to learn what foundations or agencies give money for what, and then there is snother headache learning to write proposals. In addition, one must learn tem, office help, someone to

to distinguish among various fund-giving agencies. The most efficient ones are in government - the National Endowment for the Arts and the New York State Council on the Arts. The most erasperating ones to deal with are most huge private foundations—except for the Melion Foundation, which recently delighted all of us with its series of grants to modern dance. This they did simply, with no bullsbaloo and minimal courtship, but this was indeed unique. Outside of government grants, what the Mellon Foundation did was, probably, the only intelligent, no-nonsense approach I have ever known. With other funding sources, I have ex-perienced years of maddening exasperation. I believe that most modern dance companies would like to the foundations give their vast sums to the government for disbursement for the government has proven itself far more compe-

Getting back to the problems of performing in New York, I cannot help but contrast the hassies here with the red-carpet welcome that greets my company when we tour abroad. Hamburg, Berlin, Paris and Mexico City have offered me permanent homes in first-rate facilities. (The French Minister of Culture has also offered me an apartment in the Louvre if I would come to Paris.)

But I have no illusions about greener pastures overseas. Despite the temptations abroad, my own temperament prevents my divorcing myself from New York, no matter how great the difficulties here. The next time I plan a season in the big city, though, I hope I can do it with my mind free of the "normal" madness—theater shenanigans, union wheeling and dealing, financial disaster-that can take years

Ballet Theater stalwarts, they have probably had as individual performances to New York, if not more, than before. Shar dancers can be intrusive, but they are interest to which and they can help a company grow.

When Rudolf Nureyev first joined the Royal Ballet Mind of "permanent guest extist" at Covent Garden. was considerable unhappiness within the company's manks. In the case of the late David Bink, who had noted to being Margot Fontsyn's permanent pe or arrivel seemed a personal tragedy and cor blighted Blat's subsequent career. But on the Nursey's sugargement was the best thing that could have happened to the Royal Ballet. It opened up the dancing in a whole new way—and the reason why the Ballet men dance so much better than they did, is much due to the rivalry and encouragement offered h

In the case of the National Ballet of Canada wit now at the Metropolitan Opera House, we see an a extreme example of size consciousness, for the National of Canada is here simply and solely because Nureyev to dance with it. Without Nureyev—or, say, Barysholko company would not be viable at the Metropolitan House, any more than the Australian Ballet could brought "The Merry Widow" to New York the other without Fonteyo. The test of this is simple enough. years ago when Nureyev was injured, a whole Ca season at Washington's Kannedy Center had to be ca

The dependence of the National Ballet of Canada or artists has been criticized. A young Canadian critic Fraser, in these pages a year or so ago reported wide unhappiness among dancers being treated almost as a The startled and furious response from members of th pany-both men and women-was immediate. They a their love for Nureyev and their belief that he wa an important job for the company.

Certainly Nureyev has done a great deal to m Canadians an internationally recognizzed company; yet Canadians already know to their cost, too much deper on guest artists can be damaging. This season in the company was relying very heavily on the press Barysinikov to sell out its season. Unfortunately, nikov was injured, ticket money had to be returne eventually the season was only narrowly saved by the engagement of two other superstars, Fernando Bujon Peter Martins.

Yet, on the whole I a mtotally convinced that gue: in ballet, rather as in opera, are a good thing. Of we need to see stars like Caria Fracci, and her own cothe ballet company from La Scala, Milan, is hardly to come here. It was marvelous to glimpse her the night in the last act of "The Sleeping Beauty" for the dians; it showed a new, more crystalline Fracci, rathe the Romantic ballerina we have always known in th and this, in itself, was valuable.

Sometimes dancers do not like competition on the torf. Everyone can understand that. It is said that a Antoinette Sibley was less than warmly welcoming to : Makarova when Makarova was made a permanent gues with the Royal Ballet and also took over Sibley's own r Anthony Dowell But Sibley-who is also now openin a more internationally based career—will be the based or for it, and London gets to see regularly both Sibir and London gets to see regularly better the see regularly better the see regularly better Makaroya.

The answer for dancers upset by the increasing ere ments that are being made by this new set of travels, stars is not to bleat about them but to try to for Not so long ago every opera house in the world own ensemble company. A few really great singers for instance—would indeed make guest appearance. big cities of the world, but they were the exceptions? Life has the with jet travel the singers started to move around more. If you look at the roster for the Met, Covent G the Paris Opéra and La Scala, you will notice a great si ty in the lists of singers.

This is the way dance is going—partly, perhaps, by of the shortage of choreographers. The ballet repert becoming far more internationally based than it used a which will make it much easier for dancers to move with a repertory of their own. This I am sure will F dance trend of the '80's.

edge. That's the Duke's function in the play, he's trying to bring out all sides of the characters, he's both testing them and showing them to themselves. It's the lesson of tolerance. People can be hundreds of things. If you can accept the fact that one person can be a number of people, if you can see that in yourself, then you won't be so ready to judge others,

"The ending, with the multiple marriages, represents that attainment of self. You've had the conflict, each character has had an individall crisis, and then the Duke over the course of two acts pulls it all together. The judgments that he hands down have to do with the way peopie see themselves. Isabel must come out of her selfrighteousness and forgive what he's repressed and marry. Not that marriage is a cure-all. But the mutual coming-together of two people represents the achievement of knowledge that this play is all about. And because the play continually forces the audience to suspend its judgment, to doubt the very process of judging, by its end here haven't been so many pirate movies in recent years that one can easily dismiss as ersatz a film like James Goldstone'a well-meaning "Swashbuckler," which stars Robert Shaw as an 18th-century Caribbean pirate named Ned Lynch and features as his flagship an exquisite reprotion of Sir Francis Drake's Golden Hind, the vessel in ich Drake sailed around the world. The decline and fall near-extinction of the old-fashioned adventure film is bubly inevitable with the increasing sophistication of idren who would prefer to see "The Towering Inferno," urthquake" and "Young Frankenstein" to most of the chiln's films being turned out these days by the Walt Disney anization and others.

That decline and fall is sad indeed if, as I sometimes pect, the place of the adventure movie has been usurped science-fiction in theatrical films and television series. could be just a fad but it could also mean that a humanizif romantic sense of the past has been replaced by an ession with the future no more profound than an automo-: salesman's concern with the looks of next year's model. If audiences don't take the past seriously, it's little nder that moviemakers seldom do. Which is why John Hun's "The Man Who Would Be King" was such an enchantsurprise last winter-a story of high adventure and mis-1 told absolutely straight, with respect for old conventions I with no concessions to the comedy that became the ninant method of Richard Lesfer's two films based on le Three Musketeers" and seriously threatened the grand nance of his "Robin and Marian."

"Swashbuckler," directed by Goldstone and written by frey Bloom, would seem to want to take itself seriously adventure and fails much in the way of a high diver who in't learned how to do a full gainer properly. It is willing i athletic and beautiful to look at (it was shot largely locations near Puerto Vallaria) but it never achieves the iberance that seemed to come naturally in films like "The ick Swan," "Captain Blood" or "The Man Who Would Be 1g." Everybody is trying too hard and the efforts show. en tha title, being as much a label as a title, seems to inate that lack of accurity. It's as if the filmmakers were aid of being called square and attached that title to their oject in some way to disassociate themselves from such numiliating tag. Yet, with the exception of only a couple of all details, "Swashbuckler" plays its adventure very aight. Unfortunately, it doesn't do it as well as it might. The chief problem is the screenplay, which either wasn't od to start with or was fiddled with in the course of filmz. Beau Bridges is introduced early in the movie as a dimtted officer in the employ of the wicked governor (Peter yle) of Jamaica, only to disappear for so much of the rest

the movie that it comes as a total surprise when he reappears at the end. Contrary to the business of acting, where less is more, in adventure movies more is more. There isn't enough incident, or plot, in "Swashbuckler." There are two nicely spectacular battle scenes in the film, one at the beginning and one at the end (both of which I'm sure were terrifically expensive to stage in this day and age), but the middle part of the movie is just a lot of horsing around. There's some genuinely amusing stuff, including a duel fought by Ned Lynch with the bighborn tady he comes to love (charmingly acted by Genevieve Bujold), but mostly you bave the feeling that the director and the actora were trying to think of things to do that wouldn't send the film's budget into the stratosphere. The costs of production these days are such that we should be grateful for what we have been given, but back in the good old days, when pirate films could be made in the studio and we didn't demand the realism of Puerto Vallarta or of the partially disguised Golden Hind II, tha derring-do in e pirate movie was more or less non-stop, except for those moments when Errol Flynn made his obligatory grab for Olivia De Havilland.

Which brings us to Robert Shaw in the role that Flynn or Tyrone Power or Burt Lancaster might once have played. Shaw is a fine actor, and because be always appears to be a man who thinks, considers, weighs options and probably sees the darker side of things, he makes a thoroughly bogus pirate hero, the kind of man who, above all, should give the appearance of spontaneous gallantry. Shaw doesn't, which is probably why in this movie he'd probably have been much better as the villain, a role be played with complete credibil-'ity in "Robin and Marian."

It may be a further sign of our times that I can't think of one young leading actor today who could play a pirate hero with convincing style. Dustin Hoffman? Al Pacino? Robert Redford, perhaps, but would he want to? It may be that piracy has become a lost movie art.

"The Return of A Man Called Horse," tha sequel to the financially successful "A Man Called Horse," released in 1970, can, I suppose, be called an adventure film, but the methods it employs describe the differences between adventure films in the thirties, forties and fifties and now. The innocence has gone. As in the original film, Richard Harris stars as an English aristocrat who is befriended by a tribe of Sioux Indians who call themselves the Yellow Hands. In the first movie, Harris proved bimself by undergoing a ritual of purification consisting largely of bearing up through physical mutilation. In this new advecture, the aristocrat leaves England to return to the Yellow Hands who have been dispossessed by fur trappers. Before they allow him to help them he must undergo all that purification business again. In fact it's the same particular torture (small animal bones are inserted through the skin of each breast, lines are attached to the bones and he must hang from these attachments until

The graphic details in which these initiation rites are shown seem to be the major point of the movie, and one that makes it unsuitable for anyone who is squeamish about a lack of imagination or about lovingly detailed mortification of the flesh. "The Return of A Man Called Horse" is, at heart, a variation on the tried and true formulas used by Edgar Rice Burroughs, but its emphasis on physical pain gives it a strictly contemporary S & M twist. If your kids are into bondage, they'lt love it. If not, be careful.

The summer has entered its home stretch and I can think of no more than four or five films that might be recommended for children. "Swashbuckler" is okay. "Silent Movie" is fine for the Mel Brooks nuts, no matter how old, but "Murder By Death" is probably too literary for the very young. Teenagers should love the parodies in "The Big Bus," but they'll be bored by "Godzilla Versus Megalon," unless they like instant camp. "The Bingo Long Traveling All-Stars and Motor Kings" is harmless, but "Lifeguard" is not something to take your child to unless he happens to be 32 and facing a change of life. If he can read, this might well be tha time to introduce him to "Ivanhoe." "A Tala of Two Cities" and "Treasure Island." There are occasions when it's best to disconnect the television set and stay home.

They ought to bring it up to 1976, with Rhett and Scarlett living in an open marriage, as they would be today. Frozen by cyrogenics after the Civil War, they meet in a New York singles bar when they thaw. Given the present freedom, they'd be swingers. They'd be miserable, but it would be very interesting sociologically. I'd have them played by Barbra Streisand and Eliot Gould, the most neuralgic combination of the year.

JOHN UPDIKE

Rhett might open a chain of general stores, selling used carpet bags. She, I would image, would get very plump, pleasing enough, and drink too much. He would wander back to her, less brash, beaten, ready to become a kind of Snopes.

VANCE BOURJAILY

I'd make the screenplay go back to the Confederate retreat and surrender and show how Rhett and Scarlett are likelier to survive than more noble people. I'd redefine them more cynically and less romantically against a background of tragedy. They're a couple of attractive opportunists of the kind we all know-more egreeable when things are going well than when they are not. As for their love relationship. Scarlett might be the more complele scoundrel and in a position to turn Rhett down.

ISAAC ASIMOV

During the Gilded Age, Rhett learns about the Black Friday attempt by Fisk and Gould to corner the gold market. In the very teeth of their conniving, Rliett makes off with some money for himself and then warns President Grant to release gold and end the bubble. Scarlett becomes a political hostess and helps quiet the uproar that follows the crooked Hayes-Tilden election of 1876. She suggests to Hayes that if he removes Federal troops from the South, people will forget how he won office. With Haves in the White House, Scariett becomes an even more popular hostess, since Haves's wife, Lemonade Lucy, is a strict prohibitionist, while Scarlett serves bourbon and Whose notion was it, then? Margaret Mitchell's estate, Brown replies. "The estate felt that the time was now correct for the consideration of a continuation, or sequel, and we were invited to consider this, and we responded without delay."

"Well, there was a delay," Zamuck adds quickly. "David and I very seriously discussed the notion. While we were immensely flattered to be approached initially. We did, after taking a couple of breaths, ask ourselves, you know, really, do we want to do this, or is it maybe an impossible challenge? And after a great deal of soulsearching we thought that we could do it and do it pro-

But whose notion was it? Zanuck and Brown still decline to say. The initiative came from the estate. Does that mean wrought-iron gates swinging open by themselves and a voice from within Tara thundering: "Let the tale contimue"? The producers suggest talking to Kay Brown for further details.

Kay Brown no relation to the producer-was working as David O. Selznick's East been seen by cable TV audi-Coast story editor in 1936 when she cama across a. manuscript by an unknown author from Atlanta. She sent her boss a long synopsis. of the book, and with it a note that said, "I know that after you read the book you will drop everything and buy it." Selznick was intrigued, but not convinced. His story editor applied more pressure through the chairman of Selznick's company, John Hay Whitney, and the movie deal for "Gone With the Wind" was finally made. Today Kay Brown is an agent with International Creative Management in New York. She'd like to expiain why, almost 40 years after the movie, a sequel is suddenly in the works, but she can't "The estate" means Margaret Mitchell's older brother and snivivor. Stephens sole Mitchell, and as long as he chouses to remain silent on the subject, her lips are sealed too.

An attorney who lives in Atlanta, Stephens Mitcheli is 82 years old. He broke a hip in a fall receptly and is still hospitalized. Like his late sister, he has never discussed the original movie in public, let alone speculated on a sequel. What seems to have happened, according to other sources, is that Mitchell, having decided for his own reasons that the time for a sequel had come (his sense of timing may have been influenced by the fact that "Gone With the Wind" has already ences on the East and West Coasts and will be shown on network television for the first time next fall) asked Kay Brown to put the project in motion. One of the people

Who Will Play Rhett and Scarlett?

she spoke with around the turn of the year was Herman Citron of Chasin-Park-Citron. a Los Angeles agency that represents, among others, Zanuck/Brown. It was Citron who first suggested mating the producers of "Jaws" with Margaret Mitchell's tale of the Old South.

To produce a sequel to a story that has been published in 86 bard cover editions, one that has been seen as a movie by more people than any other in history and has served many of them as the moviegoing experience against which all others must be measured, you need, first of all, a writer who (a) is an inspired lunatic and convinced she's Margaret Mitchell returned to earth; (b) is Margaret Mitchell returned to earth; or (c) bas the wit, craftsmanship and sovereign chutzpah to extend the course of the existing narrative into a story that will stand on its own against some fiercely competitive ghosts. After discussions with many writers - "We were inundated by respected novelists and screenwriters who wanted to be involved." Brown says-the producers

"The Judy Garland Story," "The Inn and Us," and most recently an unpublished biography of Vivien Leigh, has signed a contract to write The Continuation of Gone With the Wind," and she is now researching the project throughout the South, from Atlanta to Savannah to New Orleans. Once she has completed the manuscript, sho will turn it over to Zanuck and Brown for dramatization. "I'm doing the novel," she says, "but they'll adapt my narrative to the screen." She would not say, however, what fate-and her imagination-have in store for the stermy lovers. As to speculation that the script will take Scarlett and Rhett out West, Zanuck insists anything is possible, provided one rule is observed, "and that's obviously to get the two people back together again. Outside of that, which is rather elementary, the decisions as to where it will take place, when it will take place-it may take place a year later, take place two or three years later, who knows? - those decisions will be worked out with the writer."

Brown's thoughts seem made their choice last week. Anne Edwards, author of more southerly than westerly;

the Reconstruction period, he says, "was a period not unlike the last 15 years in the South. It was a period of enormous changes, cataclysmic changes, great social ups and downs, financial crises and a corrupt Administration in Washington.".

All right, then, Scarlett has left Tara after thinking things over, and Rhett has had it with Charleston and all those dotty Civil War buffs, and they both desperately need a change of scenery. But how, when they bump into each other again, will they recognize each other if he's not Clark Gable and she's not Vivien Leigh? Casting, Brown admits quietly, will be a most formidable problem. The only thing he volunteers is that they won't be looking for look-a-likes. Gabla has already been exhumed unsuccessfully in "Gabla and Lombard."

Have thousands of letters been pouring in with casting suggestions? (Ninety - nine percent of Selznick's mail was pro-Gable; the thirties were a time when America could still be run by consensus.) Letters have been coming in steadily, though no one claims they've been pouring. What do they say? "They all have their favorites." Brown says cryptically. Yes, but who? Who could fill those shoes and crinolines? Donny and Marie? Sonny and Cher? Steve and Ali? Barbra and Jon? Ryan and Tatum? Jimmy Carter and Cornelia Wallace?

Or what about using the flashhack-flashforward structure of "Godfather II." the film which gave sequels a good name, with Scarlett played by Jodie Foster and Katharine Hepburn, and Rhett played by Alfred Lutter and Sean Connery? "We're tabulating the letters as they come in. So far there's been a very strong Robert Redford branchwater.

For those who cherished the original, whose spirits soared when Rhett swept Scarlett up the staircase, and who wept inconsolably when he walked out on her at the end, it's an unthinkable desecration to touch a hair on the lovers' heads, let alone change heads. Yet a sequel was inevitable, the inherent goofiness of the casting business notwithstanding. The only surprise is that it's taken this long. Selznick implored Margaret Mitchell to write one, and the ending of her story begged for one.

The new producers talk circumspectly of their responsibilities toward what Zanuck calls "the most revered piece of filmmaking in the history of the entertainment business." They're taking it step by step, he says, not worrying about a release date, they've got nothing but time, they haven't even started to make decisions on a director or cast.

Yet they don't want all those ghosts to take over the office and dictate the new script through a ouita board. "As much as 'Gone With the Wind' is revered," Brown says, "we as filmmakers in the most respectful sense mustn't be intimidated, hecause this was written by humans, made by humans. We knew David O. Selznick, we know ell of the travail he vent through." Just as inevitably, the new film wilt be much more expilcit than the old one, in which Rhett's "Frankly, my dear, I don't give a damn" was a cause colebre and Scarlett's anatomy a terra incognita. "It's not that we want to make a racy film out of it," Zanuck says, "but we have to have our characters not only say but do things that are more in keeping with what audiences expect."

For better or worse, the pre-World War II days of starry-ceilinged movie palaces and rigid Hays Office censorship are themselves gone with the wind. New audiences go to the movies for new reasons, At the Aero Theatre in Santa Monica last week a recorded message told callers: "We are proud to present 'Taxi Driver,' starring Robert De Niro. Travel the streets of New York and watch this lonely person slowly deteriorate." After traveling the streets of Atlanta all these years and watching two persons slowly drift apart, we may yet sec them come together again, still lenely but somehow liberated, Her fust words will be "You've changed," and his will be "Frankly, my dear.

"One of those rare films you'll want to see again and again and again!"

performed for her in June, she lurched about the stage, paced and perched on the edge of the piano as if willing the best from the students.

"Darling child," Miss Kraus asked urgently after a Chopin nocturne, "what are you doing there?" (The harmony in the performer's left hand had become clouded.) "That limps, my dear," (A grace note had not come off.) "It's beautiful noise, but there's no speech. You must be much simpler in your approach. Here, Chopin is talking to himself."

After a Beethoven sonata, Miss Kraus observed, "The piano being a percussive instrument tends to encourage the use of brute strength. We, who are pianists, must strive to overcome this. We must work harder than other instrumentalists. We must find sounds dreamed of only by angels. Remember the piano's voice dies in the moment of its birth. You can only create the illusion of prolongation by the way you strike a key and by how you pedal. But actually, from the moment a tone is sounded, it begins to die. Everything we do before striking a key is decisive; everything we do afterwards.

"And incidentally, contrary to what many say, one must take es much pedal as possible. But this must be done cleverly, so that you tie sounds together as much as possible. Keep them pure. One other thing: When you see all these black notes Beethoven loved to write, don't rush; play slowly. You play fast when you see white

As Miss Krans proceeded from student to student, her pronounced theories about the technical side of piano playing also made themselves felt. She continually preached the need to stay as close as possible to the keys, so that the actual work of performance is done by the fingers and not the elbow or wrist.

"The entire body helps the legs to walk, but only they themselves can accomplish haring. Not so with Miss. the steps which enable us to move. So it is with the finfrom our lingers, we must prepare each upcoming pattern or chord so that it is in the hand before it is played, so that no motion or time is needlessly lost."

returned: "Put the chord in your hand before you play. Shape your hand in advance for the job it must do. Far be it for me to say that this is the only way to play, but I do believe this way your hands will stand ready to help when you need them the most. I wish I could be as sure that other methods would be equally effective at crucial moments."

Perhaps most telling of all were Miss Kraus's reactions to the works of Mozart, a composer with whom she is -identified above all others, and whose complete concertos and sonatas she has recorded and performed throughout the world. To her, "there is no feeling-human or cosmic-no depth, no height the human spirit can reach that is not contained in Mozart's music. Yet so many misunderstand this, misunderstand him.

"May I tell you something? There is no such thing as the 'Mozart style' so many talk about. The style of a composer, or of a writer or a dancer. is how they speak. Each has his own language. To understand them, we who are performers, readers or audience must learn to speak their language. Only a fool would not know that Mozart-the man with the deepest soul, which he expressed with the fewest words has his own wey of speaking to us, and that you do not speak his words as you would those of Beethoven or Wagner.

"These are other languages. As musicians, we have to be multi-lingual in order to perform. We must also know how to read between the lines of these languages, so to speak, and to be aware of undercurrents, of the meaning of the most abstract symbols. Too much accent, for example, or too much agogic freedom would destroy the crystal-clear ocean that Mozart is.

"Beethoven is something else. He speaks in interruptions, crescendi which end in a subito piano and vice versa. Brahms is again something else. His language is that of blg, wonderful round harmonies and melodies. They are never very, very deep, but hover with mastery on the edge of sentiment. With them, as with Mozart, it is the job of we, the performers, to glean from the music its essence, and then to fuse this with our essence in order to consummate the union. In this way, a piece is born anew, quite unlike any other union which another may "Actually, the performance of Mozart is somewhat special because there is a golden rule which must be reliowed when it comes to playing his piano music. We must remember that his writing was framed by the narrow dynamic range of the instru-Time and again the phrase ment he played. I own a piano of his day, and know first-hand that neither real forte nor a real piunissimo are possible on it. If you play too loudly, you will break a hammer. If you play is felt will vary, of course, too softly, the note simply does not speak. So, a real culminating forte or a whispered piano can be had only in a relative sense. This knowledge is what must guide us performing Mozart's music. But I have always thought that his manner of speech tended toward a wonderful restraint anyway. I have found that even his most passionate outbursts, his darker sides, are temvinca yourself and others pered by grace. that your way is a right

"As to tempos, there are in Mozart's music, as there are in the music of any composer, very precise indications in its character, in the notes of the music itself. For example, 'con brio' in Haydn or Beethoven means something quite different than it does in Mozart, With Haydn, it brings an earthy lustiness, a bit of the beer hall. In Beethoven, it is a titanic outburst. But with Mozart there is a driven quality, something almost breath-

"The degree to which this from artist to artist; each of us is different: And so it should be, for there is a healthy instinct and knowledge one acquires during a lifetime of playing which gives you the assurance and authority to follow your feelings in such matters. One of the controversial matters when it comes to Mozart is that of pedaling. Miss Kraus has these words on the subject: "Even if you chose not to pedal Mozart's piano music in the literal sense, you must still 'pedal' him with your fingers, binding the notes closely together. There is a superstition that the less pedal used in Mozart the better. This is nonsense; it fits in with the distorted picture of Mozart alive is to have the cepacity as a pretty, Rococo composer to touch and move others if in silk breeches and powdered wig. I prefer Mozart in riding pants and boots!"

Miss Kraus's ideas about embellishment Mozart's music are as emphatic. "It is inconceivable that he would have left big holes in his music if he had not taken it for granted that they would be filled in. It is not only permissible to do so, but I think there is an ohligation to supply the missing notes, just as I feel a pianist must devise his own cadenzas for tha concertos where Mozart has not done so.

The purpose of a cadenza is not just to show off, but to show how closely attuned you are to a composer. The challenge is to make your own statement on the piece's musical material-paraphrasing so to speak, the composer's words. It is a moment of truth when an artist must show how far his spirit has been fused with that of the music's creator."

I remarked to Miss Kraus that Bruno Walter had once said that it was essential for a performer to bring his full ego to bear on a piece of music, for wheo a performer was self-effacing, music was

"Good for him," Miss Kraus shot back. "You know, my dear, there is an early Mozart sonata in which the slow movement is marked 'Andante emoroso.' Now whose 'amoroso' is it to be? It is his and mine, or his and whoever plays him. And how can you be properly 'amoroso' and objective at the sama time? Objectivity in music Is rubbish, and who would weot it anyway. Heve you ever had an objective love affair? And what is music but love? To love is to live, and to be fully you are a musician."

Robert Wilson's Five-Hour Operatic Dream

By JOHN ROCKWELL

"Einstein on the Beach." which received its first triumphant performances this past week at the Theatre Municipal as part of the Avignon Festival, is both similar to and different from Robert Wilson's past theatrical creations. The main difference is that unlike Mr. Wilson's previous so-called "operas," "Einstein" has a continuous, five-hour score by a composer of stature, Philip Glass.

Like Mr. Wilsoo's six-bour epic, 'The Life and Times of Joseph Stalin" and like the shorter but atill grandly expansive 'Letter to Queen Victoria and the $ Value for Man" that followed in 1974, "Einstein" moves steadily and inexorably at a pace that might strike ordinary theater-goers as glacial. Actually, at any given moment, myriad tiny events are unfolding and the whole has a dream-like, hypnotic power.

Once again Mr. Wilson is devoting himself to the ostensible examination of some seminal figure from the past 100 years: Albert Einstein is the latest in a line that has included not only Stalin and Queen Victoria but Freud as well. And once again the examination is more intuitive than explicit.

"Einstein" offers several characters who can be taken to represent the title figure, and a variety of overt references to his life, from eclipses to gyroscopes to atom bombs to rockets, but that's just the surface; and anybody who has been to Mr. Wilson's previous stage works knows that he is most concerned with what lies beneath the surface. All works of art have deeper meanings: Mr. Wilson unselfconsciously pursues those meanings from

The basic schematic diagram of the play is of nine scenes flanked and divided by five knee-plays, so named because of their joint-like function. The nine scenes are split into four ects (to fit among the knee-plays) and more logically considered as three basic visual images of the work-a train, a trial blended with a bed and a spaceship.

What it means exactly is hard to put in words. Mr. Wilson calmly accepts most interpretations people care to make. The phrase "oo the beach" may have some reference to the post-apocalyptic novel of that name. The overall theme of the play might be said to be a consideration of the same moral and cosmic issues that concerned Einstein himself in his later years, principally the role of science in the modern world and the relation of science to religion. The train (Einstem hed a toy train as a child and used trains as analogies lo las papers) might be a symbol of a preatomic society. The trial is possibly that of science itself and the bed may represent dreaming. The spaceship is the potential for the future.

But putting It that way seems impossibly limiting. By the third repetition of the hasic themes, each has been transformed. The train becomes a huilding in which Einstein can be seen scrib-hling, the bed that has always laid in the middle of the court-room takes over the stage to the exclusion of everything else and that slowly asceods, glowing eerily, into the flies, and in the peoultimate scene, before the final, consoling knee-play, we move inside the spaceship for a demonic vision of computerized slavery and nuclear holocaust, Underlying it all, it seems safe to say, is a barely concealed mysticism. It manifests itself not only in the dervish-like, hieratic dancing that Andrew deGroat provides for two scenes but in the beckoning glow of the spaceship and the pervasive ritualism of Mr. Wilson's entire way of working. Mr. Glass's music may not meke "Finstein" an opera in sense. any cooventional There are no opportunities for vocal display by conventionally trained singers after all, and Mr. Glass's ensemble - two electric organs. three winds, female voice and violin, all richly amplified-is hardly the equivalent of the Met's orchestra. But it still changes Mr. Wilson's work markedly. This is the first time a Wilson opera has had continuous music. Before there were occasional muslcal moments of great beauty. hut nothing as consistently impressive as this. The idiom will be famillar to those who have heard Mr. Glass's previous music, ine basic material is harmonically static, modal, with steadily scurrying eighth-notes sometimes counterpointed against looger sustaining notes from the winds. The main addition is choral music, set to methodically counted numbers (one-two-three-four) of solfego syllables (do-re-mi). Toe

This willingness deceived is dangerous because it must inevitably lead coarsening of aural perceptions. When the amplified "i of music becomes the standard, the indoor concert, and recital are bound to become infected, too. The - lative erosion of radio, television, hi-fi records and rock have wiped out what for hundreds of years cultivated ers identified as the musical criterion: the sound of live, iranted, and freely, these are good outdoor concerts and putdoor concerts. At the top of one's own preference would be the Boston Symphony's summertime programs nglewood and those of the Chicago Symphony at the in Festival. are employing this summer in the parks does a splendid Job of projecting high-fidelity sound to extensive areas, and thanks be to the Andrew Mellon Foundation for underwriting its $500,000 price tag. But in an artistically rational society, the Met and the Philharmonic would be playing live, indoor concerts and operas throughout the five boroughs, not carting around an amplified substitute during the slow months Lincoln Center. Historically, it must be remembered, the impetus for free concerts in the parks came from the rising employment expectations of the musicians, rather than out of anybody's deeply felt artistic need. As it became necessary to pay musicians on a year-round basis, it was thought only reasonable to keep them at work during the summer months. On balance, certainly, the parks concerts have been successful in that and in other worthy ways. The art of picnicking has been advanced, certainly. And among other extramusical pleasures is the legitimate one of seeing our musical heroes and heroines in the flesh. What we experience actually may be little led and undistorted. But surely that is the direction a . more than a hi-fi concert in which the artists are seen to mime their roles, but we also feel ourselves in the bodily presence

Amplified music is music in the same sense as a twoheaded cow is a cow. It gives us too much, when nature has decided what is just enough. No matter how artfully accomplished, the dispersal of music for large outdoor crowds robs the sounds of what might be termed their human quality. Machinery has interposed itself between us and the performing artist, who except in the case of a singer bas already put one mechanical instrument between artist and listener. But this is an instrument over which the artist has, or should have, full control, and the performer's manipulation of this piece of machinery is the only manipulation that should concern us as music listeners.

The question of live, natural sound is one that musically sensitive persons worry over incessantly, as they should. There is no shortcut tn acoustical truth, and no acceptable substitute. Poor Avery Fisher Hall has a history of ecoustical sorrows, but in a sense the contiouing struggle to improve its sound is a testimonial to the musical integrity of the Philharmonic's management and of its benefactor, Avery Fisher, Mr. Fisher, the former hi-fi manufacturer who is putting up $5-million for the current remodeling, clearly understands the value of live music. How easy and in some weys how sensible It would have been for the Philharmonic to have decided long ago that the soluton to toe hall's 10-yearold problem was simply subtle amplification or the implanting of tuned electronic resonators in the walls and ceilings, as has been dooe elsewhere in similarly sick halls. However, that would have been to surrender a principle and to deny that acoustical truth is inseparable from a genuine music experience. Outdoors, as in listening to recordings, we accept the second-hand experience as necessary, perhaps. Indoors, there is no room for such self-deception.

The ear is a marvelously flexible and accommodating instrument. If one listens for five minutes to a table radio, particularly if the music is something whose details are familiar, the "canned sound" effect teods to fade and an illusion of hearing live music may be created. Similarly, an audience may be fooled, and wants to be fooled, into believing it is hearing live music at amplified outdoor cnocerts. Such a willing suspension of disbelief, however, ought not to extend heyond the length of the work being played. If we become habituated to hearing some of the music and having to deduce the rest, our ability to perceive small differences could become dangerously eroded. And the mark of a cultivated person is the ability to detect fine differences. Every man in the street can see in what ways things are the same; it is only with some training and study that he learns to see how they are different. There is a difference, for instance, between the music of Mozart and Haydn, and it is a difference worth discovering.

Some summer music, especially in this summer, is only musical in name. Perhaps the phenomenon of the amplified concert reached its apogee and its nadir simultaneously on the Fourth of July when 400,000 delirious celebrants crammed onto the Esplanade in Boston to watch (they could not have heard) Arthur Fiedler lead the Boston Pops in a program of patriotic favorites. Such mob scenes fill a social need, as do the gatherings that take place in Times Square on New Year's Eve, or at a movie star's funeral. They have almost nothing to dn with music.

Amplification is, of course, a logical outcome of the fact that so many more of us now occupy the earth than did when so much of the music we most honor was composed. But logic lies, in this instance. It is nothing hut a distortion of musical truth to puff up a Mozart symphony until it fills a space occupled by 10,000 people, or 50,000, or 100,000. We need, instead, more concerts for fewer people, not these mass meetings at which electronic apparatus strains to persuade us that we are listening to live music produced by actual susicians. The goal should out be Arthur Fiedler conducting for $2,900 people but 400 Arthur Fiedlers (you may substitute the maestro of your choice) conducting 1,000 sensibly sized concerts. The American mania for bigness, recognized by the earliest reporters on the scene in the 18th century, is still raging and has found its ultimate weapon: the thousand-watt amplifier. It may be merely hollering into the wind to say so, but there is a difference between music and goise and that distinction Is becoming increasingly difficult to make. Particularly in Scarlett uses Rhett's magazine for a classy ad campaign, featuring Belle Watting as the Tara by Scarlett O'Hara Girl." Rhett realizes this is a ploy by Scarlett to get to him. He re-sists for a while, then agrees to meet her at a theme park -a reconstruction of the destruction of the Southcalled Civil War Land. In an almost lifesize plastic replica of their former home, she leads him into a room, chains him to the bed and rapes him. He realizes he loves her after all. The audience, going out, is heard to say: "Frankly, I don't give a damn."

It's a reflection of the current political almosphere that they're making a sequel. Rhett should have stayed around till today, when they're cominating plantation owners for President, I'd call the securi "sack With the Wind." There's a big backlash against Reconstruction, Federal troops are withdrawn, the darkies are in their place, and Scarlett and Rhett get it all back. Rhett could become the post-Reconstruction governor of Louisiana as a populist like Jimmy Carter, and Scarlett would become a suffragette and tell everybody how sho and Topsy are both oppressed women. I think the blacks will still be out in the fields arguing over who's going to say "quitting time."

Scariett has a Colonel Saunders franchise and, like a Tennessee Williams character, mismanages the hell out of it but thinks it's wonderful. Rhett, while running for Senate, passes by her fried chicken establishment. SO YOU THINK YOU KNOW HELEN REDDY. WELL, THINK AGAIN.

HER NEW ALBUM!

Whatever your musical tastes, you must be aware of Helen Reddy. Because Helen Reddy is more than a vocalist. Helen Reddy is vocal. She makes a statement. Whether it be performing at colleges and state fairs or on stage at Las Vegas' MGM Grand Hotel; on television as host of the highly-rated Midnight Special; on film or in song, on one of her Capitol album And her statement says, "I represent an attainable goal ... that a woman can make it in the world and still be true to herself."

Her statement also says, "Music, Music." Her newest album on Capitol Records. Listen. And think again.

Looking Back at Hiroshima Makes Uneasy Viewing

By JOHN LEONARD

On August 31, 1946, The w Yorker devoted its ens issue to a book-length are hy John Hersey in which interviewed half a dozen vivors of our atomic atk nn Hiroshima. If the are moved many readers, it - pleased some, especially of the most articulate rary intellectuals of the n-war period. Editorializin his journal Politics, oher: "The 'little people' Hiroshima whose suffers Hersey records in an-mice, for all the pity, horror or indignation the reader-or at least this reader—is made to feel for them. . . . Perhaps my feeling is simply that naturalism is no longer adequate, either esthetically or morally, to cope with the modern horrors."

And, in a letter to the editor of Politics, Mary McCarthy agreed with Mr. Macdonald: "The existence of any survivors is an irrelevancy, and the interview with the survivors is an insipid falsiight Macdonald said in fication of the truth of atom warfare. To have done the atom bomb justice, Mr. Hersey would have had to mterview the dead. . . . Up to ht just as well be white. August 31 of this year, oo one dared think of Hiroshima it appeared to us all as a kind of hole in human history. Mr. Hersey has filled that hole with husy little Japanese Methodists; he has made it familiar and safe, and so, in the final sense, boring."

One of the several things troubling Miss McCarthy and Mr. Macdooald was the problem of scale, Hiroshima was awful and momentous, in some sense unimaginable, and yet a fact. How to "cope" with this "hole in human history"? The literary intellectual tries to cope by appropriatiog the abyss for himself. The "naturalism" of newspapers and magazines is deemed inadequate, morally and esthetically, to the demands of an abstraction called "the modern horrors." Not even the survivors of the unimaginable will be allowed to possess it. It is too hig. too important, for them; they are "irrelevancies."

This, of course, isn't really coping; it is striking an attitude. It is, moreover, greedy and elitist, a kind of critical imperialism: my categories are hetter thao your categories, and what do ordinary people know anyway, unworthy as they are of their tragedy? And it is also defensive: inside my categories, 1 am safe, reviewing horror as though it were a Godard film. Well, the survivors of Hiro-

Channel 13), on the eve of the 31st anniversary of the atomic attack, as a consequence of which either 79,400 or 91,223 or 240,000 people died, depending on who does the counting. "To Live, Tn Dia" is a stomach-turning program. Written and directed by Robert Vas for the BBC's "Horizon" series, it is hased on the book "Death in Life" by Robert Jay Lifton. Dr. Lifton is the Yale professor of psychiatry who went to Hiroshima to interview tha Hibakusha and to theorize about the psychic damage done to them not just hy having experienced the atom bomb, hut hy having aurvived it when others did not, the ineradicable guilt of not having died.

All right. It is appropriate, the Hibakusha should have their say on television. The critics and their categories have taken over the newspapers and magazines; "naturalism" is the style of televisioo oews, particularly bad oews. And the moral and esthetic possibilities of TV oaturalism are evident: 'The Sorrow and the Pity." after all, was originally commissioned for French television. But how does one review such a program? Inappropriately, although maybe just as inevitably, I found myself, alone in a screening room, reacting like a literary intellectual, striking attitudes as if they were matches, for tha first 15 minutes of "To Live,

I didn't want to watch a whole hour of it, I got tha point. I was suspicious of the cultivated European voices translating the words of tha aurvivors. I resented the ominous music, the pregnant pauses, the mechanical alternations of scenes of modern Hiroshima in livid, living color with the black-andwhite disaster footage of 1945 newsreels. Where was the center of this irooy and at whose expense? I disliked the manipulation of my emotions by crude juxtaposings of disfigured womeo and department store mannequins with American wigs, of missing ears and honky-took acts, of a river of corpses and night hasehall. I thought the subtleties of Dr. Liftoo's book were obscured hy a piling-on anteed, to shock. Mutilated bodies look the same, don't they, at death camps and at Dresden and at train wrecks? What in this wretched ceotury, is so special about Hiro-

Not a seemly way to react. What am I—a connoisseur of atrocities? As a matter of fact, an evasive way to react -just as spending the first 400 words of this article nn Dwight Macdonald and Mary McCarthy was evasive. The "us all," as Miss McCarthy described it, knows very well what's special about Hiroshima. Us all did it, to Asians, our favorite laboratory animals, Nr. Macdonald's "white mice" hut yellow. The aftereffects were special, too: leukemia, cancer, genetic harm; discrimination against the Hibakusha hy their fellow Japanese (an ultimate loss of face, the maimed reminder); the self-punishment of the survivors (who are asking "Why not me?"). "I should have died," says one; "My inner command was to die. But I couldn't." "I wanted to kill myself," says another. "I don't want my children to increase our family," says a third, "Because I survived, as a witness," says a fourth, "I started to write." And a fifth: "The living must live with a dark feeling." In modern, neoned, sky-scrapered Hiroshima, August 6 is a big day. The place is overcome with tourist buses, with snapshooters of every oationality. The shops have sales. There are postcards. A survivor, an ancient mariner, wants all the doors closed on that day; Hiroshima shouldn't exist. Irony is powerless, obscene, in the face of this fact. Even to make of the bomh symbol or a metaphor is literary and evasive. We are emharrassed, annoyed, angered hy survivors, the Elia Wiesels who go on in book after book reminding us of the Holocaust, hearing witness, prisoners of their escape. Why persist in uttering the unutterable? I made a mistake several years ago in not permitting my sevenyear-old daughter to see the death-camp episode — episode?—oo "The World at War." "Later," I thought. "Now," I believe.

There will he three other programs Thursday night on WNET about "The Nuclear Question." I should have previewed them. I didn't, wouldn't. The esthete had a

'Destination America' Profiles Immigrants

n elderly man in Liverpool, England, recalls the thousands of ragged travellers as "one step removed from animals." Another describes the 18-day sea journey in steerage holds as something of a religious quest "designed to test our worthiness of the Promised Land." Several meo and women tell of their feelings of apprehension upon arrival, when anything from eye cataracts to heing an anarchiat could bar final entry. John F. Kennedy, a member of "the most successful immigrant family of them all," is seen visiting a wildly delighted and charmed Ireland as President of the

The subject, of course, is emigration to the United States. There are 47 million immigrants on official record. "Destination America," which can be seen Sundays at 9 P.M. oo WOR/Channel 9, focuses on the 35 million who left Europe in the past 150 years. In the early years, the population of this country was 11 million. It was a land of Indian territory and "virgin soil," a land of unlimited opportunity, especially when compared to the cramped and rigid Old World of peasants and kings.

"Destination America" encompasses the basic material, experieoces and accomplishments required for any project pretending to commemorate the natinn's Bicentennial. The project, however, was initiated in London by Jeremy Isaacs. who had guided the extraordinarily comprehensive "World At War" to impressive completion. When RKO Televisioo, with statioos in Los Angeles, Boston, Memphia and New York, agreed to carry "Destination America." the series went into production at Thames TV with Tom Steel as series producer and John Edwards as executive producer.

The format of tha new series (actually, it was completed In 1975 and was shown in Chicago last November) is similar to that used in "World at War." Photographs, graphics and documentary film footage are combined with interviews, ell overlaid with a remarkably objective oarratioo, delivered by Ian Cuthhertson for "Destination America." In this case, though, the question of time became more urgent as the producers were anxious to record direct survivors of the experience, particularly of the last great wave of immigration between 1890 and World War I. Those immigrants and their children and their grandchildren are the true weavers of the finished tapestry.

And it cannot he stressed strongly enough that the content is awesome in the mere bearing of witness to terrifying beginnings, incredible endurance and struggle, and-for many, even for most-eventual acceptance as part of the 'American dream." Last Sunday's initial episode, "Old World. New World," sketched the early movements on a broad canvas; the leaving of small villages and towns with a few pitiful possessions, the legal struggles to get out, the long journey infected with illness and the stench of illness, the physical examination struggles to get in, and the quick realization that the streets were not paved with gold, that the immediate poverty of the slums was oot much different from what had been left behind. The single difference was a chance to go further, to express one's self freely in word and accom-

'A chance to go further"

Most of the remaining eight episodes focus on a single group. A ninth, "Made in Britain," about British immigrants, will oot be seen in the New York run. I am assured that the reasons are only technical and have nothing to do with George III or any of that rebel husiness. Tonight's hour, "Oo A Clear Day You Can See Boston," is about the Irish, and it appears to be representative of the rewarding style adopted for the series. Using Boston, of course, as its representativa base, the program nffers a great deal of information about both the Irish in America and Ireland itself.

The narration for this episode-produced and directed by Mr. Steel-describes Ireland in the 1840'a as "a country of nine millioo exploited people." Within relatively few years, five million were dead of famine and plague. It cost the large landowners more to keep a peasant in the poorhouse than to pay for his or her passage to America. By 1900, three millinn Irish had left their country. Today, 25 million Americans claim Irish descent.

Strong anti-Irish feeliogs in the early days are recalled. The immigrants were usually caricatured as apes: all jaw and no hrain. They were considered inferior to Negroes, another group at the bottom of the social scale. And the commoo refrain, even within the enlightened halls of Harvard University, was "No Irish Need Apply."

But within the new minority, another minority struggled nn construction jobs, in the lower reaches nf politics, in an assortment of trades. The next step was education for their children. As one immigrant recalls. "The Yankees had the wealth, hut the Irish had the bahies."

Growing Irish power gradually hecama a real threat to Yankee arrogance. Another Irish American recalls, "It took the Irish to cut them down to size—and they did, they finally did." They did it primarily through their churches, the law and politics, in which, as someone untes, 'Their generosity manifested itself in corruption." And they did it, as a descendant of the distinguished Adams family says, through their "extraordinary social gifts . . . their social ease and grace."

The tale, seen and told with objectivity, is astonishing, as are the stories of the other immigraot groups. "The Biggest Jewish City in the World," meaning New York, scheduled for Sept. 5, is equally adept and fascinating for touching on so many complex aspects of history with remarkable insight and sensitivity. On WOR, incidentally, "Destination America" is being sponsored by Seaman's Furniture, a local company that "wanted to do something worthwhile for the community." It has done just that with unusual imagination and intelligence.

HILTON KRAMER

Remembering Cunningham And White

y an odd twist of fate, death came to two of our most illustrious photographers — Imogen Cunningham and Minor White—almost at the same time, but at opposite ends of the country, just over a month ago. Reading their obitnaries-printed side by side, like entries in an encyclopedia, in The New York Times of June 26-gave one a peculiar sensation. It was not only the sensation of loss, although that was certainly part of it, but also of pride and curiosity. What a lot of history is contained in these two careers, and what a lot remains to be learned about them! The so-called photography boom had arrived in time to elevate them to a new celebrity in the world beyond the photographic community that had long esteemed them, but not soon enough to give us a really comprehensive account of their work. With photographers, as with poets, there is a tendency to judge them by often reprinted anthology pieces. There is a tendency, too, to attribute consistency to a body of work that may contain a significant diversity, if not outright contradictions. We do better, I think, to begin with a recognition of their diversity.

Imogen Cunningham, who died in San Francisco, was 93; Minor White, who died in Boston, was 67. Although their lives touched at various point—the most beautiful portraits I have seen of White's handsome, fawn-like face are Cunningham's—they belonged to different generations, were very different personalities, and took very different views of their art. Cunningham was the least mystical of women; she was earthy, humorous, downright and realistic; whereas for White the entire world of existence-and the place of photography in that world-was enclosed in a mysterious penumbra of spirituality, Cunningham reveled in playing the sassy old lady, celebrated for her candor, whereas White was the very archetype of the artist-as-guru. If for the one photography had become a form of straight talk, concerned above all with immediacy and truth, for the other it had long been a form of prayer.

1 met each of them once, visiting Cunningham at her house in San Francisco a year before she died, meeting White a year before that at the exhibition he organized at M.I.T. on the occasion of his retirement as professor of photography, Cunningham spoke of what it felt like to be old; and her current project was photographing old people -"most of them," as she hastened to point out "younger than me." White spoke of recovering a sense of "the sacred" in his art. He was not so much trophled as challenged by the thought that photography, unlike the other arts, traced Its origin not to the mythic roots of ancient ritual but to modern technology. In Cambridge, at the very nerve center of a great technological institute. White yearned for spiritual transcendence. In San Francisco, at ease among the remoants among the mystical flower children. Cunningham remained the complete realist.

Yet each could look back on a career that embraced attitudes very different from those upheld at the end. Cunningham was, at the start and for some years thereafter. very much the romantic, producing dreamy, soft-focus pic-tures in the Whistlerian mode. Her early work recalls us to the spirit of Bohemian estheticism that flourished in the period before the first World War. Looking at the nudes and draped figures of 1910-15, we are reminded that she was a contemporary of Isadora Duncan.

She went on to become, among other things, an accomplished formalist, with a passion for abstract form that sometimes astonished her, in later years, when she looked hack on it. He pictures of agaves, water hyacinths and the like, in the 1920's, bear comparison with Edward Weston's "Peppers." And the same photographer excelled as a of his work for the Works Progress Administration are still,

"Minor White was the very archetype of the artist-as-guru." (Hilton Eramer)

portraitist of movie stars for Vanity Fair in the 1930's. (Her famous "Magnolia Blossom" of 1925 combines, in a way, both her formalist interests and her gift for capturing the special glamour of her movie star subjects-though she never photographed a star as beautiful as this "Blossom.")

What we now tend to think of as the characteristic Cunningham style, because of its clarity and immediacy, probably dates from her association with f/64 Group founded by Ansel Adams, Willard Van Dyke, Cumningham and others San Francisco in 1933. (The name derived from the lens opening deemed to produce the most sharply defined image.) And it is certainly true that, from the 1930's onward, Cunningham's pictures acquired a new freedom and easo-a freedom from, among other things, what might be called artistic anxiety. It is worth remembering that the attitude we have come to prize in Cunningham's later work-that straightforward address to the subject that places the interests of life before those of art—was not something she came hy quickly or easily. In 1933, Imogen Cunningham was 50 years old.

White, whose career was shorter and much occupied with writing and editing with educational projects and exhibitions, was not without his own "contradictions." The mystic of the later years, producing photographic mediations on a Zen koan by concentrating his camera on the patterns of frost on the windows of his apartment in Rochester, N.Y., had earlier on-in 1939-41-worked as a master of the documentary mode. The pictures of iron-front buildings in Portland, Ore., that White took in these years as part 1 think, among the best he ever made. I certainly prefer them to the nature-abstractions that came to occupy so large a place in his art in the later years-but then, I have to confess to being of a very unmystical temperament myself.

The turn toward mysticism came, for White, in the 1950's, and in the chronology of his career that Peter Bunnell compiled a few years ago, one can find the sequence of titles and authors that influenced his course-Underhill's "Mysticism," Herrigel's "Zen and the Art of Archery," Huxley's "The Doors of Perception," the "I Ching," Gurdjieff, and so on. The camera became, for White, a form of spiritual meditation, and the things of this world lost, not their visual immediacy—for White had a flaviess eye—out something of their material reality, becoming instead metaphors of the unseen. Looking at White's later work, I am reminded of what Paul Klee wrote about himself in 1918: "My work probably lacks a passionate kind of humanity. I do not love animals and other creatures with an earthly heartiness . . . the idea of the cosmos displaces that of earthlioess . . . in my work, man is not a species, but a cosmic point."

This is what "the sacred" meant, I think, to Minor White, and it required a renunciation of that "earthly heartioess" that imogen Cunningham made the mark of all her later work. How we shall miss them both!

An exhibit of Imogen Cunningham's photographs opens Aug. 4 at the Witkin Gallery, 41 East 57th Street, and continues through Sept. 4. The gallery is open from 11 A.M. to 5 P.M. Tuesday through Saturday.

Glimpses of Lewis and Clark Expedition

By JOHN CANADAY

The Seattle Art Museum's Bicentennial observance is a tri-pertite celebration of the journey made by Captains Meriwether Lewis and Wil-Ham Clark through uncharted territory from the mouth of the Missouri River to the Pacific coast and back, the edventure that estabgreat adventure that estab-lished the claims of the United States in the Oregon Territory and opened the West to settlers and trade. As a voyage of discovery in 1803-6, the Lewis and Clark expedition was the most important since 1492 and until 1969. when astronauts landed on the moon. And as Willis F. Woods, director of the Sexttie museum, points out in his introduction to the exhibition catalogue, Lewis and Clark. had no preliminary test runs and "no aerospace scientists and physicians constantly checking their every breath and able to control the speed and direction of their vehicle"-their vehicles having been boat, horse and foot. Unlike later 19th-century expeditions into the American West, Lewis and Clark's had no artist (in lien of camera) to record scenes along the way. The original project for Seattle's Bicentennial show was to synthesize a pictorial record from paintings made as the West opened. The idea is effectively carried out in 90 paintings and drawings augmented by Lewis and Clark's own journals and maps and enlarged by a subexhibition of artifacts from the West Coast Indian cultures that they encountered. PHILADELPHIA As if a Bicentennial were not enough, Philadelphia is embarking on still another celebration. For the first week of August, the city will be host to the 41st Eucharistic Congress, which will present, among other events, an "Exhibition of Liturgical Arts." The installation will contain more than 360 works by some 180 artists. Besides the usual liturgical objects and vestments, which comprise about two-thirds of the show, there will he paintings. sculpture, drawings and prints-most of them contemporary and, surprisingly, 10 percent of them especially commissioned. A tradition begun in 1881, at the University of Lille, Eucharistic Congresses have been held on every continent and in cities as diverse as Bogota and Carthage, Chicago and Jerusalem. Attendance has grown from the original 800 pilgrims to the 1.5 million at Melbourne, in 1973. This year, it will include Archbishop Jadot. Apostolic Delegate to the United States; various Cardinals and Bishops; priests, religious and laity, as well representatives from several non-Catholic denominations. The Pope is hilled, hut it is unlikely he will be able to come, given his age (78) and less-than-robust health.

Actually, aome of the clergy feel his absence may be for the best, since his attendance, given the pernicious ways of the media, could detract from the simplicity of the Congress's theme. (As announced by the Pope himself, it is "The Eucharist and the Hungers of the Human Family"—hungers spiritual and physical.) A media fix on papal panoply could, on this occasion, antagonize the very public the Church wishes to reach.

Vivien Raynor is art critic

for the New Leader.

A similar air of discretion surrounds the art show, which was organized by a Philadelphia committee of two priests, a nun and five volunteers associated with the arts. It was decided, for instance, not to disclose the hudget, modest though it is said to be. Publicizing the money spent on spiritual food (ie. art) could give undue leverage to those who feel it should all go for physical food-the subject with which the Congress is, in any case, primarily concerned. (The discretion did not extend to a page in The Times on Sunday, July 18, advertising a limited edition of silver plates commemorating the Congress at $300 apiece.)

As much as anything, the show is an attempt, again modest, at reviving ecclesias-tical patronage of the arta. It is by no means the first such attempt in recent years, the most successful being the Chanel at Vence, France, designed by Henri Matisse and completed in 1951. Some of the artists commissioned may be regarded as unorthodoxare you ready for Alice Neel painting an Archhishop? Even Andy Warhol's name came up for discussion, briefly. Though some of the commissioning came from the Congress Itself, most was done by individuals and companies on its behalf. The rest of the show comprises loans, from the artists themselves when no sponsor could be found, and from churches, seminaries, museums, galleries and private collections. Noteworthy among them is a Matisse cope from the Museum of Modern Art, and the cross from Trier Cathedral in Germany, done by Ulrich The modern pieces were chosen on the assumption that "art can again have organic identity with the life of the world and with worship, which it had for thousands of years before art became a superfluous activity statement comes from the catalogue introduction by Victoria Donohoe, Director of Selections. A fragile-looking woman with translucent skin, piercing brown eyes and a soft mass of reddish hair, Miss Donohoe looks more like a Victorian illustrator's idea of a Celtic maiden than the art critic she is, for The Philadelphia Inquirer. She says she became involved with the project because of her interest in its subject matter, an interest doubtless sharpened by her experience as a painter of portraits.

says, an unexpectedly large and warm response, particularly from those in the crafts division. With the fine arts, though, the situation was somewhat complicated. Perhaps the idea of working for the Church seemed, to abstract artists, uncomfortably close to decorating. A work of great personality - possibly the artist's more then the subject's it comes close to realizing the exhibition's ideal.

Despite pictures such as Romare Bearden's lush collage of a madonna-like figure, portraiture fares better than general religious themes. Two outstanding examples are those of John Krol, Cardinal of Philadelphia, and Archbishop Jean Jadot, by Philip Pearlstein and Alice Neel, respectively. Commissioned by an anonymous donor, Pearistein required 32 hours of posing, to which the Cardinal agreed, commenting that this did not include having to enjoy the procedure. The artist's proverbial charm must have had its effect, for the Cardinai gave a total of 16 hours in the first weekend of sittings. Sideline observers are sure the artist softened his subject's expression as a result of their demurs, but Mr. Pearlstein, noting that every

At last summer's 17th meeting, which was held in a large field in Orlando, Fla., members from more than 100 rocket clubs attended, each wearing a distinguishing badge or patch from his or her own club. In the center of the field was a van with a loudspeaker which announced the goings-on at the launch complex, and the rest of the field was covered with wagons, exhibits, tables, and lines of people moving in and around various roped-off

It reaches the peak of its trajectory, noses over and ejects its parachute, while the owner tears off across the field in the general direction of the wind. The data from the trackers comes in and is recorded on a flight card, which is signed by an official and passed into the van for calculations.

The launch officer checks the power to the next launch pad, the safety officer checks the field and the sky, the trackers are alerted, and the launch officer starts the countdown all over again as another modeler moves back from the crowd and gets ready to follow his "bird" in its brief flight.

All model rockets are made from cardboard tubes and have nose cones and fins made of thin wood or lightweight plastic. They are powered by small, solid-fuel rocket engines which the hobbyist buys readymade, and which is produced by manufacturers who voluntarily adhere to strict safety standards which have been established by the National Association of Rocketry, the organization that sponsors these annual meets and sets safety standards.

The engines, which are only used once, contain their fuel in a paper casing and are available in a very wide range of thrusts (power) to match different size rockets and flight patterns. scapes sparkling with energy. The expected names are here, from George Catlin and Alfred Jacob Miller, who traveled into the frontier as early as the 1830's and recorded its terrain and inhabitants with documentary objectivity, to Albert Bierstadt and Thomas Moran who, by the 1870's, bad established the romantic image of the American West.

The early documentary paintings and the later romantic ones are fine, but it is the in-between work of less well-known painters that gives the Seattle exhibition its special character-painters such as John Mix Stanley. who accompanied the Pacific Railroad surveys, and Paul Kane, a Canadian trained in Italy but influenced stylistically by both Catlin and Stanley, who was just in time to catch scenes of Indian life before the white man's invasion. Stanley and Kane emerge as the stars of the show, partly because neither was really an expert painter. The technical skill that impresses us in Bierstadt and Moran is not there to divert our attention, to dilute for the observer the impact that makes Stanley's and Kane's paintings living records of fact sensitively perceived.

This, I think, is a point worth examining in connectioo with the rehabilitation of 19th-century American art that has brought Bierstadt and Moran out of basement storage and put them at the top of the lists within the last 20 years. Their rescue has been in part a symptom of our nostalgia for an America that has seemed lost, in another part the side result of a pendulum swing away from abstraction, even in small part a matter of commercial opportunism on the part of dealers. To a degree more important than any of the 19th - century American painters that we discarded for so long have been legitimized by a school of art-historical thought that attaches more importance to a painting as a document of the cultural ideals that produced it than to its character as an object to be judged and enjoyed in purely esthetic

The Seattle exhibition is the latest of this year's Bicentennial projects in which art has been put into service as the handmaiden of history. All across the country, paintings that never would have made the grade in the usual art-for-art's-sake exhibitions have been exempt from the kind of elitist judgments that recognize formal values alooe, with consequent taboos on narrative, historical, and moral themes. The Taboos have been waived in assembling Bicentennial exhibitions, whether on the scale of the National Gallery's "Eye of Jefferson" in Washington or Seattle's relatively small but very fine "Lewis and Clark's America: A Voyage of Discovery." It is quite possible that as an unexpected result of its review of the past, the Bicentennial will affect the course of American art in our 201st year. The Lewis and Clark exhibition, which opened July 15, will close Sept. 26 and will not travel, except for the photographic section, forwhich an itinerary is being arranged. Under the supervision of Janice Marsh, the paintings and Indian artifacts have been catalogued with appropriate quotations from the Lewis and Clark journals. An independent catalogue with passages from Mrs. Macapia's journal combined with Lewis and Clark's reproduces the photographs with admirable clarity. The two catalogues together can be purchased from the museum for $10 plus postage.

Prints Without a Darkroom

For those who live in small spartments or homes which do not have the room for a regular darkroom, and for those who cannot spare the time to process prints in the usual manner, the stabilization method offers an Ideal solution to the problem of making black - and - white prints at home.

A stabilization machine requires no running water and takes up very little space, so any small area such as a corner of a bedroom or even part of a walk-in closet-can easily be converted into a workable space to make prints. Instead of the usual mess involved in setting up trays for developer, stop bath and fixer (usually in a bathtub for those who live in apartments), all that is needed is the stabilization machine. It is not unattractive and can be left permanently exposed on a shelf without offending, along with an enlarger (which could be covered when not in use).

Most of the stabilization. machines currently being soid measure roughly two feet in length, and are less than one foot high and about five inches high. Two chemicals, called an activator and a stabilizer, are used with these machines, and these are poured into separate compartments of a tray inside the machine. After the printing paper (which contains dry developing agents in the emulsion) is exposed under the enlarger, it is fed between the machine's motor-driven rubher rollers to first bring the paper in contact with the activator fluid, and then the stabilizer liquid.

The paper emerges from the back of the machine in about 15 seconds fully developed, temporarily stable to room light (from a few days to a couple of weeks), and damp dry. To make a single print the conventional way takes anywhere from two to four minutes before the lights can be turned on and the print evaluated. Thus, a worker's output during a threehour printing session will increase tremendously.

Stabilization machines range in cost from under $150 to over $1,000, but the highpriced units are mainly intended for heavy-duty commercial work. Curiously, all but the $150 Spiratone Auto Level, the $150 Ritz Rollaprint, and the $160 Insta Print machines list for over $475. The Auto Level, which accepts paper up to 11x14 in size, is probably the most popular hrand among costconscious amateurs and it has a good reputation for reliability.

Other manufacturers of stabilization machines include Agfa-Gevaert, Oscar Fisher, Supreme Photo Products, Ilford and Kodak.

Most of the units on the market allow for the bottles of activator and stabilizer to he mounted unside down so that the solutions are automatically gravity fed into the trays, keeping the levels continuously at the proper

Richard Busch is features editor of Popular Mechanics manufacturers, one quart of activator (average price for the various brands sold, about $2.25 per quart) will process 200 to 300 8x10 prints.

The less expensive units are drained by tubes; the more expensive ones have separate bottles for draining. Most of the higher-price machines also accept paper larger than 11x14 inches.

similar in cost and appearance-and give results very similar in quality-to conventional printing papers, and can be purchased in singleor double-weight thicknesses. The more durable doubleweight paper is generally preferred when the worker plans to fix and wash the prints later on to make them permanent.

Papers come in a variety of surfaces and contrast grades, from soft to fairly contrasty, although there is not as wide a variety available as there is in conventional papers. Ektamatic SC is a variable-contrast paper and is printed by using ordinary Polycontrast filters in the enlarger, in grades one through four. An extremely contrasty (No. 6) paper is available (only in single weight) from Agfa-Gevaert. And Supreme offers several papers with colored backgrounds, in medium contrast

Most of the papers give neutral or slightly warm-tone blacks, clean whites, and a good tonal scale (from a properly exposed and developed negative). Generally, there is a slight shift from warm to cooler blacks when the prints are fixed. Also, there tends to be a general over-all lightening of the prints during fixing. Some workers adjust to this by printing slightly darker if they know ahead of time that they will be fixing and washing their prints for permanence.

Because the stabilization emulsions are softer than most other papers, manufacturers recommend the use of a hardening fixer to keep the prints from being scratched and bent during the wash cycle.

there is no immediate need to fix and wash the prints. The image will stay intact for loog periods if kept away from the strong ultra-violet rays of sunlight. Thus, many professionals are able to send unfixed prints off to publishers for reproduction without worrying about image degradation.

However, if subjected to strong ultra-violent light, a yellowing and fading will occur in a matter of a few bours, or sooner.

The damp-dry prints that emerge from the machine become completely dry in about 30 minutes on a dry day, wheo they are placed face up on a table or in a rack that allows air to circulate around them. In humid weather, they tend to remain tacky longer. (Warning: unfixed stabilization prints should never be placed in a beat drier because they will contaminate the apron and stick to the height. According to the metal drum or plate if placed face down. They should also be kept away from fixed prints to avoid contamination.)

One of the drawbacks of stabilization printing is that no manipulations of the print can be made during development. The printer who is used. to rubbing a bit of fullstrength developer on highlights with his fingers to bring up those areas, or who Stabilization papers are likes to vary development time from print to print according to the effect desired, must forget about such procedures when going the stabilization route.

The only manipulations that can be performed are those that can be made during exposure, such as dodging and burning-in, plus whatever can be done after the print is developed—for example, using ferricyanide (a bleaching agent) during the fixing process to lighten highlights.

On the other hand, this standardized developing aspect of stabilization printing can also be an asset. Once the proper exposure for a print has been determined, any number of identical prints can be exposed quickly, one after the other, and then all of them fun off in the machine in continuous sequence with no risk of variation in tonality because of any inconsistencies in processing time. For big print runssuch as a new family portrait that will be sent out to relatives and friends at holiday times or on birthdays-this can be a great time-saver.

The printer can also save time in other ways, By waiting until an entire printing session is over before making final decisions about which ones are worth saving, only those that pass the test need be fixed and washed. The rest, which would normally bave to go through the fixing process during the course of conventional-paper printing session, can be tossed away, thereby economizing on both time and chemicals.

It also takes less time to get set up at the beginning of a printing session, since no chemicals have to be mixed. or trays set up. And since the tions can be left in the machine for a couple of days without losing their strength. the printer can quit working after a couple of hours, turn off the motor, put the prints in a box, and then pick right up again on the following evening at the point where the previous day's work stopped. (After a couple of days, however, the chemicals should be drained and the trays and rollers rinsed with water. Otherwise, the chemicals, particularly the activator, will oxidize and weaken.) But aside from just the time saved by stabilization printing, and the convenience factor, perhaps its most exciting aspect is the way it frees the photographer to concentrate more oo the purely creative aspects of printing. Exacting printmakers often make a dozen or more attempts on a single negative before they get the print the way they want it.

There is considerable room for argument about the rightful claimant to the title of the world's oldest bridge magazine. Americans can point with pride to The Bridge. World' which has appeared monthly since 1929. The British claimant is "Bridge _187.50 | City Magazine," which was founded in 1926 by A. E. Manning-1/1A_194.50 Foster but which ceased publication during World War II

The English magazine, which dealt with auction bridge in its earliest years, celebrated its 50th birthday this summer with a justifia-PENTING ble fanfare and several articles recalling far-off days. One of these is by George Harvey, the only surviving contributor to the first issue, and another is by Terence TEXAS MISTED Reese, who edited a rival publication in the late thirties. The most famous edi-433 tor of "Bridge Magazine" was Ewart Kempson, who along with the Bridge World's" Sonny Moyse was a candidate for the title of the world's most entertaining bridge writer. Another candidate was S. J. "Skid". Simon, and a 30-year-old articla from his pen enlivens the magazine's Golden Jubilee

"If there is a flaw in my game," wrote Simon, "which, I suppose is possible, it is that I often fail to profit by the opponent's fidgets. This is in no way due to any sense of ethics inferences from emotions are only unethical when it is partner who is being emotional—but because I am, by nature, oblivious. This plaintive note would be echoed by bridge writers of all times and all places.

Play Hard to Win

BIEL, Switzerland - Kenneth Rogoff, my fellow United States representative at the Interzonal Tournament here, remarked after his stunning defeat of Grandmaster Jan Smeikal of Czechoslovakia, one of the pretourney favorites, 'If you want to do well in a tough competition such as this one, you have got to win your fighting games."

Rogoff, a grandmaster candidate, takes it for granted that a player of his strength can be counted on to bring home those encounters in which his opponent is surprised in the opening and battered down by relentless pressure. However, in his game with Smejkal, the question of who had the advantage in the early middle game was hard to decide.

As Rogoff put it, "without reaching any clear answer, I threw everything into finding the best move each time, and it worked."

Smejkal's aggressive 13 . . . N-Q5 was based not only on his general plan of obtaining active piece play, but also on the recognition that the tame 13...N-K2 would land Black in great difficulties after 14 P-B3 and 15 P-KN4, creating pressure to break up the kıngside pawns.

Of course, the exchange 14 NxN, PxN damaged the black pawn structure in the center. but Smeikal counted on the sequence 15 N-N5 (not 15 QxQP?, N-N5ch), KR-B1; 16 R-BI, N-R2; 17 B-B4, P-N4; 18 B-Q2 (not 18 BxQP?, P-QR3), P-QR3; 19 N-R3 to sideline the white knight. In the absence of that knight, Smejkal hoped to launch a kingside attack with 19 . . . P-N5, 21 ... B-Q6 and 22 ... Q-B4. Meanwhile, Rogoff set his queenside pawn phalanx in motion with 21 P-N4 and 24

After the forced 25 BxN to prevent 25 . . . N-B6ch, Smejkal's 25 . . . BxB appeared to give Black a hammerlock on the position, expecially if White had to retreat with 26 R-R1. But Rogoff's errant knight re-entered the game with vengeance by 26 N-B4, counterattacking with fork threats at Q6 and QN6 and thus smashing Smejkal's back on his heels.

Would-be Youthful Mars Explorers Have Their Day

structure of the rocket and the paper casing for the engine minimize the possibility of injury-all that would happen is that there would be bits of paper, plastic and balso wood flying about, This fact, combined with the system of remotely igniting rocket engines electricaland other features of NAR's safety code, have given model rocketry an enviable safety record; as of now no one has ever been seriously injured by a model rocket that was built and flown according to the rules laid down by this code.

Model rockets can be built by almost anyone, from 12year-olds to grandfathers, either by starting with a kit (there are over 100 different ones available) or by starting from scratch with the basic components. Until a few years ago most model rocket builders had to get their parts and supplies by ordering them from mail-order specialty houses, but since the hobby has grown it is no longer unusual to find rocket supplies in local hobby stores. However, for the beginner, the best way to get started learning about rockets is get a catalog from one of the larger -manufacturers and study the wealth of information contained in them. Among the larger manufacturers who offer such catalogs are: Flight Systems, Inc. (FSI), 9300 East 68th St. Raytown, MO 64133; Estes Industries, Penrose CO 81240; Centuri Engineering, Box 1988, Phoenix, AZ 85001; Kopter Rotor Recovery Products, Box 98226, Pittsburgh, PA 15227; Aerospace Vehicles, Inc. (AVI), Mineral Point, WI 53565. When writing to them for catalogs, include $1 for postage and handling. All modelers will need certain basic equipment right from the start. The first essential is a launch pad which supports a rod that guides the rocket on its first few feet of flight. The pad can be made of metal, plastic or wood; but the best are the LP-2 series from FSI, which are made of steel. Beginners can even build their own, using information and drawings supplied in FS1'a catalog; just be sure that the rod is at least 36 inches long, and that a metal deflector is in-

away from the ground, An electrical launch system which will supply ignition power to the rocket engine at the right moment is the next item needed. All boxes with simple buttons and do extensive testing of cluded to aim the exhaust

to systems that have a light to indicate the readiness of the circuit, but they should include at least 20 feet of wire between the control box and the clips that attach to the rocket engine ignitor. Launch systems that have the continuity check light are the best because they prevent embarassing failures and add has a technical division which to the real m. as well as to safety. Most manufacturers sell

ually consist of their cheapest launch pads and electrical systems, a small rocket kit, and one or two engines. Any of these starter packages, as well as most other kits are suitable for the beginner, hut careful attention should be paid to the catalog description of each kit. Estes and Centuri list their kits by skill levels, which is very helpful. FS1 has many small kits, for beginners, plus a wide range of large models for the more experienced modeler. Telemetry transmitters are available from Competition Model Rockets as well as kits to compete in all NAR-sanctioned events. Kopter Rotor Recovery Products has a line of unique kits that eject helicopter hlades instead of parachutes for recovery after each flight, and they also sell large rocket-powered gliders that ascend under power and return in a glide. AVI has a very wide assortment of kits, as well as other gadgets of interest to astromodellers: balloons, kites and space

After studying one of the catalogs mentioned, most beginners will find that they can get started in this fas-cinating hobby for a surprisingly small amount of money. The launch equipment mentioned can usually be purchased for less than $10; and many kits can be purchased at prices that range from $2 to $20. Disposable engines (as mentioned previously they are only used once) come in packs of three, and sell for anywhere from $1 to $10, depending on make and power, or thrust program-

Rocketry's low cost has enabled many schools and youth groups to include it as part of their program or Cissas as a teaching tool and even the Cub Scouts now have an official rocketry program for TET 155-20 ASSES 129 937 19.24 39.45 their members.

The central organization of this hobby is the National Association of Rocketry, whose headquarters address is: Box 725, New Providence, N. J. 07974. They not only set safety and contest standmanufacturers sell various ands for the hobby, they also lauress types which range from small evaluate and review products rocket engines before awarding them the NAR Safety Certificate, which qualifies them for use by NAR members. The monthly journal of the NAR carries reports oo this testing, as well as reports about rocket meets, new designs and ideas, and official reports. The association also materials at low cost to members. Members can also get discounts on supplies purchased through the mail from the major manufacturers. Model rocketry information is also available in the pages of Model Builder magazine, which carries a regular column on rockets, as well as on many other modeling hobbies. This magazine is available in most hobby stores; or by ordering direct from Model Builder magazine, 621 W. 19th St., Costa Mesa, CA 92627. There is also an excellent manual titled "Handbook of Model Rocketry," by a former NASA engineer, G. Harry Stine. This book is highly recommended for all rocketry enthusiasts and is the classic text in the field. The latest edition is sold by Centuri Engineering Co., at the address given above. Model rocketry is an activity uniquely suited to our times. It teaches enlightens, and enlivens the lives of its participants, and focuses their attention upwards, in the inevitable direction that mankind will be going.

Collectors wishing to enlarge their Bicentennial observance philatelically will find a rich store of books to help them pursue the links between American history and the stamps that commemorate it.

Timed for the observance is "Americana," a 270-page book with more than 200 U. S. stamps in color. The book groups stamps under 10 historical periods, with commentary under each stamp and an introductory text for each period. It begins with the Magna Carta and the invention of the printing press and Columbus' discovery of America and concludes with the conquest of space, with an epilogue for the commemoratives marking the Bicentennial. A section at the end, which illustrates all U. S. issues in black and white, may be used as an elbum.

Three silver Crowns from the Third World

These three silver Crowns have all been struck by the British Royal Mint. Each commemorates a special event in the development of a young nation of the Third World. Two mark important anniversaries, and the other the actual creation of a new country.

All the coins are crown size and struck to proof standard in strictly limited numbers in solid sterling silver. Each one you order will come in a special

Justice Triumphs Over Greed

State Attorney General Louis J. Lefkowitz has again interceded on behalf of confused collectors. Last year his office cracked down on a Florida-based distributor (Italcambio, Inc.) for improper advertising of a so-called Cambodian gold coin. Now it has moved against a private "mint" for advertising a "historic $20 gold piece"—at a price of $20 plus $2 hendling - that is in fact less than dime-sized and contains less than $3 worth of gold. (In other words, it is a $20 gold piece only in its price.)

The advertisements featured enlarged illustrations of the tiny gold piece, and also "enlarged" the imaginations of readers by employing a combination of wordassociations designed to play up to the public's already strong enthusiasm for Bicentennial mementoes, especially gold and official issues. This combination included the firm's official-sounding name and location - the Columbia Mint of Washington, D. C .and the use of the ringing phrase "$20 United States of America Bicentennial Gold Piece" in banner headlines at the top of the advertisements. The firm was evidently aware that the U.S. Mint's real gold coins-discontinued in 1932-were and still are referred to generally as "gold pieces." Thus there was no need to use the words "gold

Another potent "word association" employed in the ads was the phrase "An Official Issue of The Columbia Washington, D.C.," which appeared just above the order form, and within the order form itself, a whiteon-black label with the words "Official Order Form." For purposes of reader identification, an untouched reproduction of the illustration of this gold medal, exactly as it appeared in the advertisements, is shown above.

Following is a summary of the official statement of the

The office of New York N.Y. Attorney General's actions and results, as reported in early July by his executive assistant, Charles W. Stickle: New York Attorney General Lefkowitz has obtained an assurance from the Columbia Mint, Inc., 1709 New York Avenue Northwest. Washington, D. C. 20006, of a discontinuance of misleading advertising practices and an offer of restitution to all penchasers. The company advertised in general news-papers and numismatic publications throughout the country to announce the offering of a so-called "United States of America Bicentennial Gold Piece" at a cost of $22.

Attorney General Lefkowitz charged that the offer-ing was misleading in that purchasers were led to believe that they were buying "an historic gold piece" that had been unavailable (as legal tender) to the American public for more than 40 years. He said the advertisements implied that this "gold piece" was the successor to the memorable U.S. $20 gold coin - familiarly known as the "double eagle" — which was by law discontinued over 40 years ago. The pieces being offered by the Columbia Mint contain less than $3 worth of actual gold.

Part of the advertising claimed that the "gold pieces" were a "limited edition" and that after final "minting" on July 4, 1976, no further pieces would be struck and "special dies" would be presented to the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, with a record of each purchaser's name. (The Division of Numismatics of the Smithsonian has already announced that it has no knowledge of, or interest in, this material.) The Attorney General's state-

Proper Summer Care

Bearded iris grow from a rhizome, a fleshy tuber. It rests horizontally, parallel to the soil line (an inch below) and serves as a storage for extra food. Both leaves and roots emerge from it. Tall bearded iris can be divided any time after they flower, but the most accepted is now. Dig up a clump that has been in place for three years or more, is encroaching on its neighbors or is dying out in the middle. Cut off the leaves to a height of two

Prepare the soil in the planting area by adding compost, peat moss and fertilizer. Also and a handral of lime ate acid soil. All these ingredients are worked in to the soil to the depth of the zomes have been removed from the soil before soil preparation.

With a sharp knife, cut the rhizomes into sections, using only the best portions found at the outer edge of a clump. Examine them carefully and discard any that are soft or slimy, a sign of the deadly iris borer. Then reset the rhizomes in groups of three rhizomes, about a foot apart.

I like to dig a hole and make a ridge in the center on which to rest each rhizome. Arrange the roots over the side of this ridge. The goal is to have each rhizome placed one half to one inch below the soil line. To enchor securely, firm them gently with your feet. Then water immediately and continue to do so in periods of drought.

If you are going to plant iris for the first time and have ordered some from a nursery, they are usually shipped now. The above instructions can be followed.

Oriental poppies require an entirely different procedure. They have no rhizomes but grow from an elongated tap root which resembles a carrot. This root is planted in midsummer when the poppy is dormant.

To plant a poppy, dig a hole in well-drained soil of average fertility, about three inches deeper than the length of the root, Set it in carefully so the root crown is three inches below the soil line. (I found this deep planting hard to do the first time and was sure I was smothering the plant. However, later in the summer when healthy sprouts of new leaves appeared, I knew I bad followed the right directions.) Poppies should be watered at planting time and during dry spells; they should be covered with a mulch over the first win-

Poppies can also be divided, but not usually for the first five years. Clusters of roots can be separated and planted, or root cuttings taken and set in e coldframe.

Poppies and bearded Iris are so spectacular they can stand on their own, But they blend well with companion plants that bloom when they

Two edging plants go very well with iris. The clear rose color of sea thrift (Armeria maritima laucheana) and of cottage pink (Dianthus plumarius) make lovely companions to the blue, purple and lavender species.

There are also many other forms of iris. The dwarf bearded species are ideal for the front of borders or in rock gardens. They bloom earlier than the tall bearded types but are similar and should be treated in the same manner.

The Siberian and Japanese "flat-top" bloom after the tall bearded. Both are beardless, narrow lear, and flowers are in purple shades or white. Unlike the bearded, they grow from root stocks in slightly acid soil and are divided in spring.

Thunderstorms may not soak the soil deeply; check gardens frequently, in spite of them, and water if necessary. . . . Last call to feed evergreens. . . . Plant biennial seed in a nursery bed... Keep tomatoes, peppers, eggplant mulched... Alert for lacebugs on andromeda; use Sevin.

Keep Them Flowering

This is a pointer for newcomers to the trowel and spade club. Certain annual flowers have a way of giving out in midsummer if they are allowed to do so. They flower for a while and then, having performed brilliantly, shut off and start to form seed. That is if they are not tended properly.

The trick is to keep faded flowers picked off annuals when they form. This spurs new growth and continual flowering. Plant breeders are mindful of this problem and are ever trying to breed self-cleaning flowers. These new vari-sties will drop their faded blooms and keep on blooming. The hybrid grow-from-seed geraniums will do this and so will some of the dwarfer zinnias and hybrid petunias. But some annuals are notorious for being lazy, particularly snapdragons, cosmos, annual phlox. The key to keep flowers sppearing is removal of faded blooms.

If plants become floppy and languid-especially petunias and impatiens—get out the pruning shears or scissors and cut them back. They may look short for a while, but with some water-soluble fertilizer for a boost, they should come back fast with flowers.

Answers/Questions

GINGER ROOT PLANT [July 11]

E.V., Indianapolis, Ind., has a thriving ginger root plant. There ere roots on the surface and several tall plants developing. She asked if these should be transplanted. Yes, they can be. Ginger is a tropical forest plant of southeast Asia and grows from a fleshy rootstock (like iris), which is the source of ginger. The rhizomes are grown in humus-rich potting soll and planted about an inch below the soil surface in a four to five-inch clay pot. The long tall leaves push up to about two feet or so. The root will multiply and expand in time. These can be divided, as with iris rhizomes, and replanted in separate pots. Ed.

LEAVES CHANGING COLOR [July 11]

E.L. Jr., Manhatian, is growing alternanthers, a bedding plant. One variety has green leaves, the other burgundy. He asked why the plant with burgundy leaves bas turned green. Color in bedding plants such as alternanthera, coleus, etc. is genetically controlled. However, variants in light exposure, alkaline or acid-soil reaction can alter the coloration to some extent. For example, deep green coloration on coleus leaves may fade in too bright non while deep maroons often become richer in shade. Ed.

AFRICAN VIOLET PROBLEM [July II]

Mrs. R.E.W., Birmingham, Mich., noted that her African violet leaves are becoming limp and lifeless although the plant is still blooming. She woodered what caused this and the solution. Emily Nathan, a Manhattan reader, suggests, "If African violets develop long stalks and are replanted by inserting the long stalk into a deeper pot of soil, the leaves will often become limp even though the plant continues to bloom. I break off the long stalk and replant the African violet in fresh soll to reroot in a mixture of equal parts of African violet soil, vermiculite and perlite with a small bit of charcoal and lime. The plant flourishes." Limp leaves can olso be caused by overwatering which causes the outer leaves to rot near the crown. Ed. MAPLE TREE SEEDS [July 11]

M.S.P., Poughkeepsie, N.Y., asked how to germinate seeds of the paperbark maple (Acer griseum). We consulted with William Flemer, Princetoo Nurseries, N.J. who told us that the paperbark maple seed is not very fertile. There are many blind seeds. Clip wings from the ripe seeds when gathered in fall. This will belp them stay in the ground after planted. Choose a sheltered spot outdoors and make rows in the soil about an inch deep, plant the seed and cover with sand. Keep the rows clean of weeds and watered. Be patient. There may be some germination the first spring, and possibly more the secood spring.

HIBISCUS PRUNING [July 11]

C. M-M., Ithaca, N.Y. has a hibiscus plant blooming indoors and growing profusely. She asked when to prune it to cootrol its size without interrupting the flowering. Mrs. Charles R. Daniels, a New York State reader, offers the following help. "Buds or no buds, prune the hibiscus anytime to keep it within bounds. Make the cut above new growth, Hibiscus is a heavy feeder and requires much water. Root prime the bottom and side roots every two years and replace the root ball in the pot with fresh soil. The plant needs sun, bumidity and warmth."

PEONY BUDS BROWNED [July 18]

J.H.H., Pittsburgh, Pa. asked why the buds oo an apparently healthy peony turned brown and failed to open and the leaves became dry. Peonies are highly susceptible to a gray mold in spring called botrytis. To prevent it, start spraying plants when young growth breaks ground with benomyl and repeat every two weeks until blooms open. Ed. Mrs. Wilbur J. Fisher, an upstate New York reader, writes that she uses the old remedy Bordeaux mixture and has very few blasted buds.

TREE PRUNING AND BLEEDING [July 18]

J.A.L., Coxsackie, N.Y., asked if there is any way to stop bleeding of tree branches when they are pruned. Bleeding or flow of sap from trees ofter pruning is more unsightly than harmful. The way to avoid it is in correct timing. Some trees such as maples, birches, walnuts and yellowwood are known as bleeders if they are pruned in early spring or when dormant. Delay pruning of these trees to summer when they are in full leaf. Other trees can be pruned in winter or early

Building a Terrace: Part II

By BERNARD GLADSTONE

(This is the second half of a two-part story on how to build an attractive looking concrete terrace in grid form that is, by pouring the concrete into a framework of 2x4's laid edgewise on the ground and assembled with. rustproof acrews or nails.)

After the framework of redwood 2x4's has been assembled on the ground as described in last weak's column on this page, the final step before mixing and pouring concrete into the open squares is to level the surface of the entire grid. For this a long straight board is used with a spirit level placed on top. Tha board is laid across the surface of the 2x4's to make certain the top edges of all are in line, and to see if the framework is level in both directions (unless a slight perch of about 1 inch in 10 feet is desired to insure drainage).

If there are any spots where the 2x4 framework is slightly low, small scraps of stone or pieces of slate can be used to shim up the wood.

Wherever the framework seems too high, scrape some of the dirt away from underneath the strips. After all leveling is complete, drive a series of small stakes in place around the outside of the grid framework to keep it from shifting.

As explained in last week's column, one advantage of making a concrete terrace in this manner is that the concrete can be mixed in small batches, filling only a few grids at a time, if desired. Another advantage is that grids can be tinted or colored for example some boxes can be green, others red, others grey, etc. If this is the plan, then obviously it makes sense to mix enough concrete for boxes of only one color at a time. After these are poured and smoothed off, the next color is mixed.

There is also one other possibility when building a terrace in this mannersome grids can be left full of soil instead, of concrete to serve as permanently built-in planting boxes for shrubs or flowers, or as spots where small shade trees can be planted.

Concrete for a project such as this can be mixed by hand, but the work will be much faster and easier if a portable power-driven cent mixer is rented. If the handyman decides to mix by hand (in a large wheelbarrow or on a sheet of old plywood laid on the ground), then the simplest way is to buy materials in dry bags of the premixed sand, cement and gravel. Sold in most lumber yards and building materials centers, these have all ingredients (except water) proportioned out so that one or two bags at a time can be easily mixed. This costs slightly more than buying separate sand, cement and gravel, but it eliminates the need for measuring, and worrying about where large loads of sand and gravel can be dumped.

bags of cement, plus separate sand and gravel can be ordered. A typical good concrete mix will consist of one part cement, two parts sand, and three parts gravel—all measured by volume (usually by shovelfuls as thrown into the mixer). Most dealers will be able to tell the homeowner how much sand gravel and cement will be needed if they are given the over-all dimensions of the terrace. As a rule, six cubic feet of dry materials (one of cement, two of sand, and three of gravei) will make about four cubic feet of concrete when mixed with water. and a one-bag batch of this size will take anywhere from 4 to 51/2 gallons of water, depending on how damp the sand is. If color is to be added, a maximum of 5 to 10 pounds of dry, lime-proof color can be added to each bag (90 pounds) of cement.

If a mixer is rented, then pushing these down just flush with the surface by patting repeatedly with the edge of a 2x4, or with a wood float. After the concrete has hardened for about two weeks, the remaining residue of grayish-white cement stains can be washed off the exposed edges of the redwood strips. by scrubbing with a stiff fiber brush dipped into a dilute solution of musiatic scid. Wear nubber gloves to protect the hands, and rinse the acid solution off with plenty of water as each section is finished. To highlight the wood strips, some people may prefer to paint the exposed edges with a coat of redwood stainsealer, but this will have to be renewed at least once a year if the fresh color is to

Can you recommend! the coocrete reasonably anything that will take them out without removing the orange smooth, and level with the color?-J.S., Riverdale, N. Y.

A: This is a tough problem. There are many variations of ball point ink, and no one solvent that works on all of them. In fact, some respond to no solvent that is available; to the consumer. The first thing I would try is alcohol—apply it liberally and keep the marks wet for a few minutes before rubbing hard or trying to wipe it off. If this lightens the stains, then repeat. If alcohol has no effect, try acetone (or nail polish remover), but try on a corner of the fabric first to see if it affects the color. Another solvent you can try is the material being sold (under various brand names) as a replacement for carbon tetrachloride. It's available in most hardware stores. If this, too, doesn't work, then the only other suggestion I have heard of is to ask your local dry cleaner for a little of the solvent he uses for removing ball point ink from fabric. If he will give you a little, it may work

Q: Our house has cedar shakes (shingles) which have been either painted or stained white, and this white is now chalking off. The front of the house gets the most exposure, and it is darker than the rest. We would now like to stain these shakes. Can we get a white stain or preservative?-Mrs. J.A.P., Harrison, N.Y.

A: A true stain will not take over paint, so if the shingles are painted you will have to stick to paint. However, several companies do make a type of heavy bodied stain which is more of a paint than a stain, and you can use this over your old shingles, painted or stained (as long as the paint) has weathered). Follow directions on the can for preparation and application.

Q: Prior to painting an unfinished chest I gave it a coat of clear shellac as a sealer. The shellac I used was well over a year old. It never dried hard and is still tacky. I gave it several alcohol rubs, but it is still a little tacky, elthough less so. What can be done to remove the remaining tackiness-more alcohol rubs? How about sanding?-L.R.P. Brooklyn, N.Y.

A: When shellac is more than six mooths old it should not be used—as yon've found ont—because it often doesn't dry. Alcohol is the solvent and will remove it. Although you doo't say, it sounds to me as though you merely wiped the elcohol on with a rag. Try again, but this time dip a piece of steel wool in the alcohol and scrub with this. Do a small section at a time, then immediately wipe off with a separate rag before the alcohol evaporates. This should remove the residue. Theo sand with medium grit paper and dust thoroughly.

Chase Manhattan has experienced earnings problems

Yet insiders report that Mr. Rockefeller's position is se-cure, largely because Chase is about to undergo a profit turnsround after taking its himps with massive loan losses in the last four quarters. "I don't think there's any chance he'll leave just at the point when the turnaround he's worked so hard for is occurring," said one Chase officer.

But speculation intensified recently when the Chase Manhattan Corporation, the bank's parent holding company, announced an important top-level realignment of its management committee.
Thomas G. Labrecque, a 37year-old executive vice president, was added to the com-mittee, which is the bank's administrative body, and the duties of the other -seven members were rea-

Vacancy at the F.D.A.

WASHINGTON - If Wall Street can be said to dash off its gossip with gusto, it has nothing on the nation's capital, But on one juicy item, at least, Washingtonians

The White House has decided not to try to replace Alexander M. Schmidt, commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration, before the November elections. Dr. Schmidt, who has held the post since April 1973, is to stay on until December.

The interest in the F.D.A. post stems from two major points. For one, Dr. Schmidt bad taken the position with the understanding that he would only serve in the current Administration — and had announced his resignation recently. More basically, the job has become a hotseat, the focus of often bitter criticism - less than two weeks ago in the form of a congressional report-concerning the agency's alleged laxity in drug testing procedures.

As a White House official explained it, the search for a new F.D.A. chief had been deferred because finding a qualified commissioner acceptable to Congress would really not be feasible before the election. That will probably mean no policy initiatives from the drug watchdog until a new Administration enmes to power next year. But it will also mean a good offset to any doldrums that might affect this town's favorite sport after the elections. Who will replace Dr. Schmidt? PHILIP SHABECOFF

To some observers, the changes reflected additional ferment within Chase, but Mr. Rockefeller remained firmly in control as chairman with Willard C. Butcher as president, Mr. Rockefeller called the changes "refine-ments" to "further sharpen the committee's effectiveness

As for Mr. Simon, sources

alose to top Chase management note he has never been a commercial banker, having been a partner at Salomon Brothers, the investment banking house, before joining the Nixon Administration. Moreover his position in the present, and a possible future, Ford Administration is not reported to be in danger, in light of the strong economic outlook at present.

In fact, the central criti-cism of Mr. Rockefeller, whose name is synonymous with American wealth, has been that be is more of a world traveler and diplomat than a banker. Even Mr. Rockefeller's critics wonder what, aside from bis own in-ternational stature, Mr. Simon could offer Chase.

And so, while rumors that Mr. Simon might replace Mr. Butcher as president under Mr. Rockefeller have existed, they died a quick death. "Butcher is a banker," said one informed source, "and bankers are what Cbase needs." Witness Mr. La-

Carrying the rumors full circle, Mr. Rockefeller is said be interested in Mr. Simon's job as Treasury Secretary. assuming the Ford Administration remains in power and Mr. Simon decides to leave. That rumor, and the others, may well survive even to the day of Mr. Rockefeller's scheduled retirement three years from now at age 65.

As for the gossip surrounding Marine Midland, it also arises partly from earnings difficulties. The bank dipped into the red in last year's fourth quarter, continued to lose money in this year's first three months and finally climbed back into the black in the second quarter with net operating income of about $3 million.

A year ago John S. Lawson resigned as Marine'a president for personal reasons, which have yet to be ex-plained, and later joined an investment banking firm. At that point, Edward W. Duffy, chairman, took on the additional title of president but he is known to be actively seeking a oew man.

Apparently timing had something to do with linking the Smith and Needham names to Marine, It seemed logical to many for Mr. Smith, one of the Government's chief bank regulators as Comptroller of the Currency, to take his expertise to a bank after resigning from his Government

Marine is in need of greater maoagement depth, so why not Mr. Smith? What the rumor mills ignored was, first, that Mr. Smith, a lawyer and former lobbyist, had never actually worked as a banker. Second, be might be prevented by law from joining a bank right after leaving government The law says a man in Mr.

Smith's position must wait two years before joining a bank. It was admittedly passed before holding companies existed, so he theoreti-cally could join Marine Midland'a corporate parent. but such a move is considered highly unlikely.

Mr. Needham is not under active consideration at Marine for one of the same reasous as Mr. Smith: no banking experience. Before he became chairman of the Big Board, he was a member of the Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington and before that he was a partner in a public accounting firm.

Also, wheo he left the stock exchange in May, he had about 16 months left on his contract. And he will remain a consultant to the Big Board and stands to receive about $700,000 from it in the next three years. Thus, he is obvi-ously under no monetary pressure to accept a new job quickly, although he is understood to be looking ac-

In any event, Marine is understood to have ruled out the former Comptroller while it continues its search for a man of in-depth experience, preferably with a background in overseas banking.

Moreover, Marine has not ruled out appointing a president from within, and several candidates are in line, including Eugene T. Mann and Charles F. Mansfield, both group executive vice presidents. Still, Wall Street is Wall Street and rumors no doubt will continue to link Mr. Needham, Mr. Smith and Mr. Simon with various companies and institutions until they settle the matter by joining up somewbere. It will be irrepressible speculation as usual in the financial com-

Vapor was a "cast off," a subsidiary that the beleaguered Singer Company had almost absent mindedly picked up in a pell mell drive for diversification out of the sewing machine business that all but brought Singer to the brink of bankruptcy. Strapped for capital, Singer sold Vapor in the buy out Mr. Kohlberg arranged for about $38 million.

Cast offs are an important item on the supply side of the buy out business. Many smaller companies, viable enough on their own, do not thrive in the conglomerate atmosphere.

"A lot of these mom and pop companies," says an associate of Mr. Kohlberg's, "just can't meet management objectives in a big corpora-

"On the other hand," he continues, "put out on their own with the kind of financing and management monitoring that Jerry can help provide, smaller companies really can mature to the point where they'll give you five-for-one on your money."

Many of the propositions that come Mr. Kohlberg's way are either considered too marginal or just don't meet the criteria he has laid down. "We won't do real estate, retail, technological compa-

mes that need a lot of develproposals come from the con-glomerates themselves, as in the Singer case. For example, Mr. Kohiberg recently designed the $50 million package that reshaped Rockwell International Corporation's industrial components division into the now privately owned Incom International

Many of the other propositions originate with the owners of privately held companies who either want to cash in on a lifetime of work, settle estate problems, or both.

There is the Sterndent Corporation, for instance, a then privately owned dental supply company that Bear, Stearns and other investors bought into at $2.50 a share in 1965. Subsequently taken public, the stock reached an all time high of $37 before a 100 percent stock dividend in 1970. It is currently trading at around 12½ on the New York Stock Exchange a little over a year after beat-ing off a tender offer of $14

"Sterndent was kind of my first baby. I've been with the company for 12 years," says Mr. Kohlberg, emphasizing his conviction that buy outs tend to be long-term rather than quick turnaround, fast money situations. Mr. Kohlberg is chairman of the company's executive committee and helped to plan much of the strategy that enabled Sterndent to repulse the tender offer that the Magus Corporation made last year. One reason why the soft-spoken Mr. Kohlberg thinks of buy outs as long-term propositions is his "bootstrap" approach to financing In the Vapor deal, for examole, the lenders - the Prudential Insurance Company and First Chicago Investment, a subsidiary of the First Chicago Corporation—took $25.6 million worth of both secured and subordinated notes. They got the fur-ther incentive of an equity kicker - warrants entitling them to buy 500,000 sbares at one-fifth of last month's public offering price.

That kind of borrowing is characteristic of most buy outs. Since they become debt of the new entity, the loans in effect enable the new stockholders to buy the old company with its own money and with a comparatively thin layer of equity.

The risks implicit in a heavy debt load are one of the reasons why Mr. Kohl-berg tries to get a close fix on earning power. "You have to structure the thing," he says, "so a company can stand a bad year or two, and you want to be able to oay off some of the debt in four or five years against a rising curve of earnings."

That was the pattern at Vapor. Between 1971 and 1975 the company's operating income expanded from $4.3 million to $8.8 million and part of the proceeds of last month's public offering went to pre pay $7.5 million in subordinated notes.

Vapor is a Kohlberg success story partly because its maturation coincided with an upsurge of investment interest in the new issues market. Public sale—or merger with a publicly owned company— is the ultimate goal of most buy-outers.

Between 1965 and 1970, for example, when the stock market was boiling, Mr. Kohlberg estimates that the sale of "eight or nine" of his buy outs brought in a combined return for the original investors of about $19.4 million on a total investment of about $2.9 million. However, in the last five years, the market going has been a lot tougher, and there have been other problems. Two of the "six or seven" deals Mr. Kohlberg put together turned out to be 'problems because we guessed wrong on management," he says.

They are California Cobblers Inc., a producer of middle-price-range womeo's fashion shoes, that Mr. Kohlberg still has hopes of working out; and Advo Inc., a premium and promotion mailing company, which has Still, Mr. Koblberg says he is pleased both with his own tting average and with the dynamics of the buy-out game. "There's a lot of satisfaction," be says, "in watch-ing a company's progress and nelping to make it grow."

REVERSE PSYCHOLOGY

Contrafund is an investment fund that uses reverse psychology as a way of approaching investment growth. We search out growth opportunities among stocks that are currently unpopular.

but which we consider merely undervalued.

If the reverse psychology approach intrigues you, call or write and we'll tell you what the results have been.

There is no cost to buy or sell, and the minimum investment is $500.00.

With the backing of a power like MCA (which had revenues of $811 million and net income of $95.5 million last year). Mr. Taylor added, "We will never lose an author because of money."

The importance of dollar power was explained by a rival editor who preferred not to be identified, "Traditionally, editors were supposed to buy cheap and sell dear," he said. The idea was to sign authors to contracts for hardcover books with modest advances against future royalties of 10 to 15 percent. The risk to the publisher was minimal and the author harvested gains-if the book became a best-seller.

The publisher then would try to sell the subsidiary rights, principally to paperback houses and book clubs, for large sums on which the hard-cover in the book world is the appoints large sums on which the hard-cover few weeks ago of Phyllis Granns publisher and the author shared equally resold, as editor in chief of G. P. But in recent years, an authors' libo's Sons, a 137-year-old publish eration movement has developed, led by see that was acquired last December successful writers and their agents green and their agents successful writers and their agents > claiming larger advances and percentages of subsidiary rights revenues. Their literary products are being sold, usually before a word is committed to paper, at sealed-bid auctions.

> Industry figures indicate where the growth and profit trends are. In 1975. sales reported by the Association of American Publishers were $3.8 billion, a 7.8 percent increase over the year before. The smallest sales increase and the narrowest profit margin (net income as a percentage of net sales) was posted by the adult, general interest hard-bound category, with healthier percentages shown by paperbacks and book clubs.

One trend that Mrs. Grann is confident will develop further is for hard-soft deals" or package arrangements made at the outset for publishing a book in hard-cover and paperback, either with two unrelated publishers or with two subsidiaries of the same publishing empire. Usually the authors press for a lump sum advance and the right to keep all of the paper back royalties rather than sharing them with the hardcover publisher.

Her instincts for hard-soft were trained at Simon & Schuster as, for example, in a $400,000 auction deal with Flora Reta Schreiber to write a book about the Kallinger murders in New Jersey. Simon & Schuster is to publish the hard-cover edition and its Pocket Books, the paperback version.

The thing to watch in terms of conomerate-oriented publishing may not be so much just dollar power but rather the movie companies they also own. That's the hunch of Lawrence Hughes, president of William Morrow & Company, who, Mrs. Grann says, taught her how to be an editor when she worked as his secretary 14 years ago. "Movie companies see they can develop properties across the board, developing 2 theatrical and literary property at the same time." Mr. Hughes said. Warner Communications Inc.'s Warner Brothers, for instance, made the movie out of Woodward and Bernstein's "All the Kings Men" (published in hard cover by Simon & Schuster) while its Warner Paperback Library published the soft-cover edition. A case of separate negotiations but contagious "enthusiasm" (as Mrs. Grann describes it) among a conglomerate's siblings is embodied in the "Looking for Mr. Goodhar" case. The novel was published in hard and soft versions by rg," said the black-haired Mrs. Gulf and Western's Simon & Schuster

Grann in her usual manner of unbridled and Pocket Books and it is being made into a movie by G. & W.'s Paramount Pictures. Sherry Arden, who handles subsidiary rights for William Morrow says that more and more her day is taken up with telephone calls from movie people. They come absolutely round-theclock," she says. .

Mrs. Arden flew to Hollywood last spring to test the waters about television film interest in a book of Bible stories that Moshe Dayan, the former Israeli Defense Minister, has contracted to write. Morrow is to publish Mr. Dayan's autobiography next month.

The trip elicited not only interest in TV series for the Biole stories but also a deal for movie and TV rights to his autobiography, which she says she is close to signing. It has already driven bids for the paperback rights up to six-figure levels. "Even if nothing happens on the film rights, the discussion whips up a lot of interest, she said.

Putnam's new parent, MCA, owns Universal Pictures. Says Mrs. Grann "Universal is in a position to discover incredibly exciting ideas and that may

Mrs. Grann also has ideas about promoting books, particularly, advertis-ing hard cover books on the radio. Traditional hard-cover ads are in the print media and publishers try to garner free publicity on radio and TV talk snows, an effort that succeeds mainly for celebrity authors or loquacious writers of nonfiction. Fiction authors tend to be electronic wallflowers.

Within the clubby, albeit no longer gentlemen's clubby, world of publishing, Mrs. Grann has built a reputation as an aggressive, sometimes abrasive, but fast-moving editor.

Mr. Hughes of Morrow, her former boss, says. "Her great talent is that rather than sitting and waiting for people to leeve so she could get promoted, she observed what others were doing and adapted it. Most important of all, she thought up very good ideas."

She was born Phyllis Eitingon in London, the daughter of a fur merchant, and raised in New York. After graduating in 1958 from Baruard College, where she majored in history, she took a trainee's job at Doubleday & Company. Then she worked for Mr. Hughes at Morrow, leaving in 1962 to marry Dr. Victor Grann, who was serving his in-terneship in Chicago. They returned to New York in 1963. "He did that for me, choose a residency bere instead of Boston," Mrs. Grann said, sounding appreciative. She then joined David McKay & Company as an editor.

During the next seven years, the Granns were both busy and strapped for money. Dr. Grann completed his medical training in cancer and hematology and Mrs. Grann gave birth to a daughter and two sons, at a rate of one child every 22 months, without interrupting her editorial-career.

To enlarge their income, the Granns collaborated on writing medical novels. Dr. Grann supplied case histories. Mrs. Grann sketched the plot and gave medical information ("some of which was inaccurate") to a third person who wrote the novels under his or her name. Mrs. Grann refuses to identify the colaborator or the titles of the novels.

"One of them was sold to Dell for a great deal of money which bought Victor his boat," she said. "Fortunately, Victor is nonacquisition minded."

In 1970, she moved to Simon & Schuster as an editor, was promoted to a vice presidency and then to editor in chief of Pocket Books.

Dr. Gram practices in Stamford, Conn., and the Granns live in nearby Westport. During the hour-long train ride to and then from New York, Mrs. Grann reads manuscripts. She does most of her editing at home. "Fortunately I don't need a lot of sleep," she said.

That "commercial flair" is simply a matter of "what I like most to read," she says. "When I was in college I used to hide in the library reading best sellers and I still like to go home and read them. If I weren't in the business of publishing those books, I'd be an average housewife buying them."

So far Imperial has found an estimated 3 trillion cubic feet of natural gas under the Mackenzie Delta and the Beaufort Sea in northwest Canada Discoveries there by other explorers such as Gulf, Dome Petroleum of Canada, Hunt International, Chevron and Mobil bring total reserves to about 6 trillion cubic feet plus together with small quantities of oil.

But Mr. Assistrong reckons 15 trillion to 20 trillion cubic feet is needed to justify a new pipeline down the

McKenzie Valley to bring the gas out Rather than wait until this much has been found, Imperial has joined forces with Shell, Gulf and Transcanada Pipelines Ltd. to form the Arctic Pipeline Company.

Their plan is to build a pipeline across to the Delta from the rich Prudhoe Bay gas finds in Alaska (23 trillion cubic feet) and then down the Mackenzie Valley into lower Canada and the United Carry Alaskan natural gas to the United States with the Delta supplies piggy-backing down to the Canadian pipeline system that starts around Edmonton.

The advantage of our plan," says Mr. Armstrong, "is that both the United States and Canada get their natural gas fast. We could

In addition, Imperial is studying the possibility of an oil pipeline from the Delta into Canada, it finds justify it if finds justify it. . However, Imperial's plan nas rivais. ra Paso Natural Gas Company and Western Liquid Natural Gas Terminal Company have proposed an alternative all American routs for bringing the Prudhoe Bay gas down across Alaska, ilquirying it on the southern coast and shipping supplies by tanker down to California. A third scheme is the Alcan project supported by North-west Pipeline Company of the United States and Foot-hills Pipeline Ltd., Gas Truck Line Company and Westcoast Transmission Company, all of Canada. This would bring Alaska gas down a pipeline to Fairbanks, then following the Alaska highway into Canada and Minnesota.

All three plans are being reviewed by the National Energy Board in Canada and the Federal Power Commis-sion. But it is known that the Canadian Government and much of the United States Administration prefer Imperial's Arctic pipeline scheme for the assistance it gives Canadian energy explo-ration and as a symbol of United States-Canadian cooperation in the energy field.

Indeed, earlier this year the two governments signed a pipeline treaty guaranteeing the flow of oil and gas through each other's pipelines to scotch El Paso's claim that its all-American route avoided the danger of Canada cutting off supplies of United States gas. Of course, treaties can easily be revoked.

Why HOLT Recommends Selected ...

Deep Discount Convertible Bonds Currently Yielding Up to 13%

Back in the late 1960's—when convertible bonds were being widely trumpeted as the ideal "can't miss" investment vehicle—The Holt Investment Advisory emphatically stated that investors should stay away from most of these

Today, however, The Holt Advisory believes the time has come to put some funds in certain of these securities. It has therefore compiled a list of 10 convertible bonds, all listed on the New York Stock Exchange, which it considers to be especially attractive.

In a clear, non-technical analysis Holt explains why these deserve the consideration of investors and traders alike in light of prospective developments in both the stock and bond market. For each of the 10 selected convertible bonds, it also presents the specific conversion terms, the current yield and the yield to maturity.

Caution: Not all convertibles are safe investments at this time. Some companies may be too illiquid. And no matter how attractive these securities appear, investment in them involves risks.

The "new theory," holding that recession and unemployment are caused by inflation tells us little we did oot already know.

July 26, 1976

But it does highlight the fallacy of a basic assumption underlying much contem-porary economic policy: the assumption that Congress can, and does, exercise a cer-tain amount of self-discipline in formulating budgetary policy.

In 15 of the past 17 fiscal years, the budget bas registered deficits averaging $16 billion a year; over the past five fiscal years, the deficit has averaged almost $33 bil-lion. Persistent hudget def-icits inevitably generate inflationary forces that soon lead to tighter monetary po-licies, rising interest rates, recession and higher unem-

Thus, far from being a contra-cyclical influence, budget policy has become a pro-cyclical force contributing to economic and financial instability.

The Chamber

To the Financial Editor. In the article "The N.A.M. and the Chamber Bid for More Power" (June 27) Richard L. Lesher, head of the newly combined Chamber of Commerce - National Associatioo of Manufacturers is quoted as saying "our strength is in the democratic process.

Earlier systems required tellers to push a buttoo to activate them.

Paul Keniston, an executive of U.S. Currency, said his company's device had been tested in more than 200 robberies. His company guarantees that if money stolen io a holdup where the device is used is not recovered with-m 30 days, it will refund the purchase price of the device, or the amount of money stolen, whichever is smaller. That guarantee has been raid

"very few" times, he says. To nah crooks who do get away with money, his com-pany now sells a supplemental device—a simulated package of money containing a to aid police tracking the bandits. The beam, however, bas limitations. It is lifficult to transmit from an automo-bile and in an area of tall buildings like New York City. Do the gadgets stop bank: robbers and increase the chances of getting back stolen money? Security officials say experience so far indicates first-time robbers and amateurs—a large per-centage of bank bandits—are especially vulnerable to such systems. But they also say some professional gangs know about them and routinely check the bundles of cash before leaving a bank,

After aborting three boldups within three weeks, Mr. Patti, the Crocker Baok official, said his company was so satisfied with the devices that it would probably place them io many more branches.

Despite the boom in bank robberies, the men and women who use guns, knives, bombs and threats are smalloperators compared with the cleverer criminals who are increasingly assail-ing the banks with sophisocated loan swindles, computer fraud, and old fashioned embezzlement schemes.

The banks lost more than five times as much through frands and embezzlement, which have jumped even more than armed robbery.

In the 1969 fiscal year, the F.B.I. said it handled reported shortages of about $33 million in such cases. This soared to $189 million io the 1975 fiscal year, and in just half fiscal 1976, July 1 to Dec. 31, reported losses through bank frauds and em-bezzlements totaled $116 million. Their mounting losses to white collar crooks, and their own employes notwithstanding, the banks still must con-tend with the old fashioned bank robberies.

The banking industry also has been criticized by the F.B.I. and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, which insures depositers' money, for not doing more to curb the robberies. This has trig-gered more interest in safeguards beyond the traditional guards, silent alarms, and hidden and unhiddeo cameras, according to banking executives.

"It's nice to be able to fight back," says Mr. Patti of the Crocker Bank, "In our first incident, at the Pico-Bronson Branch one of the bandits, who had been blinded by the tear gas, told the police: When I beard the bang I thought I'd been shot in the When arrested a little later with his partner, he was still trying to scrub away the red

THE ECONOMIC SCENE

Some Questions Answered

By THOMAS E. MULLANEY

ROFITS, productivity and production provided the dominant news of the business world last week and captured wide analytical attention throughout the economic and the investment communities. In general, the reaction was highly favorable. Simultaneously, another development aroused considerable interest. It was the first formal and fairly specific insight into some of the economic philosophy of the Democratic Presidential candidate, Jimmy Carter, and of his chief economic adviser, Professor Lawrence R. Klein of the Wharton School-provided by themselves in public statements. The reaction was mixed, as might have been

The third noteworthy happening of an eventful week was Ronald Reagan's surprising designation of Penn-sylvania's liberal Senator Richard S. Schweiker as his choice for a prospective running mate on the Republican Presidential ticket. To say the least, the reaction was immense puzzlement in the economic realm as well as in the camps of both parties.

None of those momentous developments, of course, exercised any great impact on the current course of either the economy or the financial markets, though significant potential influences exist in all of them for the near future. The stock and bond markets continued to plod along with narrow price movements in a waitand-see attitude pending more decisive economic and political actions.

This third quarter of the year is a rather crucial one in many ways. What happens in the economy, in monetary policy, in the automotive wage discussions; in the world drought situation and at the Republican convention two weeks hence will all have an important bearing on the future course of business and the markets.

To the extent that the resolution of those present uncertainties affect economic growth, employment and inflation, they may also play a key role in the outcome of this fall's national election.

The economic data of recent days, which disclosed the strong trend of corporate profits, productivity performance and the pace of the economy this year, were hardly surprising, but they did confirm the ongoing strength of the American economy's recovery and augured well for its continuance at a vigorous level at . least well into next year.

After a natural—and generally weicomed—slowdown in the second quarter, the economy seems poised for e renewed burst of faster growth in the final half of this year. Its underlying support is still quite visible in the prevailing strength of consomer spending, the growth of incomes, the reduced rate of inflation, encouraging prospects for the nation's products abroad and signs of increasing activity in housing and business capital

While the second quarter's more hesitant real growth rate-4.4 percent, against the first quarter's strong 9.2 percent rate-was an obvious factor in the less impressive productivity gains in the private business sector during that period, the achievement in that area for the first balf of this year has been quite satisfactory. And the outlook is for further gains as the production pace picks up in a hopefully calmer inflationary atmosphere.

The second quarter's productivity improvement was cut to an annual rate of 3.6 percent from the first quarter's unusually strong 7.5 percent rate. However, for the first six months of this year, the gain in productivity (output per man-hour) was about 5.5 percent over the correspond-

For all of lest year, the productivity advance for the entire business sector was only 1.4 percent, and in 1974 there was an actual decline of 2.7 percent in that key indicator. For the manufacturing sector alone, the re record is even more satisfactory.

At the same time, economic analysts have been pleased by the fact that business unit-labor costs have recently been rising more slowly than last year-and have actually fallen in the important manufacturing sector—as increases in new wage contracts were lower this year than the increases won last-year. As Irwin Kellner of the Manufacturers Hanover Trust Company noted in his latest commentary: "In the second quarter, inflation was socked with a one-two punch: wage gains moderated, while productivity improved. Inflation can be contained only when wage changes do not greatly exceed productivity gains."

He said the latest productivity numbers abould present "clear message" to Government policymakers to encourage business to expand its physical plant in the interest of reducing unemployment, increasing capacity, removing the threat of shortages in key industries, raising productivity further and helping to contain inflation.

The improvement in the productivity and the unit-labor cost picture was reflected in the rather stellar profit performance of American industry during the second

A preliminary tabulation of some 900 companies by Citibank showed aggregate corporate profits up more than 30 perceot in the April-June period es compared with a year ago, with the automotive, transportation and textile industries leading but with virtually every line of business participeting io the parade of bigher earnings. In company with them have been a significant number of dividend increases, up 8.2 percent to a new record this year. And the outlook is for further profit gains and dividend improvements in the quarters ahead.

As the economic community contemplated the glowing earnings reports flowing out of corporate heedquarters last week, it also became distracted by Jimmy Carter's press cooference on his economic views in Plains, Ga., after his discussions with a corps of nine economists, several of them with links to the Johnson Administration. The candidate's disclosures ended some of the uncertainty about where the Democratic contender stood on economic policy-employment ections, budget programs and the role of Government. In some ways, he pleased many of the doubters with a more moderate stance on some of the issues, but others felt they needed to know more about his plans to implement some of the goals

On the other hand, the testimony of Professor Klein before e Coogressional committee, urging an easier monetary policy, along with budgetary stimulus of some $10 billion to $15 billion, starting in 1978, gaioed little acclaim in financial circles.

Even some of the more conservetive elements in American society found little to fault when Mr. Carter said thet be, as President, would attempt to "target" Government spending programs to create jobs in areas of the country most affected by unemployment and among groups in the population with the highest jobless

They were also impressed with his basic policy goals: to achieve an inflation rate of 4 percent or less within four years, to have e balanced Federal budget within roughly the same time span, to obtain a steady economic growth rate of between 4 percent end 6 percent a year, and to stabilize the percentage of the gross national product that is collected in taxes by government and spent by government each year.

"It is obvious that he is a populist, a liberal, e spender and is determined to involve the Government much more in the economy without too much concern ebout the consequences," said one conservetive private economist. "I would say that the best way to combat unemployment is to eocourage productive investment."

That latter theme was also struck by a somewhat surprising source a week ago, when Minnesota's liberal Democratic Senator Hubert H. Humpbrey joined Republican Senator Charles H. Percy of Illinois in introducing a bill ($.3693) to declare a national policy on investment in the private sector of the United States economy-to express the importance of incentives to induce edequate levels of such investment.

In a letter calling attention to the bill, Senator Humphrey said: "It's my judgment that a statement of national policy on investment is as important as a statement on employment policy. The Employment Act of 1946 failed to include a declaration on investment policy even though such a statement was in the original legislation."

With the need for greater economic growth to aid the employment picture, to create new capacity in basic industries now nearing full-utilization retes, to keep inflation under reasonable control, and to provide new sources of energy, most economists and businessmen might be expected to say "Amen" to the Humphrey-Percy proposal. It is obviously something the Coogress ought to adopt promptly—and then implement it with a thoroughgoing program or tax reform.

MARKETS IN REVIEW

Big Board Prices Slip Again

The stock market continued to decline last week in lackluster trading. The Dow Jones industrial average, which has been falling almost steadily for the last three weeks from a 41-month high of 1,011.21 set on July 12 to a close of 984.64 on Friday, was down 6.27 points for the week.

ssues

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange fell to 13.33 million shares in the Thursday session, the smallest since Jan. 2 when 10.3 million shares changed hands. For the week, volume was 72.3 million shares, compared with

86.8 million the week before. Helping to depress the market last week was the report by the Commerce Department early Wednesday that its June index of leading economic indicators rose only 0.3 percent, the smallest rise since an 0.1 percent increase

Some analysts also noted that some money managers appeared to be distracted from stocks by the appealing terms amounced late Wednesday by the Treasury on its large new third quarter offerings.

The move by many banks last week in lowering their prime interest rates to 7 percent from 71/4 percent was mostly ignored by investors, despite the fact that this was the first general decline in the cost of business credit since January: Because most other bank rates are scaled upward from the prime, e sustained treod in the prime rate can point to changes in other lending rates

One of the largest losers last week was National Semiconductor which tumbled 9% points to close Friday at 34%. The weakness in the issue began after the company late Tuesday announced it was baving manufacturing problems with its digital watch components-problems that would hurt its sales and exmings in the quarter . ending Sept. 19.

The credit markets posted small gains throughout the week in quiet trading. The big news was the Treasury's August refunding, designed to raise anywhere from $2.5 billion to $4.5 billion in new cash. Most new corporate offerings received a good reception from buyers.

Sci-Fi Missing the Boat in Automobiles

Now Is No Time To Insist on a Look Backward

By HENRY FORD 2d

Science fiction visions of transportation are still very much in vogue but science fiction travel has reversed directions. Instead of going forward in time, it now goes backward.

Instead of showing how distance can be_ eradicated by technological progress, the new prophets tell us that the only way to survive is to turn back the clock, get rid of the auto-mobile and return to walking, riding bicycles and taking the train. They even tell us that we will have to balt the apread of suburbia and go back to earlier levels of urban population density in order to get along without the car.

The new science fiction is a lot less enter-taining than the old, and undoubtedly will prove to be no more valid. In the real world, time moves in only one direction.

There are, however, many people who think otherwise. When I testified before the Joint Economic Committee last year, I was questioned rather persistently about my attitude toward Federal aid to the auto industry to bein it make the inevitable conversion from building cars to building mass-transit vehicles. That's one problem we at Ford are not worried about. The real mass-transit system in the United States is the highway system and the automobile, which are respon more than 80 percent of all trips to work and all trips between cities, and for more than 90 percent of all trips within cities. The automobile business is now about 75 years old. Most of the United States has been built within that period, and the building pattern bas been made possible by the unprecedented convenience, flexibility, comfort and low cost of motor vehicle transportation.

Even if it were possible, the United States has better things to do with its resources than build a 19th century transportation sys-tem—and then build a 19th century country so that we can somebow make do with primi tive transportation.

There is room and need for better public transportation in many places. But better public transportation will take few people out of cars and probably will not even halt the long, steady decline in public transportation usage. The few new rapid transit systems built in recent years all have drawn most of their riders from buses, not cars. They can be built only with enormous outlays of public funds, and generally can be operated only with additional large subsidies to cover the growing gap between revenues and operating costs.

The prophets of a world without cars are now saying that . lt doesn't really matter whether we want or can afford to get ridof cars. We have no choice, they say, because the world is running out of clean air, raw materials and petroleum.

Let us consider each of those allegations.

First, the question of clean air. One scientific study after another has concluded that the ultimate automotive emission standards established by Congress in 1970 are as much as four times more stringent than is necessary. to achieve the ambient air standards established by the Environmental Protection Agency. The ambiant standards, in turn, are de-signed to protect public health with an adequate safety margin. It seems clear, in other words, that if the statutory emissions standards can be approached, air pollution from cars will no longer be a problem.

Those standards are now scheduled for 1978, but it's generally recognized that they cannot be met that soon, across-the-board. There's plenty of argument about when they can be echieved and whether it makes sense to meet them, given the costs involved. What matters for present purposes is that the technology required to meet these standards is not many years away. In other words, it's not going to be necessary to get rid of cars In order to get rid of automotive air pollution.

What about raw materials? The first thing to be said on this score is that more cars are being recycled each year in this country than are going out of service—and some 80 percent of the material in each recycled car is recovered and reused. The second thing to be said is that there are no indications that nature's store of essential raw materials is running out. There may be temporary shortages of some materials resulting from temporary imbalances between growth in demand and growth in extraction and processing capacity. Prices of some materials are likely to rise faster than the general inflation rate. Supplies of some materials may be vulnerable to actions by government cartels or interrup-tion for political reasons. But all the studies I have seen agree that the world is not going to run out of the basic materials needed to make cars as far into the future as anybody

The same is true of the energy needed to run cars, Nobody knows how much oil is left in the ground. And the chances are that we will never find out because we will never get to the bottom of the barrel.

We do know that the proven, recoverable reserve of petroleum is now at an all time bigh of almos: 660 billion barrels. That's a 34-year inventory at today's rate of consumption.

We know that more oil is discovered each year than is used, and more has been discovered in recent years than ever before.

And we know that most of the world is still untouched by oil geologists. Ninety per-cent of all the oil and gas wells ever drilled in the world have been drilled in the United States. The rest of the land surface of the globe-including even the Middle East-is virtually undrilled. The same is true of the seas and the polar ice caps which cover 80 percent of the earth's surface. Even in the United States, only a few thousand wells have gone deeper than 15,000 feet, although it is now possible to go twice that deep, The main reason more oil hasn't been found is that, with a 34-year inventory on her there has been little incentive to look taxes. or deeper for still more.

I see no reason to doubt that care ann on gasoline derived from petrole at least the next several decades. As the recovered supply of petroleum is de the cost of finding and extracting news plies will go up and up. It's important note, however, that automobiles now the than 30 percent of the petroleum considers in the United States. As the cost of pentile rises, less will be used under boilers and my will be left for passenger cars and other we cles. As the cost goes still higher, it will see tually become cheaper to manufacture light fuel from oil shale, tar sands, coal and it haps even organic wastes. When that he pens, the remaining oil will be left in ground. In the still longer run, motor weigh may be powered by electricity or by in fuels made feasible by an abundance of a clear or solar electric power.

I do not know what energy conversion the nology eventually will take over in high-fransportation. Whatever the technology is be, and whatever OPEC may do, the period of fuel for highway vehicles is likely to substantially higher for a long time to out than it has been in the past.

The growth of the automobile industry been due in no small measure to the available ity of cheap gasoline. Higher fuel prices i certain to bring important changes in the ture and use of automotive products. But it are not likely to end the age of the automot With gasoline at 60 cents a gallon, the f cost of running the average American is less than four cents a mile or about dollar a day. The average wage earner to work less than five minutes to pay the gasoline used in a 10-mile trip.

It's no secret that all the manufacture are spending large amounts of money to s competitive by improving the fuel econor of all their cars. Here again, there are a vi ety of options. Fuel economy can be proved through engine and driva : tr changes ranging from minor refinements all-new concepts. It can be improved throi better aerodynamics. Or it can be improved by using lighter materials and better des to improve the ratio of usable space to over size and weight.

It's important to notice, however, that is ter fuel economy is not free. To get bet fuel economy, the consumer has to give some combination of roominess, comfort. c venience, performance, safety or money.

Since the oil embargo, consumers he shown increased interest in fuel economy, few of them are interested in fuel econo at any price. The most popular cars toare not the smallest and most fuel-efficie but the compacts and intermediates.

I believe that most people will pay a more than [today's dollar a day] for the cc fortable, convenient and flexible mobility automobile provides. For the proof of ti proposition, we need only look at the r of the world, where gasoline generally co two dr more times its United States price and the auto industry is growing faster that

Diversification Did Not Weaken Banks

Errors Were Made, But Institutions Remain Healthy

By EDWARD A. JESSER Jr.

Raiph Nader's report on banking contends that diversification by banks into other fields has weakened the industry. Basically the study concludes that the entrance into bank-related activities (such as consumer loan companies, factoring concerns, mortgage banking, etc.) since the mid-1960's has diverted managements from the basic business of banking, diminished the capital growth of the industry and brought about the largest loan losses since the 1930's. 10 other words, Mr. Nader feels that bankers have spread themselves too has worked in reverse.

From the depression of the 1930's until 1974 there were relatively few bank failures, the report notes. Mr. Nader suggests that the marked increase in the number of failures since 1974 has been caused by bank-related activities. This is not quite true. Even the troubles of Franklin National Bank and Security National, both of New York, and United States National San Diego, the three largest banks that failed, were not caused by bank-related activities, but rather because of problems that arose from operations that were carried on by the banks themselves.

In the closing of 40 banks in the last two ears, the worst economic period the nation has experienced since the 1930's, no depositor suffered losses. True stockholders sustained losses, but this is what naturally happens in a free enterprise society and the stockholder knows be will take his gains or losses depending on the fortunes of the company.

There is talk about bank-related aubsidiaries as though they are a new strange monster that has just been invented. Some people present thesa "monsters" as financing giant corporations, supporting the pound sterling or financing a fertilizer plant in India. This is not a bank holding company at all. Our function is very much down-to-earth-working with consumers, smaller businessmen and

Holding companies play major roles in fi-nancing consumer loans—furniture for a home, a car and improvements to an attic or basement. It can be the lending of funds to the individual with a good idea who has a small business who pledges everything, including his inventory and receivables. It may be the providing of financing to a tract developer to build bousing for low or middle income families. The giant loans are made by the banks, not by the subsidiaries of the holding

Sure we have made mistakes. There has will occur when there is a downward trend in the business cycle. Banking is a risk-taking business. It has been riskier in the last few years because the recession was an extremely

Why did this occur? Our nation enjoyed 12 years—1961 to 1973—of prosperity, the longest such period since World War II. We are now working off these excesses, and if we don't tinker too much with the natural forces of the market place, we will succeed in-correcting these excesse

Remember we just have come through the worst recession since the 1930's, and in the real estate and construction industries the whole roof fell in. Take Florida's situation where depressed cooditions in these industries caused more severe problems than in many other sections of the country. With its 5 percent annual growth rate, largely through pensioners and individuals on Social Security who relocate there, it is beginning to recover

In the past year there has been a great deal of discussion about classified loans. It is natural that a major change in the economy, as we experienced in the last recession, will cause an increase in such loans. The fact. that this happened illustrates that banks were doing their job of meeting the financial needs of their customers. The loan that is categorized as a classified one by the bank examiner today was undoubtedly a good one when it was granted: To some a classified loan may be e dirty word but to a young person with good idea it may be his great hope for

been some financing for the expensive condo—
The Nader study devotes considerable at of the economy as well as in some industries.
The minimums and the big shopping centers. The tention to R.E.I.T.s (Real Estate Investment industry has taken its losses, but these always Trusts). There is some question if they belong in the last recession it stood firm and contin-

in this study because they are publicly held companies, and not owned by the bank hold-ing companies. R.E.LT.'s were started in the early 1960's

after Congress passed legislation which was designed to stimulate the bousing industry. The R.E.L.T. bill did just that and mortgage money became not only available but bountiful. Jobs were created. The losses sustained by the R.E.I.T.s bave been to the investor and lender, where they should be. The major point is that a bank could have become involved with a real estate investment trust with or without a bank holding company.

The Nader study should be belpful, however, to, both the banking industry and the Federal Reserve Boards. It makes some valid points. In some cases, capital has been spread too thinly and management has been overextended. But in fairness, it must be remembered the bank building company. the bank holding company movement, as we know it today, did not really begin until the mid-1960's, and the greatest expansion took place following the 1970 enactment of amendments to the Bank Holding Company Act.

With the severe economic downturn occur-ring a few years later, the history of bank holding companies is too brief to make a propment of their performances. Even with the recent recession, bank earnings have held up remarkably well. This is a bribute to the managements of the vast majority of banks and bank holding compenies. The difficulties of the past, few years heve strengthened managements, as they gained experience in solving the deep rooted financial problems that existed in many sectors of the economy as well as in some industries.

The banking industry can be proud that consumer. It is clear to me that if the banks had panicked and run, the economic downtum could have developed into a depression of the magnitude of the 1930's when the banks did not have the strength or the will to stand fast and fulfill their risk-assumption function

Bank holding companies can be credited with bringing about greater competition to the mortgage and consumer lending fields. If we believe in the natural forces of the market place does this then not mean better corving at lower cost to the public service at lower cost to the public.

Perhaps the biggest challenge banking faces now is not to abandon services that have presented the industry with temporary difficulties. Some bank holding companies have cut their bank-related services drastically, particularly in the field of real estate development, I strongly urge that in our attempt to correct present loan situations, we not abandon our activities that would help the real estate and construction industries to recover from their economic problems, Instead wa should devise methods that not only will help these industries to recover from the recession but will help promote a sustained and sound-growth, so that the mistakes of the past are not repeated -

When the banking history of this period is written, it might very well say that our industry had its finest hour. Despite the difficulties and the frustration, the banking industry is stronger today and it has helped to lead the nation back to a much improved economy.

Edword A. Jesser Jr. is chairman of the United Jersey Banks, and past chairman of the Association of Bank Holding Companies.

Strike-a-Bit

Some auto makers are likely to be closed for a while this fall by strike despite all the lovey-dovey talk about labor peace in the current contract negotiations.

Even if a major national contract is signed between the United Auto Workers and the manufacturers without a national strike, the plants could be closed by disputes over local issues. These are the little problems of a particular plant with its particular local union. There are thousands of them, some serious, some frivolous, General Motors notes that it's lost more than 100 million man hours of work since 1958 over such local issues. "We rarely get away clean. The mood of the membership will have a lot to do with it," says Douglas Fraser, U.A.W. vice president. Leonard Woodcock, the U.A.W. president says: "It's always been a problem because of the sheer size of these firms. The workers have every legal right to bargain oo local problems."

The local issues can involve production rate disputes or proposals for people movers to carry workers to the parking lots, but car makers say the unioo is doing a good job this year screening out frivolous demands.

A full fledged strike over the national cootract isn't out of the question either. Indeed, both sides seem to be having a little trouble definiog the issues, which could cause a problem in finding a settlement. Workers often aren't upset by a few weeks strike in fall-especially if it coincides with Michigan's huoting season.

Should President Ford be elected, there presumably would be much less likelihood of a conflict between the President and central bank over policy, but there would remain a set of choices for Mr. Ford and Dr. Burns, A good guess is that the President would offer Dr. Burns another four-year term as chairman and leave the choice to him. If Dr. Burns chose to retire he could be confident that his successor would be in the conservative mold.

Ronald Reagan's views about the Federal Reserve have not been articulated. but he, too, would be unlikely to quarrel much with present policy.

The elements of a possible conflict over monetary policy in a Carter Presidency emerged last week when Lawrence R. Klein testified before the House Banking Committee. Mr. Klein is the University of Pennsylvania professor who up to now has been Mr. Carter's chief economic adviser.

He made clear his belief thet Federal Reserve policy should concentrate on influencing interest rates-and in a downward direction cowand not on the rate of growth of the money supply. Mr. Klein said he did not regard · the money supply as a particularly important factor in indit direction, will re fluencing the rate of inflation on the board and try and made clear that he would not mind at all if money growth turned out to be somewhat faster than the Federal Reserve targets now

To Mr. Klein-and Mr. Carter has indicated that he agrees-iower interest rates are important now for sustaining the recovery because they would belp both housing and business capital investment. In answer to a ques-tion about the desirability of interest rate subsidies to spur housing, Mr. Klein said he would prefer to achieve "the same result through monetary policy."

In a sense he seemed inconsistent because at another point he said that interest rates now are on a 'high plateau" because they reflect the rate of inflation. The "real" rate of interest "hasn't changed much," he said, but the existence of an "inflation premium" has pushed up the oominal interest rate.

He did oot make clear how monetary policy could push down interest rates very much as long as inflation remains where it is-and Mr. Klein said be expects the inflation rate to move a little higher next year though he thinks it will moderate in the longer run.

In any case, Dr. Burns's testimony a day earlier was almost exactly the opposite.
Once again be focused the targets of monetary policy

two of the three measures of whenever the money supply growth was outside the target range for a period of three or four weeks.

> There is good reason to expect that as the economic expansion cootinues such a policy will mean somewhat higher interest rates, at least short term rates. The influence of rising demand for credit and rising demand for transactions balances money balances to carry on a rising volume of business-just whet Mr. Carter would not like, and it could well be bappening just about the time he takes office—if be is elected

Mr. Carter has said several times that he favors an independent Federal Reserve. The only change he has sup-ported is a modification in the law to make the term of the cheirman of the Fed coincide with that of the President, a change Dr. Burns has no objection to. But Mr. Klein suggested in his testimony last week that a President could use "moral suasion" on the independent Federal Reserve to influence it toward his way of thinking "just as the Federal Reserve uses moral suasion on the rest of society." That exercise in "moral suasion" might appear to the rest of us very much like a serious clash.

You or your firm could be selected WOULD YOU INVEST $13.835 FOR A $50.000 RETURN PER YEAR?

These figures are verifiable through monthly averages earned by our present distributors. Your entire investment represents equipment which should return an $11,000 net in the first 90 days. You or your manager must visit our factory and office for training; then, at our expense, we will send a field trainer to your territory. then, at our expense, we wanted a new dame to your enterty to help you set up your organization. Most of your questions will be answered by phone, as our time is valuable and yours is, too. This is a true Manufacturer to Distributor relationship. $13,835 will acquire one of the following areas in New York States Rochester; Syracuse/Rome, Albany, Ithaca/Binghamlon; While Plains; Yonkers; Brom; Queens; Manhattan/Staten Island.

Convention, Ronald Reagan has republican Nation-invention, Ronald Reagan has republican Nation-invention, Ronald Reagan has republican Nation-invention, Ronald Reagan has republican has a major gamble, probably in convention that he, and not sent Ford, should get their ation.

Reagan has campaigned for s as what he is, a true believer ven an apostle of Republican Covatism. Yet last week he aned that if nominated his running would be Senator Richard iker of Pennsylvania, perhaps 10st liberal Republican in the C.A. and a man whose views on all public issues are almost the e opposite ef Mr. Reagan's. The se of the startling proposal in balancing was clear enough. Mr. n feels he bas the bulk of the lican right wing with him but s not enough; to be nominated. ist pry moderate and liberal delefrom Mr. Ford. The success of the s in question, and may stay that Intil the first roll call at the con-calculation: Mr. Reagan's move that of a poker player, behind to might, who takes a plunge to an when he knows the game is to end. He was apparently lostound alowly but steadily to Mr. In their extremely close fight for Schweiker represents more than balancing. Pennsylvania, neighNew York and New Jersey all large delegations and all are fentative of the Republican modwing. Though Mr. Ford is well in all Mr. Reagan hopes his of Mr. Schweiker will lead relegates to grange their minds risks. Neither Mr. Reagan nor hwelker pretended he was reconciling to the other's views. Mr. Schweiker said that, for campaign purposes, he would abandon his prolabor record because he was second on the ticket and would be appealing to a wider constituency than in Pennsylvania. Mr. Reagan spoke of a "coalition" with moderate Republicanism—the word clearly meaning each side would retain its position.

The impact. There was a widespread sense of betrayal on the Republican right, the predictable opposite of the strong sense of loyalty Mr Reagan had from his doctrainaire supporters. But the number of publicly announced delegate changes to Mr Ford was relativly small; the most important was that of Clark Reed, leader of the Mississippi delegation.

But by this weekend, by the unofficial New York Times count, Mr.
Ford was still not over the top, though within a handful of votes. He and his aides are furiously courting delegates in person (he went to Mississippi) at the White House and by phone. Mr Reagan goes to Mississippi this week. Mr. Schweiker is working hard in the northeast but is also going to Mississippi and has already been to

The results of all the delegate bunting will be even harder to measure now than they were before Mr. Reagan's big gamble. Conservative delegates have two weeks to decide if they can stomach Mr. Schweiker on Mr. Reagan's ticket; moderates not entirely satisfied with Mr. Ford will be deciding if Mr. Schweiker's presence on the ticket makes Mr. Reagan more accreatable.

The Democrats

While the Republicans struggled, the Democratic nominee, Jimmy Carter, prepared for the campaign by holding a series of briefings oo defense, economics and foreign affairs. The participants included Pentagon and intelligence officials, members of former Democratic administrations and academic experts who have been advising Mr. Carter.

Dr. Markus Baath, director of Sweden's Seismological Institute, said that "between May and July, both the African and Indian land masses have perceptibly moved northward, pressing against Europe and the Himalayas respectively and causing a series of quakes." He added: "After the North Italian quake of May 6 we have noted a long chain of tremors, all with Richter magnitudes around 7, with epicenters first in the Ionian Sea, then Soviet Uzbekistan, Sumaira and West Irian areas." (See map above).

Chinese earthquake records go back further and with greater accuracy than any comparable records elsewhere, and Western scientists have been impressed by the way in which the Chinese have used them to try to predict future shocks.

Just before a great quake shook the Liaouing Peninsula in February, 1975, Chinese scientists warned that a quake was coming. Thousands of citizens were evacuated and, when the quake came, the loss of life was greatly minimized.

They had also predicted a major quake in the area where last week'a occurred but apparently were able to say only that it would happen by the 1980's. Chinese earthquake predictions are generally based on changes in the earth'a magnetism, migrations of earthquake activity, the frequency and oature of minor foreshocks and the level and chemical content of water in wells.

The Chinese expect further shocks in the area. The populations of the cities in the afflicted region, including Peking, were ordered into the streets where they are camped in makeshift tents. Relief and reconstruction efforts were begun immediately. But the Chinese intend to maintain their tradition of self-sufficiency in repairing the damage. They declined all offers of help from abroad, including one from the United States.

Disagreements May Be More Real Than Apparent

Carter, Ford May Differ Widely on Foreign Policy

By LESLIE H. GELB

WASHINGTON—It has become fashionable in diplomatic and press circles to say that if Jimmy Carter were elected President, the main lines of his foreign policy would be about the same as that followed by President Ford and Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger. But if Mr. Carter's acts as President were to match his words as a candidate, the changes in policy as well as a style could be farreaching.

Mr. Carter's speeches and interviews portend everything from a new way of bargaioing with the Soviet Union, to a more relaxed approach in dealing with Communists in Western Europe, to a different strategy for Middle East negotiations, to a reduction in American arms sales, to a more receptive attituda toward the economic demands of poor nations, to an unprecedented opening-up of the decision-making

That is the potential. For now, the fact remains, that Mr. Carter is a relatively unknown and unproven man in foreign affairs; his value in the field is in the rightly questioned currency of candidate paper. There is no backlog of revealed instincts and reactions against which to measure the retoric of the campaign. He has also coupled the liberal thrust of his policy proposals with pragmatic hedges.

Mr. Carter and his aides are well aware that this lack of background could be used against him in the Presidential campaign. Thus, he has surrounded himself with the leading figures in the Democratic foreign policy community. They include Prof. Zbigniew Brzezinski of Columbia University, and former Johnson Administration luminaries such as Cyrus Vance, George Ball and Paul Nitze. He held meetings last week in Plains with foreign policy and defense experts and received a briefing from George Bush, Director of the Central Intelligence Agency.

A Change in Priorities

that the former Georgia governor has established a consistent theme in his foreign policy statements: "We must replace balance of power politics with world order politics." He means that "it is likely, in the near future that issues of war and peaca will be more a function of economic and social problems than of the military security problems which bave dominated international relations in the world since World War IL" He would give priority to international economic questions, particularly between poor and industrialized states, sharing the resources of the aeas, food and natural resources.

Mr. Kissinger, in executing the foreign policy that is officially Mr. Ford's but is formulated by the Secretary of State, bas already made a start on these items. But the key potential polot of difference is that Mr. Carter indicates that these matters are important in and of themselves, while Mr. Kissinger judges their significance in terms of how they affect the Soviet-American balance of power.

Mr. Carter is not unmindful of this balance, and what he has said about it sounds like the Ford Administration viewpoint. Like Mr. Kissinger, he favors détente and opposes efforts by Coogress to legislate political restrictions on economic ties with Moscow. Like the Administration, be approves increasing the military budget, but by about $6 billion less than President Ford proposed. But what he has said about Angola and the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks suggests important differences.

On Augola, Mr. Carter said he shared the Administration's concerns about Moscow's actions.

but indicated that he would oot have attempted to deal with the situation by matching Soviet military arms shipments. He would handle such situations, he said, by giving Moscow advance warning of ecoomic sanctions and follow up with "a total withholding of trade."

More recently, he questioned the proposed arms sales to Kenya and Zaire for "fueling the East-West arms race" and "supplanting our own allies" which have traditional relations with African states. Indeed, his attitude toward arms sales, which have been a key ingredient of the Kissinger diplomacy, marks an essential disagreement.

"Sometimes we try to justify this unsavory business," be said in a recent speech, "on the cynical ground that by rationing out the means of violence we can somebow control the world's violence."

Mr. Carter has also stated that he supports the Administration's various nuclear arms control agreements with Muscow, but that he has a different sense of the means and ends of bargaioing on the strategic balance. On means, he said be was skeptical about the Administration's technique of building new nuclear weapons systems in order to get the Soviets not to build them. Specifically, he called the expenditure of billions of dollars on the antiballistic missile system "foolish." On ends, be has attacked the Administration's concept of avoiding an agreement that would impair United States capability to fight limited nuclear wars, arguing that ooce these weapoos are shot off, all-out war is

These attitudes on bow to deal with Russia are carried over to coping with the prospect of Communist parties coming to power in Western Europe where both men express concern about this prospect. While Mr. Kissinger bas talked of the unacceptability of Communiat joining the Italian Cabinet, Mr. Carter bas spokeo of the need nut to meddle in the internal affairs of other nations.

On the Middle East, the two men share the objectiva of bringing about an overall peace settlement, but have expressed opposing ways of going about it. Mr. Carter has put more emphasis on the need for a conference to settle all the issues, followed by a phased implementation, in contrast to Mr. Kissinger's continued pursuit of his step-by-step approach. More fundamentally, the Secretary of State has tried to pry concessions from Israel through a combination of inducaments and threats. Mr. Carter, by comparison, has maintained that the best way to induce Israeli leaders to return occupied territory is by giving them complete confidence in their relationship with the United States.

But it is perhaps on matters of style, especially where style and substance intertwine, that Mr. Carter promises eveo more dramatic changea. In stressing the need for more openness, He has piedged to make his final decisions public, allow the airing of alternative viewa within his administration, tell the Congress and the public what he is doing even during crises, and make public the Ceotral Intelligence Agency budget total. Like Mr. Kissinger, he would resist what he sees as Congressional encroachments on Presidential authority.

Those who assert that the differences between Mr. Carter and Mr. Kissinger are inconsequential are, in effect, giving little credence to what Mr. Carter has said. Like Mr. Kissinger, they believe that if Mr. Carter becomes President, his election rhetoric will be tailored to fit Mr. Kissinger's realities. Perhaps they will be proved right, but Mr. Carter is nonatheless establishing a record that he cannot later disregard without criticism.

Schweiker, Member of a Lonely Band

By DAVID E. ROSENBAUM

WASHINGTON—William S. Brewer, an uncommitted Pennsylvania delegate to the Republican National Convention, was deeply offended by Ronald Reagan's choice last week of Richard S. Schweiker, the liberal Pennsylvania Senator, as his prospective running mate. "We don't need liberal Republicans," Mr. Brewer said.

Mr. Brewer's reaction was, perhaps, blunter than that of other party officials, but it was not atypical. Within the Republican Party, the tiny but hearty band of liberals is often treated like a colony of larger Consider the following avantage:

lepers. Consider the following examples:

• Charles McC. Mathias of Maryland is his state's senior Senator, one of the most highly respected members of the Senate and, beyond doubt, the most popular Republican politician among the state's voters. Yet, at the state's Republican convection last month, Senator Mathias was defeated in his bid for the Maryland seat on the national party's platform committee by a conservative member of the Maryland House of Delegates.

• Any knowledgeable person listing Secators in order of their effectiveness as legislators would place Jacob K. Javits of New York near the top and Carl T. Curtis of Nebraska near the bottom. But, when Republican Senators elected a new chairman of their party caucus at the beginning of the 94th Congress, they picked Mr. Curtis, a conservative, over Mr. Javits, a liberal, by a vote of 23 to 14.

• Representative John B. Anderson of Illinois, a liberal, is his party's most able debater in the House. When be rises to speak on the floor, a hush falls, not only because of his brilliance as an orator, but also because his speeches are generally filled with insight and information. Yet his hold on the thirdranking position in the House Republican leadership is challenged repeatedly.

There are eight to 10 Republicans in the Senate and about the same number in the House who invariably cast liberal votes. They came out early against the war in Vietnam. They are strong supporters of civil rights and social welfare legislation. They take the side of organized labor in its legislative battles with businessmen. They vote to override vetoes by a Republican President.

Nearly all of them bold safe seats. Senators Javits, Mathias. Schweiker, Clifford P. Case of New Jersey and Edward W. Brooke of Massachusetts, to name a few, are considered unbeatable in their states. Political analysts consider Lowell P. Weicker Jr. of Connecticut the leest likely to be defeated of all Republican Scoators up for re-election in November.

There is no secret about why their positions are secure. Republicans In their states are generally reluctant to risk internal warfare by challenging an incumbent of their own party, and Democrats find it hard to outflank a liberal Republican.

They Have Seniority

With such security, many of the liberal Republicans have accumulated enough seniority to reach positions of considerable legislativa influence. Senator Javits, as ranking Republican on the Labor and Public Welfare Committee, was the principal author of the pension reform law passed two years ago and has left his imprint on every piece of education legislation that has emerged from Congress in the last decade. Senator Case, the top Republican on the Foreign Relations Committee, was a chief sponsor of many of the measures that placed limits on the executive branch's ability to conduct the war in Vietnam. Senator Brooke, the second-ranking Republican on the Committee on Banking. Housing and Urban Affairs, has been for years one of the most important voices in the drafting of bousing legislation.

Nonetheless, many of those Senators are made to feel uncomfortable within their own party. There are a handful of progressive Republicans in high elected offices nutside of Washington, including Govs. Christopher S. Bond of Missouri, Williem G. Milliken of Michigan and Daniel J. Evans of Washington and Attorney General Louis J. Lefkowitz of New York, but they too have little influence in the national party.

"It's clear to me." Senator Weicker remarked, "that the leadership of the Republican Party—not just the President, but Cabinet members, White House aides and high-ranking party officials—just honestly don't delieve that a moderate direction, much less a liberal one, is the way for the party to go."

Last fall, a group of libers! Republican Senaturs went to the White House to urge President Ford to moderate his positions lest all Republicans suffer disastrously at the polls. They pointed out that the percentage of people in the country who called themselves Republicans had declined from 29 to 18 percent in the last two decades. "Our main point," said Senator Charles H. Percy of Illinois, "was that we are able to hold 99 percent of the Republican vote, but we win by attracting discerning independents and Democrats."

The delegation was received courteously, but Mr. Ford and his staff spurned the advice. They simply could not afford, they decided, to concede the conservatives in the party to Mr. Reagan. "We're all nuts—that's the way we're looked at," Senator Weicker declared. "We're to be patted on the head, but we're oot to be believed."

Japan Jails Its Ex-Premier for Lockheed Bribes

Kakuei Tanaka, who as Prime Minister of Japan was the influential political leader of the second largest economic power in the non-Communist world, has been arrested and jailed for an alleged role in the international Lockheed bribery scandal.

Mr. Tanaka's ultimate guilt or innocence is for now probably less important than the fact of his arrest. Leaders of Japan's rigidly hierarchical society historically have been protected from public scrutiny or approbation, but there are some signs that the Tanaka arrest may have deep effects on that tradition and others.

Mr. Tanaka has resigned as the leader of the major faction in the perennially-ruling Liheral Democratic Party. The party is said to be in a state of great confusion; members of the large Tanaka faction now are preparing to join other factions, if for no other reason than that their source of money, and therefore power-Mr. Tanaka-is in jail.

Prime Minister Takeo Miki seems to have benefitted in the public's view. The widespread shock at the arrest has been mixed with public praise that Mr. Miki did not sidetrack an investigation within his own party. But some party members also have complained that he is profitting politically from

Some observers see deeper implications in the Tanaka arrest. If the party loses its majority in the lower house election in December and the upper house election next July, it will, in their view, be unable to rule. The oppositioo, out of power since World War II is viewed as politically fragmented and may also not he able to rule effectively. In this extreme scenario chaos could result and Japan's parliamentary form of Government could be jeopardized.

Behind this reasoning is an appreciation of the fragile nature of Japan's democracy. It was artificially imposed hy the United States after World War II on a historically feudalistic country. Only recently, as a result of the Lockheed scandals, has the Government accepted the fundamental democratic principle that the people have a basic right-to-know its policies and practices.

Mr. Tanaka, the 15th person arrested in Japan in the Lockheed case, is accused of violating foreign exchange and currency regulations. There is reportedly evidence that he accepted almost $2 million from Lockheed's sales agent in Japan in return for hillioos of dollars in contracts for Lockheed to build aircraft.

P.L.O. and Syria Agree, for a Day

The way in which the Lebanese civil war has magnified the divisions among Arabs was displayed again last week as still another seemingly hopeful ef-fort to achieve a cease-fire failed.

After prolonged negotiations in Damascus, representatives of the Palestinian Liberation Organization and Syria, which has 20,000 troops in Lebanon, reported an agreement to end conflict between their forces. Within hours, the agreement was repudiated by Yasir Arafat and the Palestinian leadership, reportedly because of objections from Egypt, with which the Palestinians have developed closer ties as they hecame estranged from Syria.

As the cease-fire pact fell apart, fighting continued in the "original" Lebanese war, that between Christians and Moslem-leftist forces, although on a limited scale. It was severe enough, however, to prompt 308 Americans and other foreigners to take advantage of the help of the United States Navy to be evacuated from Lebanon. This was the second such evacuation. About 1.000 Americans still remain in tha war-torn country.

For a Price, Help For British Labor

Plans announced recently by Britain's Labor Government to cut Government spending drastically and increase business taxes have brought strong objections from the whole spectrum of political parties there, including threats to bring down Labor's minority regime. That probably will not happen, however, partly because several small parties whosa support Labor needs in order to stay in power stand to gain more from negotiating with, the Government, than from trying to remove it.

The most unified of these small parties is the Scottish National Party. It uses its 11 seats in Parliament increasingly to barter for greater autonomy for Scotland. In the most recent example of such bartering, last week, all the other parties lined up against a bill, proposed by Labor, to nationalize Britain's important shipbuilding industry.

The Scots abstained from voting in return for a pledge by Michael Foot, tha majority leader, to give special concessions to Scotland's shipbuilding yards. However, after the vote, those promises grew more and more vague and the Scots group hit back at the Government by voting against the nationalization bill. The measure scraped through the Commons nevertheless. with a majority of three votes on its final reading. It will become law after it gets House of Lords' approval.

So despite the arithmetic, the Government seems in no immediate danger of falling unless some major constitutional issue blows up.

Labor holds 316 seats in the 635seat House of Commons, but since two of its members are nonvoting committee chairmen it has three less than a majority. The Conservative party holds 278 seats, the disorganized Liberals 11, Ulster 10, tha Welsh 3, and four members are independents. The Government could be brought down any time the non-Labor members stood together in a vote of

Communist Clout Grows in Italy

Italy's Communist Party has won seven chairmanships of committees in Parliament, including some important in determining the country's economic policies. The main question now would seem to he: In which direction and to what extent will the Communists use their influence?

The chairmanships are one of the concessions the Communists demanded in return for allowing the Christian Democrats to form a minority party regime. A Communist will also be Speaker of the lower house in the new Parliament, and several Christian Democrats objectionable to the Communists were dropped from the new Cahinet, formed last week hy Prime Minister-designate Guilio Andreotti.

The Cabinet must get Parliamentary approval before it can begin governing this week. Presumably, as part of a deal with the Christian Democrats, the Communists io Parliament, the second largest party, will abstain during that vote. Last month, in national elections, they won 34.4 percent of the vote, only 4.3 percent less than the Christian

The Soviets Lose Two to the West

Viktor Korchnol, the Russian chess player rated No. 2 in the world, has asked for political asylum in the Netherlands; he is the latest of a number of prominent intellectuals and sports and entertainment figures to do so.

Mr. Korchnoi, known abroad for his intense style of play, is also known to Soviet authorities for his public criticism of the Russian world champion, Anatoly Karpov, and life in the Soviet Union. A few days ago, Mr. Korchnoi told a French reporter of "moral pressures" exerted on him by the authorities and suggested it was his belief that if he went home he would not be allowed to travel abroad again.

Whether that prompted his defection is uncertain. The official Soviet press agency, Tass, accused Mr. Korchnoi of staging "a cheap sensation."

Mr. Korchnoi's defection follows closely the departure, under official pressure, of Andrei A. Amalrik, the historian. Others who have made similar choices since the 1960's include Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn, the writer, and Rudolf Nureyev, the ballet dancer.

The Russians were also upset by the case of Sergei Nemtsanov, a diver, who left the Olympic Village in Montreal and asked for asylum in Canada. Russian officials charged that Olympic hostesses encouraged Soviet athletes to "betray their country" and demanded

There has been no response to the new violence by the police; in the past they have quickly and forcefully put down such outbursts. But the situation appears volatile. The rioting youths appear leaderless and without an articulated specific grievance beyond South Africa's racist policies. The South African Government has apparently made all the concessions it intends to. Pretoria recently rescinded an order that black students study in the Afrikaans language and yielded to a request that the Soweto schools be reopened.

Soviet Pays in Defections for Conformi

By DAVID K. SHIPLER

MOSCOW-Bobby Fischer never would have made it as a chess player in the Soviet Union. He is just the kind of person that Soviet officialdom cannot tolerate: temperamental, idiosyncratic, arrogant, impudent, Hardly the type to hlend smoothly into the collective. Were he Russian instead of American, his bad manners would probably have kept him out of tournaments long before his talents could have heen discovered.

This may seem odd for a country with a compulsion to excel at everything from space shots to water polo. But it is an anomaly of Soviet society that, while devoting great resources to cultivating and pampering star athletes, dancers and musicians, the Government is also willing to cast aside fine talent for the sake of political, artistic and behavioral con-

The result has been a flow of Soviet artists and intellectuals to the West through defection, emigration or forced exile. The latest in the series was the chess star, Viktor Korchnoi, who asked for asylum in Amsterdam during a tournament there last

Mr. Korchnoi is no Bohhy Fischer, but he has been too impulsive and outspoken for Moscow's taste. He has not spelled out clearly his reasons for defecting, but he was reported to be fearful that because of his friction with officials, he would not be allowed to travel ahroad again,

Foreign travel is one of the main rewards the Soviet Government bestows; on compliant citizens, and withholding the right constitutes a severe punishment for people who thrive on international contacts. This is true not only for chess masters whose medium is international play, but also for painters, sculptors and dancers who often feel starved by the conservative cultural controls in their own country and who need at times to dip into the main currents of artistic innovation in the West.

Such was the case of the sculptor, Ernst Neizvestny, whose work was denounced with an expletive hy Nikita Khrushchev in 1962, but who then gained Mr. Khrushchev's admiration by arguing back. Mr. Neizvestny counted 50 occasions on which Soviet. authorities rejected his applications to visit abroad In response to professional invitations. His most interesting work never received sanction here; officials tried unsuccessfully to throw him out of his workshop last fall. In April, he emigrated to Israel.

Famous dancers such as Rudolf Nureyev, Natalya Makarova, Mikhail Baryshnikov and Kelerya Fedicheva have described their defections and emigrations to the West as motivated by a desire to escape the artistically stifling atmosphere surrounding dance in Russia, In an interview after arriving in New York last year, Miss Fedicheva indicated that she wanted to dance in modern, Western-style hallets. We are suffocating from constant management of our minds," she said of the Kirov Ballet Company in Leningrad, where she had danced. "There are gray people who are in charge."

Similarly, Mstislav Rostropovich, the cellist, left the Soviet Union in 1974 and has vowed not to return until artistic freedom is fully restored.

That seems unlikely. As acutely embarrassing as the Kremlin must find the defections, its obsession with control remains paramount. Through history, some of the main upheavals of Soviet society have occurred in periods of disorder, and there is cation that this Government is at all tempted to relax its centralized authority over all aspects of life just to woo a few talented people.

If anything, the opposite is the case, Prominent, highly-skilled Jewish scientists, sometimes the heads of prestigious scientific research institutes, have suddenly found themselves demoted or jobles plying for emigration. Many have been years without work, their skills of no i state, apparently as examples to others consider following them.

The Soviet people are usually not toh official press about prominent figures whe or defect, although ordinary Russians whe news by foreign radio or word of mouth c less with envy than with contempt. The Scottish 'Nats' Really Want to Be Independent

By JOHN GRIMOND

LONDON-The world knows very well that Great Britain is no longer great; it may soon learn that the United Kingdom is no longer united. Snorts of dissatisfaction from the country's geographical fringes have long been as noisy and querulous as those from the political fringes, but they have never been taken very seriously in a highly centralized state whose political life has been dominated by the two-party system, at Westminster. Now all that has changed. The defection from the Labor Party last week of two Scottish Members of Parliament brings the total number of parliamentary parties to nine. Nationalism has become the most potent force in British politics.

The nationalism in question in not British, nor even English; it is Welsh and, more importantly, Scottish. That the nationalism movement is not English explains both its success and its obscurity. It has flourished because the English do not understand it, and because the English do not understand it they have not—until recently—appreciated its importance and given it the attention it deserves. Now, belatedly, the two big, English-dominated parties... Labor and Conservative—are trying to work out a policy to appease the refractory Scots and Welsh.

The English-based parties have been driven to doing so only because of the electoral success of the nationalists, particularly in Scotland. In 1964 the Scottish National Party won 2.4 percent of the Scottish vote and returned no members to Parliament; in October, 1974, it took 30.4 percent of the Scottish vote and sent 11 members to Westminster. Eleven Members of Parliament are not a lot in a house of 635 but they are treated by their Lahor and Conservative fellows with more hostility than their numbers would seem to warrant, for two reasons. First, the Scottish National Party is committed to an independent Scotland. Second, opinion polls suggest that its popularity is even greater now and that the Scottish Nationalists might capture more than half of Scotland's 71 parliamentary seats at the next election, which could reasonably be interpreted as a vote for Scottish independence.

Some English, of course, might be happy to be rid of the "unruly" Scots. Others would be less so. The main snag would be that of saying goodbye to the great white hope of Britain's economic recovery. North Sea oil, all of which, so far as is known, lies beneath Scottish waters. But for Britain's ruling Labor Party there is an additional dilemma. Labor seldom wins a majority of seats in England (only in 1945 and 1966 did it do so) and would therefore seldom be the party of government were it not for the fact that it always wins a majority in Wales and usually does so in Scotland.

The realization of this has prompted the Labor Party to try to spike the nationalists' guns. In proposals published last November, the Governm forward a scheme for a Scottish assemb powers to legislate over a wide range of matters (Wales, three of whose 36 members o ment are nationalists, was promised an exect sembly with responsibility over broadly th subjects, but no legislative powers). These I accepted by Parliament, would represent it radical change in Britain's constitution since tension of the franchise in the last century. Fr land they would mean tha first Scottish legsince the Act of Union in 1707.

Little wonder then that within a month the Party in Scotland had split, with the majority ing lukewarm support for the scheme and a n -including two members of Parliament-ba away to form a separate party pledged to a s version or something stronger. These two me of Parliament continued to give the Governmen support on at other matters until last-wee they have now withdrawn it in disgust at it in Government spending announced on July 2 The Scottish issue should have provided the servatives with the opportunity for some s trench warfare, but they are, if anything, even divided than Labor.

Nationalism has its roots in Scotland's lack history of the past 30 years. Intruder Killed At White House

Chester M. Plummer Jr., a cab driver with a record of minor crimes but a reputation among co-workers for gentleness, was shot to death by a White House guard last week after invading the mansion's grounds for reasons that will probably never be known.

This was the sequence described by the Secret Service:

At about 9:30 last Sunday night, Plummer scaled the fence at the north-east gate of the White House and began running toward the building, carrying a three-foot length of pipe. Instantly, sensor-triggered alarms sounded, floodlights illuminated the grounds, and a rookie guard, 25-year-old Charles A. Garland, gave chase from his post near the gate.

Plummer failed to heed three commands to halt, then turned, brandishing the pipe, toward Garland. The guard fired once, hitting Plummer in his chest. He was about 150 feet from the White House. President Ford, in his private quarters, did not hear the

No one who knew Plummer could suggest a motive for his action. As for the shot that killed him, the consensus was that Garland was following the Secret Service's rule that firearms are to be used "when in the considered opinion of the officer there is danger of loss of life or serious bodily injury to himself or another person." Law enforcement authorities rejected the notion that, as one put it, "anybody but Wyatt Earp could have aimed well enough to just wound the man; when you're menaced like that, you shoot, and sometimes you kill."

Natural Gas Goes Up, Naturally

The Federal Power Commission has decided to nearly triple the maximum price that producers may charge pipelines for some natural gas, a decision that lends influential support to the producers' claims that gas prices have been kept unrealistically low by Government controls.

The producers—some of which are major oil companies—have urged Coogress to deregulate gas entirely or to modify the statutory pricing criteria, contending that low prices have encouraged wasteful consumption and deprived the companies of income needed to meet rising costs and to explore for new sources. However, many members of Congress, fearing constituents' wrath over high fuel costs, have been reluctant to act on a measure that would increase consumer gas bills. As a result, gas pricing legislation has been stalled in both Houses; action is unlikely in this session.

The commission's decision will raise consumer prices, but the amount is in dispute. The commission estimates the rise at 5 to 6 percent; consumer groups say it will be much more. The effective date of the commission ruling has been postponed by a Federal court, which is considering a complaint alleging that the price increase is illegal.

Still No Motive in Bus Kidnapping

All three suspects in the kidnapping of 26 schoolchildren and a bus driver in California three weeks ago are now in custody, but the police still apparently have no firm knowledge of why the crime was committed and why the children of Chowchilla, a modest agricultural town, were chosen as the victims.

One of the fugitive suspects, Frederick N. Woods, was arrested in Vancouver, British Columbia, where he was traced through a post office box number. The other, James Schoenfeld, was spotted by an acquaintance as the suspect was driving near his home. Mr. Schoenfeld's brother, Richard, who surrendered to police earlier, was arraigned last week on kidnapping

The only substantial indication of a motive is the draft of a reason note, demanding $5 million, that police say they found at the Woods home. Mr. Woods and the Schoenfeld brothers are the sons of well-to-do families.

The G.O.P. Is No Place for Southern Office-Seekers

By JACK BASS

COLUMBIA. S.C.—For Republicans in the South, 1976 promises to demonstrate just how much strength they have built after more than two decades of effort.

With the Democratic candidate a popular Southerner, those who vote for his opponent will be showing genuine Republican commitment, at least at the Presidential level. They will thus be distinguishable from the masses of Southerners whose 1972 vote for Richard M. Nixon was a protest against the Democratic nominee.

Ronald Reagan's stunning announcement last week that the liberal Secator Richard Schweiker was his choice for a running mate created shock and confusion among the ultraconservatives who since 1964 have dominated the Southern wing of the G.O.P. Already weakened by heavy post-Watergate election losses in 1974, party leaders in the region will face clearly another challenge when they try to drum up support for whoever is on the ticket in November. They will bave to overcome the acrimony that has preceded the nomination.

The task will be compounded by the scarcity of dynamic and skillful political leaders, still a major problem for Republicans in the South. Early successes in states such as Alabama, Georgia, Florida, and North Carolina have been undermined by fratricidal fighting.

Regardless of what they can deliver in November, the strength of Southern Republicans at the nominating convention in Kansas City this month will be considerable. Delegates from the 11 states of the Old Confederacy (Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, and Virginia) bold more than a fifth of the votes at the convention. One recently published delegate list, compiled before the Schweiker announcement, showed an unofficial count of 383 to 115 for Mr. Reagan over Gerald Ford in the 11 states.

Even that one-sided support of Mr. Reagan reflects a less monolithic structure than in 1964, when more than 98 percent of the Southern delegates voted for the nomination of Senator Barry Goldwater.

Although Republicans made steady gains in the region through 1972, the progress was spotty. At their peak that year they held 31 percent of the Southern seats in Congress, but only 16 perceot in the 11 state legislatures. After the 1974 elections, they had lost 30 percent of their Congressional seats. In Georgia they lost the last of two Congressional seats; and in North Carolina, where in 1972 they had elected their first governor and United States Senator in this century, they lost 14 of their 15 state senators, 26 of their 35 state representatives, and two of their four members of the House.

A measure of the continuing weakness of the party in the South is that in more than two decades, only two Republicans have been elected to statewide office below the level of Governor in all 11 states: a public service commissioner in Florida and a lieutenant governor in Virginia

And despite some Republican gains in all the Southern states, only Tennessee has achieved a level of geouine two-party competitiveness.

Although southern Republicans break down into two basic vings—one conservative to moderate and the other ultraconservative—they derive from five different sources.

The oldest are the traditional mountain Republicans, descendants of Civil War unionists who have furnished moderate party leadership io North Carolina, Virginia, and Tennessee. To this core the party has added migrants from other regions, usually business and professional families who moved into the South as part of the industrialization and economic expansion, or to retire, and who brought their Republican allegiance with them; upwardly mobile migrants from farms and small towns who joined the urban and suburban middle and upper classes; the smaller group who teod to be reformers and are interested primarily in building a two-party system; and a large group of cooservative ideologues attracted to the party by the Goldwater candidacy in 1964.

Maturiog Republican leadership in the region has begun to recognize that the "Southern strategy"—which dates from a 1961 speech in which Mr. Goldwater declared in Atlanta, "We're not going to get the Negro vote as a bloc in 1964 and 1968, so we ought to go hunting where the ducks are"—has failed. Not only did it drive the mass of black voters—who now number more than 3.5 million in the South—to the Democrats, but it also offended many whites who perceived the arousal of racial emotions as a threat to stability.

Several studeots of southern presidential voting in recent years contended that the swolleo Republican totals represent more a protest than a change in party allegiance and an increase in the number of independent voters rather than Republicans,

In 1968, when George Wallace provided an alternative outlet for protest, Richard Nixon received as much as 40 percent of the vote io only two southern states, 40.5 in Florida and 43.4 in Virginia. For Ronald Reagan or Gerald Ford to do significantly better against Jimmy Carter would be a major achievement.

As the region emerges from its most traumatic period of change and emers a period of consolidation, Republican response to the new order may determine the future rate of two-party development. The rate of urban growth in the region, twice that of the rest of the country since 1950, and the prospect of centinued economic growth are among the forces of change that provide a climate for long-range Republican growth.

Congressional Incumbents, Better Off, Still Not Happy

A Complex Search for Campaign Funds

By WARREN WEAVER Jr.

The Campaign Finance Act of 1974, the law that reshaped Presidential politics, has also imposed a new set of rules on candidates for Congress, who are just beginning to assess the impact on the financial free-for-all that formerly attended Senate and House

Before 1974, a cardidate in a Congressional race could accept any amount of money from any number of contributors. The only restriction was that the candidate could not legaly accept money from a corporation or union, and in the scramble for funds even that rule was frequently violated, as was illustrated by the testimony in the trial last week of Claude C. Wild Jr., a Gulf Oil Corporation lobbyist for several years. Mr. Wild was acquitted no technical grounds, but he admitted making an illegal campaign contribution to Democratic Senator Daniel Inouye of Hawaii.

The 1974 law retained the prohibition against union and corporate gifts and added regulations intended to minimize the winning candidate's obligations to "fat cats," wealthy individual contributors. The law prohibited Senate and House candidates from accepting campaign contributions of more than $1,000 from any individual or $5,000 from an established political committee, the same dollar limits that were imposed on Presidential candidates.

Incumbents have always found it easier to raise money, but at least under the old system any challenger who was not personally wealthy might find one or two "angels" to put up the mooey for a campaign to try to oust a sitting member of Congress. Under the new system, there are no more angels. Since the curreot Congress is predominantly Democratic, the disadvantage for the challengers tends to fall most heavily on the Republicans.

Despite their apparent new advantage, incumbent Senators and Representatives of both parties bave not been uniformly enthusiastic about the contribution limits. Some, long established in their states and districts, had relied for years on a narrow fundraising base, big donations from a relatively small group of sources, and are now having to scout around for additional sources.

As originally approved, the new law limited the amount of their own money that wealthy candidates could put into their campaigns, but the United States Supreme Court struck down those ceilings io January as an unconstitutional curb on free speech. Congress then reinstated them in May for Presidential candidates who accepted public subsidies — all of this year's did—but rich members and would-be members of Congress can still invest as much as they can afford in their political careers. The High Court eliminated the campaign speoding ceilings for Congressional candidates that were in the 1974 law since they were not part of a bargaio under which candidates obtain Federal subsidies.

A provision was added to the campaign law that was intended to strengthen the role of the two major parties by permitting the Republican and Democratic National Committees each to raise about $2.5 million to support Senate candidates and $4.8 million to support House candidates. These funds would supplement the amounts that candidates raise by their own efforts and receive from the campaign committees of the House and Senate. To further strengthen the parties, individual contributors are allowed to give $20,000 to a party national committee rather than the $5,000 allowed for all other committees. As an extra, a oational committee and a Senate campaign committee together can give a Senate candidate another $17,500. But it is uncertain whether party committes will be able to raise the large amount of money that the law permits them to pass oo to Senate and House candidates.

The Democrats now estimate that Jimmy Carter and Walter Mondale, their Presidential and Vice Presidential nominees, will be able to raise about $2 million for the national committee for the support of Congressional candidates, far less than the law allows. The national candidates' first interest is to raise for the party committee the $3.3 million that it can legally spend on their campaign.

Republican officials announced ambitious goals early this year, but no specific plans will be made until the nominee, to be chosen at the Kansas City convention this month, approves an overall campaign budget. One immediate effect of the new contribution ceilings was to induce the Republican coogressional campaign committee to make contributions to selected primary candidates for the erst time in recent bistory.

The 1974 campaign law allowed to panies and labor unions to establish "political action committees" to collect voluntary contributions from employees or members respectively to be used for campaign gifts, but the publicity over practices like those admitted by Mr. Wild has made some corporations nervous about participation in the 1976 election even through this fully legal mechanism.

F.B.I. Was Not. As Advertised AndWon't Ever Be the Same

By JOHN M. CREWDSON

After five decades of virtual immunity from public criticism, the Federal Bureau of Investigation is in serious trouble from top to bottom. No one seems to think its survival is in jeopardy, but the F.B.L that emerges from the current official scrutiny of its people and procedures will probably be a far cry from the venerated institution of crime-fighters and gang-busters that J. Edgar Hoover made a part of

Not a week goes by now without new allegations of wrongdoing by agents and officials of the F.B.I., and last week was no exceptioo. Testimony was made public in which an agent in New York told of scores of burglaries he had carried out, always under orders from his superiors. Two other agents, one retired, came under Justice Departmeot scrutiny when it was learned that a paid informant they "handled" bad also been a burglar for the F.B.L (and for himself while on the Bureau's payroll). An investigation was under way of the possible misappropriation of medical insurance funds for purposes of high living. And the associate director of the Bureau acknowledged his technical responsibility for disruptive tactics against political militants while he beaded the Minneapolis office in the late 1960s and early 70s. That operation was part of the now infamous Cointelpro, or counterintelligence program, characterized by Congressional investigators as "indisputably degrading to a

The illegalities and improprieties may seem at first glance to be no more than random instances of overstepping by a few zealous or unscrupulous agents. But as the pieces continue to fit together, the picture they form threatens to tarnish the badges of F.B.I. ageots to a point where their sbeen may never be restored.

As a veteran "street agent" reflected recently, "You cannot have law-enforcement officers become totally lawless. That's vigilantism. That just breaks down the whole system."

The Bureau could perhaps bave lived with the disclosure of its shoddy investigation, under White House pressure, of the Watergate affair, and even with Congressional disclosures that were mainly historical: That the F.B.I. bad been used for political purposes by successive Presidents since Franklin Roosevelt, had secretly tried for years to publicly discredit the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., and had failed to investigate adequately the assassination of President

Such shortcomings might have been tolerable because they grew out of policy, dictated either from within the F.B.L or from outside, and policles can be changed with the passing of those who make them. But what now promises to irreparably diminish the stature of the nation's foremost its former officials, is the spectacle of individual agents acting without regard for the laws they were sworn to uphold,... appareotly with the knowledge and approval of their superiors, who in some cases seem themselves to have violated their fiduciary trust. Morale is now described as dismal. The work of the Intelligence Division, the chief target of ooe of two separate Justice Department inquiries, is said to have suffered. And ordinary criminal investigations are reportedly encountering citizen resistance of a kind hitherto unthinkable. That the Justice Department is now conducting not one but two investigations of the F.B.L is in many ways remarkable. Such a thing probably would not have been possible while J. Edgar Hoover was in charge, and might not be possible even now without the combined effects of Watergate and the Congressional disclosures.

The investigations have been spurred mainly by a troubled Attorney Geoeral, Edward H. Levi, and three of his principal aides: Michael Shaheen, head of the department's new Office of Professional Responsibility, J. Stanley Pottinger, head of the Civil Rights Division, and Richard Thornburgh, the chief of the Criminal Division.

Kelley a Silent Partner

A fifth and somewhat more silent partner in the clean-up campaign is Clarence M. Kelley, the F.B.L director since 1973, police chief of Kansas City before that, and before that an F.B.I. agent for 20 years.

Mr. Kelley is by every account a decent and honorable man with a great deal of love for the institution. But he is said to have been badly stung by his recent discovery that some aides had allowed him to provide incorrect information to the public and the Congress about the F.B.I.'a use of bur-

Mr. Kelley had been saying for a year or so that the Bureau's practice of occasionally breaking into private bomes and offices without a search warrant, to remove evideoce and photograph documents in search of leads in domestic intelligence investigations, had been halted by Mr.

But a month ago, Mr. Kelley acknowledged that some musty documents had been discovered last March 17 in the F.B.I.'s giant New York City office that proved him wrong. Illegal burglaries, the papers showed, had been carried out the movements of members of the fugitive Weather Under-

Mr. Kelley is understood to be trying now to find out which of bis aides know of the more recent burglaries and failed to advise him. And It remains unclear why that discovery was withheld from the Senate Intelligence Committee, which was investigating F.B.L. burglaries and did not publish its report on the Bureau until six weeks after the New York papers had been found.

After the recent burglaries became known - they apparently resumed almost from the moment of Mr. Hoover's death in May, 1972-F.B.I. sources suggested that the practice had continued well beyond 1973.

The illegal entries, the sources have said, were aimed at a wide variety of groups, including the Mafia and Puerto Rican nationalists, and the burglaries were described as just part of a broader range of illegal activity by F.B.L intelli-gence agents that included at least one kidnapping of a newleft radical, unprovoked assaults, firebombings and illegal

Although L. Patrick Gray 3d, who beaded the F.B.L during the period now under investigation, is believed to have been too preoccupied with the Watergate investigation to be aware of the burglaries, there is a good chance that Mr. Pottinger and his Civil Rights Division lawyers will be able to trace knowledge of the break-ins almost to the top of Mr. Gray's command.

Some 30 F.B.I. agents have now been notified that they are targets of the Pottinger inquiry into the burglaries. Several officials at F.B.I. headquarters, including at least one assistant director, have retained lawyers and are negotiating for immunity from prosecution that would allow them to testify against their colleagues.

(Mr. Kelley's sudden dismissal jast month of Nicholas P. Callahan, his top deputy and a veteran of four decades of service in the F.B.L, seems now to have been unrelated to the burglary investigation. Mr. Callahan, according to reliable Justice Department sources was discharged after other department lawyers discovered that he had somehow been involved in the misappropriation of a "recreational fund" financed by agents' does.)

Apart from improprieties, the Bureau's vaunted efficacy is being challeoged. David G. Trager, the United States Attorney for the Eastern District of New York, recently characterized the Bureau's criminal investigators as "geared up for gang-busters crime" and unable or unwilling to tackle more sophisticated cases of official corruption and white-collar crime. At least one House subcommittee is now planning to look into the F.B.L's general investigative operations and its use of 7,000 informants, like the admitted burgiar identified this week, to keep track of radical groups.

All of this has combined to make it a difficult time for Mr. Kelley. Apart from his public concession that be bad been wrong about the burglaries, his assertion last May that the F.B.L was "truly sorry for some of its past activities," provoked a firestorm of criticism among the unr inside the bureau and out.

In addition, be has personal problems. He has b fined to Bethesda Nava! Hospital, suffering from : back ailment. His wife died recently after a lingerin And at 64 years of age, he is faced with the prosp unless he manages to hold ooto his job through th of 1978, his Government pension will be no more few thousand dollars.

Last month, the Justice Department was unable a subpoena for Mr. Kelley's appearance—the first of by an F.B.I. director that anyone could recall-at a trial in Iowa where two Indians stood accused of kil F.B.I. agents in South Dakota last year.

In the view of the defense lawyers, it. was Mr. admission from the witness stand that the F.B.L ha a nationwide alert of possible violence by Indians bicentennial weekend without any evidence that s lence would occur that tipped the scales in the def favor. They were acquitted.

Mr. Kelley was nonetheless said to have been in a spirits after his dismissal of Mr. Callahan, and althprospects of staying oo at the F.B.I. after the N elections are not good, he apparently has resolved until then in concert with Mr. Levi io trying set the Late last month, Mr. Kelley appointed Richard the head of the F.B.L's Chicago office, to replace M han. Although Mr. Held is a 35-year F.B.I. veteran he has not spent much time at F.B.L headquarters like Mr. Callahan, has not been closely identified small clique of Hoover loyalists who now inhe Bureau's top echelons. Yet it was Mr. Held who a ledged Friday that he had been responsible, as heamilitants.

The choice of Mr. Held over James B. Adams, one Callahan's younger and more impressive deputies a recently the odds-on favorite to assume the director's one day, may signal an end to Mr. Hoover's postmort on the F.B.L.

If that is so, there may be nothing else seriously with the Bureau that cannot, in time, be cured.

Pros and Cons on an Old Issue Showing Slight Signs of Life

If the Oil Giants' Are Broken Up, Who Will Get Hurt the Most?

By EDWARD COWAN

WASHINGTON-For about 10 years Senator Philip A. Hart, Democrat of Michigan, and the staff of the antitrust subcommittee he chairs have been trying to push through Congress a "divestiture" bill that would split up 18 big vertically integrated oil companies into separate producing, pipeline and refining-marketing companies.

Despite the suspiciona of "Blg Oil" held by many of his colleagues, Senator Hart was unable to muster even a subcommittee majority behind the bill. This year the subcommittee adopted the bill, and the conservative Judiciary Committee, surprisingly, approved it by an 8 to 7 vote. However, the majority included two Senators who said they disliked the bill but wanted to let the Senate discuss it. Although the bill has no chance of being enacted in this Congress, the committee action brings formally before the full Senate a legislative proposal whose populist roots reach back nearly a century.

The bill is aimed at the manifold and far-flung operations of the giant oil companies, who also have a large share of the natural gas industry. When the Federal Power Commission raised the rates for netural gas last week, most of the oil companies were among the beneficiaries.

Even in an election year in which Democrats are confident of winning the Presidency, the divestiture bill may he debated only perfunctorily and not put to a Senate vote. The drive to adjourn Congress by early October leaves little time for such a controversial issue. But the sponsors —Senator Birch Bayh of Indiana is taking over the chief sponsorship from Senator Hart, who is retiring bave considerable support from the Democrats' liberal wing and are likely to renew their campaign in the next Congress.

Theirs is not just a piece of legislation. It is a cause—one that dates from Ida Tarbell's muckracking disclosure 70 years ago of the predations of John D. Rockefeller's Standard Oil Trust. Indeed, the case for an act of Congress to dismember the big oil companies rests beavily on a particular view of history and the economy."

The view is that the use of the Sherman Act in 1911 to break up the Rockefeller trust was a necessary but insufficient step to combat monopoly and revive the independent oil companies that Rockefeller bad systematically squeezed and swallowed. "The problem is clearly structural," the committee report says. "At its ioception, the industry was cast in the shape of a monopoly and it has struggled to keep that form ever since. Its basic defects have survived one haphazard restructuring, two World Wars and a massive amount of regulation."

The report argues that decades of experience show that neither the current antitrust laws nor Federal regulation can make the oil industry competitive. The time has come for last-resort action, the bill's sponsors sey. But some Senators, neither archly conservative nor oil apologists nor Republican in every case, feel that the remedy may be worse than the ailment. Senator Charles McC. Mathias Jr., a liberal Republican from Maryland, calls divestiture "a profound, radical step." Senator Quentin N. Burdick, Democrat of North Dakota, says that to break up the big companies by legislation may be "the first step toward nationalization" of oil. For all of the feeling against big business in this country, Government ownership has few supporters.

In sum, the idea is so far-reaching that some moderates, not to mention conservatives, are uneasy. To carry the day, the sponsors must evoke a great outpouring of public sentiment by making an incontrovertible case. They have been unable to make such a case, for two reasons. First, the basic proposition, that oil is uncompetitive essentially because of the vertical integration of companies from crude oil pump to gasoline pump, is very complicated. Second, as the sponsors admit, predictions of the consequences of divestiture are freighted with uncertainty.

The heart of the divestiture argument is that the major companies dominate the flow of crude oil to refiners by virtue of the majors' ownership of oil-producing properties, of pipe in the oil fields and of long-distance pipelines that move crude to refineries. This control over crude, it is said, has let the blg companies restrict entry by newcomers into refining, foist an inefficient marketing system on the public and subject filling station operators to callous ex-

The industry and the committee minority report contend that the construction of new refineries and expansion of some existing ones demonstrate the absence of significant barriers to entry. Filling station operators, they agree, could be protected in other ways; a House bill would spare them from arbitrary cancellation of lease without compensation for having built up the business.

The sponsors say that divestiture would weake 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countr making refiners more aggressive buyers once the longer have production interests to protect. But oppo say the cartel's ability to maintain prices depends c on political solidarity and the volume of world contion. The industry warns that divestiture would uncertainty, dry up capital funds, reduce discovery of oil, jeopardize expansion of pipelines, and raise cost prices. Proponents of divestiture assert that the oil exaggerate, that some companies have already by themselves up functionally and that more competitive likely to bold down prices.

Senator Mathias argues that the pricing mechanism best way to pursue energy conservation and expansit the domestic oil supply. Because "price can only be tive in a competitive market," he says, Congress st prohibit discriminatory pricing by integrated compa require uniform accounting and cost allocation by oil panies and broaden the right of companies and consu to sue oil companies for triple damages under the

The Hart-Bayh group is convinced that more regula would not work. However, such an approach might ar to Jimmy Carter, if he becomes President next year-Carter has expressed coolness towards divestiture, sa that be would favor it "only as a last resort."

The fifth that washed op on beaches along Long Island's South Sbore in June brought not only public dismey but hearings and inquiries into the causes. Now, with the worst over, the finger-pointing continues.

Two Long Island communities, Hempstead and Oyster Bay, are sumg New York City to stop it from dumping raw sewage into New York harbor. A little over a week ago, Gerald Hansler, regional bead of the Environmental Protection Agency, announced that all ocean sludgs dumping off the region's coast would have to stop by 1981. Along with New York City, many Nassau, Westchester and New Jersey communities use the offshore dumping eite Mr. Hansler bas in mind. Some state and local officials called his directive unrealistic.

Last week Federal scientists who bave been studying regional water pollutioo, focused on the environmental agency itself as well as the Army Corps of Engineers. The scientists, from the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administratioo's Marine Ecosystems Analysis Program, said that the dumping site operated by the corps was a more serious pollution threat than other ocean dumping in the area.

The corps allows 11 million cubic yards of dredge spoil to be dumped every year at a site six miles from the New Jersey sbore. The corps has never denied a dumping epplication, nor has the environmental agency, which has joint jurisdiction, attempted to interfere.

Despite their comments, the scientists have concluded that everybody contributes to regional weter pollution, and they dismiss politicians attempts to blame one jurisdiction or another.

Or Fly Later

Air traffic controllers, seeking higher salaries, have disrupted air travel by doing their job "by the book" They have begun a slowdown, which along with poor weather, has caused inng delays and cancellation of flights in the New York area and on the West Coast.

The slowdown was provoked by another delay by the Civil Service Commission in finishing s job reclassification study that the union had hoped would result in higher pay, as well as an interim finding by the commission that there is overgrading and undergrading in a number of job cate-

To call attention to their grievance, the air controllers allowed traffic to slow. They say they were adhering closely to the rules-for instance, by requiring planes to stay three to six miles apart. When safety permits, they often allow, say, a two-and-a-balf-mile 'cushion." Also, planes were put through a time-consuming departure procedure even when it was not nec-

The effect by Thursday evening was delaye on flights in and out of New York. Elsewhere in the country, Los Angeles airport reported severe delays caused by the slowdown.

Easing the Way For Offshore Oil

President Ford has signed a bill designed to make it easier for coastal communities to accept the development of oil and gas resources off their shores, but opponents of such drilling see the measure as an effort to buy them off and suits to prevent exploration are expected to go forward.

The legislation authorizes $1.6 billion in Federal aid over 10 years to build roads, schools, hospitals and sewage systems on both coasts and the Great Lakes to accommodate the increase in population expected by such energy projects.

New York and New Jersey could receive millions of dollars in Federal aid; just how the funds would be distributed is not yet known.

New York State, Nassau and Suffolk Counties and environmental groups have filed suit to prevent the first sale of Atlantic leases to oil companies, scheduled to begin on Aug. 17. Aside from possible pollution and the effect on the generally placed rhythms of aome coastal communities, they fear that the tourist and fishing industries

Investors Are Still Shy, So the Utility Asks Higher Rates

by A. H. RASKIN

Charles F. Luce starts today his tenth year as chairman of the Coosolidated Edison Company. It is not a particularly jolly anniversary for the bead of the giant utility, even though its board of directors receotly voted him a $40,000 pay raise and extended his original 10-year contract for five more years.

What keeps such recognition from ever being much of an ego-builder is the kind of letter that came in last week from one of the 9,000,000 persons in New York City and Westchester County who rely on Con Edison for electricity, gas and eteam. It was touched off by an Inquiring Photographer column in The New York Daily News asking the company's captive customers their opinion of its current bid for a 10.4 percent increase in electric rates that are already the highest in the country. In the letter-writer'a view, the question was silly because everyone knew that Con Edison's executives were all "stinking

The comment by metropolitan officialdom omitted personal abuse, but everyone from Meyor Beame down rushed in with condemnation of the application to the State Public Service Commission for another rate increase less than three months after the last one of 5 percent was approved.

Alfred B. DelBello, Westchester County Executive.

did not stop with ritualistic protest. He served official notice that his county intended to withdraw entirely from the company's monopolistic grip "as soon as an adequate alternative can be found." When Mr. DelBello's first potential rescuer, the State Power Authority, Informed him it had no extra power to make available, he appointed a six-member task force to widen the search,

Despite the regularity with which Mr. Luce, whose raise brings his annual salary to $200,000, plus $50,000 in deferred compensation, finds himself under consumer and official fire, there have been perceptible improvements in operating efficiency since he came to Con Edison.

The most dramatic—though osually least noticed -of the changes has been the strenthening of the system through new installations and retirement of old generators to a point where New Yorkers not only have all but forgotten the total blackout of November 1965 but also bave largely stopped worrying shout the voltage cuts and temporary interruptions that used to be a predictable accompaniment of every summer.

Some Good Marks

In terms of uninterrupted service, Con Edison's 1975 performance was seven times as good as that of the rest of New York State'e utilities.

The Public Service Commission, no longer a meek servitor of Con Edison, retained the Boston management engioeering firm of Arthur D. Little Inc. to make an exhsustive study of the utility's managerial practices. Its final report, not yet released, makes numerous proposals for innovations, but generally applauds the company for mansgerial skill.

As for investors, etill benumbed by memories of Con Edisoo'e skipping of its quarterly dividend in April 1974, a first for tha system, its earnings hava recovered to such an exteot that its current 11.5 perceot return on equity puts it in fourth place for profitability among the dozen largest electric companies in the country.

However, what makes sharebolders happier is no source of joy for consumers, The company notes thet, even though the price of its common stock has tripled from the low It hit after the missed dividend, it is still selling at only half its book value. This evidence that the market wants still higher profits before it makes available the hundreds of millions in new capital Con Edison requires for modernizing its transmission lines and substations is the chief basis for the latest application for higher rates.

If there is any hope for reversing this element in the climb in electric rates it lies in the probability that city and state authorities will join in trying to insure that a much bigger proportion of Coo Edison's financing needs will be met by transferring the obligation for power generation to planta built by the State Power Authority or other public agencies. That is already happening in two big plants atarted by the company and being completed by the state.

This teaming-up of publicly generated power with Con Edison's privately owned distribution network is likely to be an increasingly important element now that Governor Carey has signed a bill to coordinate the state's now chaotic energy policy.

The basic problem, bowever, remains the fact that taxes, mostly atate and local, account for 25 percent of the company's average bill to its customers, while another 33 percent goes for fuel. Its taxes per kilowatt bour are tripls those of New Jersey's Public

The interaction of local taxes and utility rates is a source of increasing concern. The city expects to save $18 million this year and close to $30 million oext year through use of tax-free state-developed power brought in by Con Edison. The transit system expects a parallel saving of $22 million this year, a pillar of Its hopes for holding the 50-ceot fare steady.

But consumers are largely on the outside looking in so far as state power is concerned. Every state sod city study of the exodus of business from the metropolitan area indicates that high electric costs are a major factor. The same thing goes for the flight of the middle class. For that reason the new State Energy Office and City Hall will be exploring in the next few months the advisebility of tax adjustments that would extend to privats users some of the dividends public agencies are now getting from state-geoerated electricity.

New York's Waters Have A Very Cloudy Future

By CHARLES KAISER

Swimming in the Hudson?

In 1965, when Nelson A. Rockefeller was still pushing the notion that government could do everything, he predicted bathers in the river by 1970. In 1970 he said the Hudson would be pristice by 1975.

This year, Charles Samowitz, the city's water commissioner, said there will never again be swimming in the Hudson. The city ia broke, the cost of treating all the sewage that empties into the river would be prohibitive, and swimming-quality water in a river without beaches is no longer a realistic priority.

The defiling of Long Island's beaches earlier this summer, and the buge fish kill discovered last month off the coast of New Jersey, the largest Federal scientists have ever observed in the area, are two more reminders that clean water in the metropolitan area bas become a dream deferred by tight municipal budgets and lax Federal enforcement of ocean dump-

Since 1965 New York City and other cities and towns in the area have spent hundreds of millions of dollars for new sewage-treatment plants, and Congress passed a law io 1972 that was supposed to end all ocean dumping that endangered "human health, welfare or amenities."

Nevertheless. Federal scientists who have been studying the waters south of New York City are certain that they are dirtier today than they were

"They have to be," said Comdr. R. Lawrence Swanson, who cited population increases in the metropobin the nearby ocean. Commander Swansoo heads e project of the Na-

tao area as the underlying cause of more pollutioo

tional Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration that has speot $10 million studying pollution in the New York Bight, a 15,000-square-mile area extending from Montauk, L.L., to Cape May, N.J.

Environmentally the bight is one of the most overstrained bodies of water anywhere off the United States coast line. It is the recipient of about 80 percent of all American ocean dumping, as well as the final resting place for much of the pollution generated by 15 million people in the metropolitan

Environmentalists tend to divide the area's waterpollutioo problems into two categories: raw and inadequately treated sewage, which probably is the source of most of the unsightly "floatables" that have been appearing in increasing numbers on Long Island's beaches-plastic tampon inserters, cigarette filters, and sucb-and ocean dumping.

New York City is just completing an $868 million program upgrading most of its sewsge-treatment plants, and that job will be finished next year, deapite the fiscal crisis.

However, there is no money in sight to build the huge North River plant in the Hudson River, the one Mr. Rockefeller epparently believed would bring back the swimmers. Until the funds are found, 200 million gallons of raw sewage will cootinue to enter the Hudson daily.

Even when that sewage does get treated, there still will be no possibility of swimming. That is because like most older cities. New York has a combined sanitary and storm-water system. When it rains, sewage pours directly into the cities' rivers, because the treatment plaots are unable to handle the vastly increased volume created by the storm-

The catch-22 of weter-pollution control is that as the city's rivers get cleaner, the nceans get dirtier because new sewage-treatment plants produce sludge -and the sludge is then dumped in the oceao. There has been much talk of phasing out ocean dumping, but almost no action. In 1972 Congress passed a law that gave the Environmental Protection Agency the authority to end most types of ocean dumping. It never bas. Instead, Gerald M. Hansler, the agency's administrator for the New York region announced in 1974 that the sludge dumping site would be moved ferther out to sea by 1976, because of fears that the matter was moving toward Long Island beaches. In 1976, Mr. Hansler renounced the plan, because

Commander Swanson's group had concluded that the sludge was not causing pollution within a half mile of the beaches, and the dangers of befouling a whole oew site were unknown. Actually, Commander Swanson's position is s little subtler than that. His scientists have found beavy metals and organic carbons within a half mile of the beach that he says may or may not be related to sludge dumping.

The problem be finds is that there are so many different sources of pollution in the bight that it is impossible to link specific cause end effect.

Commander Swanson does not discount the sludge dump as a threet to the environment, but he says it is less of a threat thao the contaminants from the Hudson River and Raritan Bay, and the pollutants from another, less publicized dump operated by the Army Corps of Engineers.

Although the eovironmental agency shares jurisdiction with the corps over its dredge-spoil site off New Jersey's coast, it has not tried to discourage the corps activity there, where 11 million cubic yards of material dredged from the bottoms of the ares's harbors are dumped every year.

WEEKEND COLLEGE (wek'end'-kol'i)), n. 1. A special feature of Marymount College. Tarrytown, New York. which offers a college degree on a weekend basis. Students attend classes one weekend. followed by two weekends off, based on a trimester arrangement. usually with three weeks or so between trimesters. If the student has an associate degree, he or she can obtain a bachelor's degree in just two years. 2. Designed for the highly motivated student, the program requires independent study and a willingness to work hard, but the courses available under the areas of concentration ... Psychology, Business/Economics and Sociology have been known to bend students' minds and expand their horizons for-ever. 3. Wherever possible. Marymount gives credit for life/work experience. Actual occupations, extensive travel, or volunteer work enriched by individual reflection on that experience will also be considered for academic. credit. 4. For those interested in the above requirements; willing to arrive on campus in time for dinner on Friday evening, and willing to study through till Sunday afternoon, the College offers many advantages. These are described in its brochure, available by calling or by sending in the coupon below. 5. The next trimester begins September 17, 1976. Registrations are being accepted now.

Research scientists, their Government regulators and animal lovers are involved in a dispute about the necessity and procedures being used in experiments related to problems of buman sexuality.

For three weeks, the Museum of Natural History has been picketed by animal-rights groups who say experiments being done there on cats are cruel, involving such practices as "electro-physiological" testing, in which the cats die after electrical stimulation to the genital organs. The picketers also deoy the relevance of the experiments to human sexual problems.

Medicare Fraud

No one can be sure bow much money is fraudulently obtained by doctors under Medicare programs, hut Sen. Frank E. Moss, chairman of the Senate subcommittee on Long Term Care, has charged that such fraud now amounts to more than $300 million a year.

Mr. Moss's figure was based on a projection hy his subcommittee staff, which in turn was based on information from Medicare iovestigators, United States attorneys who have prosecuted Medicare frauds, and a national sampling in at least 25 states. According to these estimates, 4 to 6 percent of the 250,000 doctors participating in Medicare engage in such fraud, and their charges account for 10 percent of the $3 billion paid to doctors under

However much money is stolen, it is agreed by all parties that much more is wasted through Medicare and Medicaid combined, either by doctors who perform or order unnecessary work, or by patients who demand such work. Mr. Moss's subcommittee staff has estimated that about three times as much money is thus wasted as is stolen.

Where We Stand by Albert Shanker President United Federation of Teachers

Teacher Supply Exceeds Demand

Surplus Offers Challenge, Opportunity

here are times when we fail to do the right thing because we are caught off guard, because we were not prepared for the unexpected. But this is not the case with respect to some of our major problems in education.

For a number of years we have known that there would he a radical change in the supply of and demand for teachers. From the end of World War II until 1968, there was a drastic teacher shortage. Many school systems opened with some teacherless classes. Thousands of teachers taught in specialties other than those they had prepared for. Many districts had "temporary" and "substitute" teachers teaching on a full-time basis. Licensing standards were revised downward to enable more to

But from 1968 on there have heen more teachers than teacher openings. An article by Allan C. Ornstein, "Educational Poverty in the Midst of Educational Abundance: Status and Policy Implications of Teacher Supply/Demand" in the April 1976 issue of Educational Researcher (a publication of the American Educational Research Association) discusses the issues involved in this new situation.

Effects of Abundance Begin to Show

Ornstein cities estimates that by the end of this decade there may accumulate between 100,000 and 400,000 graduates who want to teach but will be unable to find jobs. But we doo't have to wait until the end of the decade to see the effects of the changed supply/demand situation." The surplus of beginning teachers has already affected the mobility, re-eotry, and turnover patterns of experienced teachers," writes Ornstein. Mobility has declined and many "previously mobile teachers are being forced to enter the ranks of the unemployed."

Some school districts are trying to save money by filling positions with less expensive inexperienced teachers. (This may well explain why some school districts have dismissed striking teachers.) There will be still other dislocations as some subject areas expand and others are reduced. Also, some conflict can he expected, Ornstein points out, hecause "teacher supply and demand can no longer he considered simply in terms of numbers, geography, and subject fields. Personal characteristics such as sex, race, and ethnicity must be considered . . ."

Ornstein predicts disillusionment and bitterness among graduates seeking teaching positions. "Many will wind up taking temporary jobs such as driving cahs or typing with the hope of fioding a teaching slot in the near future. Some will haog on and find substitute teaching jobs on an irregular basis; a great many will just lose interest in teaching and seek employment in other fields. It is also likely that the gravity of the situation will produce a reaction that reduces undergraduate enrollmeots in schools of education. This may curtail some of the anticipated surpluses, hut it will have second-order effects on the profession as well."

Unprecedented Opportunity for Improvements

Ornstein asserts that the availability of large numbers of teachers need not be viewed as a purely negative and disastrous event. It "provides upprecedented opportunity for improvements in school and teacher education programs, as well as for the selective recruiting of students preparing to teach and upgrading teachers with substandard qualifications."

He suggests a number of approaches. These include:

- Using more teachers to reduce class size and provide more course offerings and special programs.
- Developing a system of lifelong learning; Ornstein cites the Educare program of the American Federation of Teachers.
- Demanding higher levels of competence from incoming teachers.
- Giving new teachers the equivalent of the internship program for doctors.
- · Granting periods of time to experienced teachers in which they can learn new methods and improve their skills either at colleges and universities or at teacher centers run by teachers and for teachers.
- Accepting teachers only from institutions accredited by the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Educatioo (some 40 per cent of teacher training institutions are not accredited) and making sure that NCATE enforces high accrediting standards.

Teacher "oversupply" could be a disaster or a blessiog. It could mean the addition of hundreds of thousands to the ranks of the unemployed. It could mean conflict as to who gets the few available jobs.

But it could be, says Ornstein, that "the same oversupply that threatens the profession might he turned around to enhance it. The transient nature of teachers now can casily be checked and quality in the level of competence and training required for entrance into teaching now can be improved."

Back in the U.S.A.

John Lennon, the writer-musician and former Beatle, has won a four year battle with United States immigration authorities. He will be allowed to remain here as a permanent resident alien, and to apply for U.S. citizenship in five years. Mr. Lennon's original resident-alien application was rejected by an immigration judge because of his conviction in England in 1968 for possession of marijuana. Some Lennon supporters felt then that his anti-Vietnam war activities had prompted Government plans to deport him. But it was the same judge who ruled yesterday in Mr. Lennon's favor. The testimony of several promiment witnesses in Mr. Lennon's favor apparently made the difference. "It's great to be legal again," said Mr. Lennon.

Decision On a Chairman Stephen James Chinlund, an Episcopal priest and advocate of prison reform, has been appointed chairman of the State Commission of Correction by Governor Carey. The commission has been without a chairman since April, when the Senate rejected the appointment of law professor Herman Schwartz. Mr. Chinlund once worked as a counselor for prisoners and also served a brief term as supervisor of a correctional facility. Although Senate confirmation bearings will not begin until January, Mr. Chinlund will start touring the state's prisons next mooth.

Indecision On a Prosecution

Fritz Efaw, a Vietnam war exile indicted for draft evasion who had returned voluntarily from England so he could address the Democratic National Convention on the subject of amnesty for draft evaders, may be prosecuted in Oklahoma City on a draft evasion charge. His attorney bad moved for dismissal on a technicality, and United States Attorney David Russell had originally said he would concur. But he is now reconsidering that position and may yet decide to bring Mr. Efaw to trial. Gary Hoenig

How to Search For Undefined 'Life' on Mars

By WALTER SULLIVAN

If the Viking lander, now incubating a number of Martian soil samples, produces evidence that life exists-or has existed—there, it will be a turning point in man's understanding of his place in the universe. It will mean that life is not unique to the earth: Having arisen on so seemingly hostile a planet as Mars, it must permeate the cosmos.

The Martian discovery would also convert biology from an intrinsically parochial science—dealing with life as it. has evolved only once-to one that is more cosmopolitan. If man finds out other ways to "live," he should understand better some of the subtleties of his own life processes.

These thoughts began to percolate through the scientific community some 15 years ago when rapid developments in rocketry made it seem feasible to reach the surface of Mars and look for signs of life. Such e possibility initiated a debate as to the nature of life and how life might be detected that has culminated in the experiments that began last Wednesday when a sample collector reached out repeatedly from the Viking lander to scoop up soil and drop it into the hoppers of various experimental units.

How does one look for life than mey be very different from our own? How can one be sure the observations reveal living processes rather than non-biological activity? Just because something moves on the Martian surfece will not mean it is alive.

The debate over how to seek the answers to such questions reached a turning point in the Exobiology Study of

A schematic representation of the three life-detecting experiments abourd the Viking lander. The carbon assimilation test is to see whether radioactive carbon has been incorporated by anything living; the carbon "exhalation" experiment is to see if anything consumes a radioactive nutrient and then exhales carbon dioxide. The gas exchange test will determine if gases typical of those generated by living organisms are formed.

1964-1965, carried out at Stanford University on the West Coast and Rockefeller University in New York at the request of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. The meetings were conducted by the Space Science Board of the National Academy of Sciences.

The co-chairmen were Dean Colin S. Pittendrigh of Princetoo University and Joshua Lederberg of Stanford. Many others responsible for the current experiments were et the sessions in California and New York. One, Wolf Vishniac of the University of Rochester, had been scheduled to participate in the current mission but died in 1973 from a fall while collectiog soil samples in Antarctica, Such samples were used to test the efficiency of tha Viking biology package in detecting treces of life. The Space Science Board study agreed that anything organized to draw nourishment from the environment and reproduce itself should be considered "life." Furthermore, the scientists found no reason to consider life unique to the earth. They argued that, contrary to earlier beliefs, life does not manifest some mysterious "élan vital" lying outside the realms of chemistry and physics.

The study group considered the possibility that life elsewhere might not use water as its primary solvent or carbon atoms to form the backbones of its moleculestwo essential features of earth life. One participant, Carl

Sagan of Cornell University, has dramatized the problem by proposing that, while the biological package is looking vain for any signs of life, some exotic creature may be "munching oo the zirconium paint" of the lander.

The most obvious way to seek life on Mars is to "look" and the lander's cameras are being used to see if anything moves or looks suspiciously biological. Even though their scanning is slow, as Sagan has pointed out, they would show indications of movement if, for example, a giraffe walked by. The Marsquake detector-if it can be freed to operate properly or if the ooe oo Viking 2 functionswould also record footfalls.

This was never considered a very serious likelihood and seems even less so now that we can see how barren the landscape is. Empoasis in the search is on microscopic life forms and tests are being carried out for chemical transformations wrought by small organisms at least as they exist on earth.

The chances of detecting life on the first try at the first landing eite are slim, particularly since there is no certainty that Mars ever offered the warm, stable, watery environment that enabled life to arise on earth.

One of the experiments seeks to learn if anything in a soil sample "breathes" in the Martian air (largely carbon dioxide) to form carbon-containing material. The sample is exposed to carbon dioxide whose carbon is radios, The soil is then tested to see if any has become radio by incorporating that carbon. Another test "feeds" to a soil sample nutrient contain radioactive carbon. If any of this food is it is assumed that some of the radioactive carbony given off as a waste product. The instrument in such e discharge. The third test examines another sample for game might be generated by living organisms methane, or nitrogen or hydrogen. It also watches to see if any dioxide in the atmosphere sealed up with the said

In addition to these tests another device, if it w made to function, will examine soil samples for o molecules indicative of past life or of a process of che evolution that marched part way along the way 6 From meteorites and from the radio emissions of clouds among the stars it is known that molecul complex as amino acids, from which proteins are in have evolved without any help from living organiswill therefore be of special interest to see if this ha gressed farther on Mars.

Early in planning the mission it was recognized small computer aboard the lander, conducting a "dia" with a much more elaborate computer on earth, w best substitute for having a team of biologists at the ing site. The experiments had to be designed like a ple choice examination, so that simple questions on asked whose answers were easily transmissible.

Because of the prolonged lag in communications, control from earth was of little value. An exchange communications with Mars, now more than 200 s miles away, takes 40 minutes, using up a large fracthe time each day when the lander, the relay state Mars orbit and the earth are aligned.

Development of the biological package, roughly on: foot in volume, took a number of years and cost $50 million. As originally conceived in 1964 it was an ABL (Automated Biological Laboratory) to be during an opportune encounter between Mars at earth in 1971. Its final form is a masterpiece of mir zation with some 40,000 electronic components.

Dispatch of the first Viking to Mars has been a to gamble—in each case a "long shot." The first bet w it could be landed intact and function well. That or off. The second is that it will provide convincing e about life, which remains to be seen.

Programs Have Been Dropped or Reduced in Many Districts

It Is a Short Summer at Summer Schools

By DAVID VIDAL

Summer no longer necessarily brings summer school.

In response to rising costs and inflation, unceasing demand for new school services and the steady depletion of financial and tax resources with which to pay for them, more and more school districts in the metropolitan area have cut down on or eliminated their summer programs.

In New York City, the budget for summer school programs fell by 80 percent this year. In New Jersey, the entire summer school system was temporarily closed down while the Legislature struggled with a new school financing formula. In many of the 200-odd-suburban school districts as well, the same factors have severely curtailed the traditional role of the summer school: to give thousands of students an opportunity to mix summer fun with learning, or to allow some to catch up and others to advance in their work.

Not even the wealthiest districts seem immune to the trend. In the Westchester County community of Scarsdale. for example, per pupil expenditures reach $2,700 a year, the school budget is nearly $16 million, and the estimated median family income is about $40,000, For years, Scardele'e schools have constituted a highly respected system, against which others in Westchester and elsewhere have often measured themselves.

"We ran two public school summer programs for every year except this year: a high school program which offered both remedial and enrichment courses and an elementary school program ruo with the Department of Recreation of the village," said Dr. Thomas Sobol, the superintendent of schools.

The 1,740-student Scarsdale High School, which stands away from the main road amid well-tended lawns and trees, had 270 studeots in its free summer program last year. This year, 170 students in five classrooms pay $80 in tultion for a reduced choice of six-week-long courses. . Chemistry, biology, French, Spanish and ninth-grade history -areas in which pupils often did advanced work-are good from the curriculum, Driver education and computer technology had been dropped even earlier.

The limited program that is now offered has no connection with the board of education, it was instead mounted by the independent Scarsdale Adult School and six teachers who had taught in past public school programs.

The curtailment of course offerings has meant that fewer students seeking enrichment have registered. In some other districts, the public school systems have been driven to impose tuition for summer programs, thereby driving enrollment down.

in New York City, where 55,000 students took courses a 17 regular high schools last year, this year there are only 10,000 pupils at six schools. At the elementary and intermediate levels, a 15 percent cut in Federal financing of remedial programs has allowed only nine of the 32 districts to keep summer programs, as against 21 last year. The pinch is not felt only io metropolitan areas and effluent suburbs. The school district of Amityville, L. I., oo the Nassau-Suffolk line, gets 30 percent of its budget from state aid. Almost one in every five of its 4,200 pupils comes from a poverty-level family. Diversified small businesses and a hospital are the major industries in Amityville, and school enrollment, about evenly divided between black and white pupils, has risen by about 200 in the last three years.

"Our population looks more like the city population than that of many Long Island districts, and the whole language competency area is the most important to Amityville," said

For that reason, Amityville schools offered a basic skills summer course in reading for elementary school pupils from 1966 until 1974. Between 275 and 300 pupils participated in the last year of the program. Now it too is gone.

Title One Federal funds, on which the Amityville program depended, were cut two years ago. Other Federal funds under the Emergency School Aid Act, designed for districts with many disadvantaged pupils, were also cut, adding up to a total loss of nearly $500,000 out of a total $11 milion

The summertime recreational programs in swimming, baseball and handball that the beachside viltage has sponsored for more than 20 years continue. In the mornings, some 200 youngsters gather for instruction in swimming at Amityville Beach, and many from surrounding villages also participate.

But the educational loss that always takes place between June and September is beginning to accumulate for some pupils, who each year enter further and further behind, as the twice-a-year Metropolitan Achievement Test administered to the pupils has already begun to show.

Amityville has its beach and Scarsdale its swimming pools and tennis courts as readily available recreational alternatives to summer echool.

But it is the academic programs, whether for remediation or eorichment, to which school officials in both villages attach the greater importance. Prospects for the expansion of either seem equally bleak.

"I wouldn't venture to guess," said one Scarsdale teacher. "It will be a long time before we see that kind of thing

THE AUSTRALIAN NATIONAL GALLERY

CANBERRA A.C.T.

Applications are called for the position of Director, the Australian National Gallery. Situated beside Lake Burley Griffin in the national capital, the Gallery is under construction and is scheduled for completion in December 1980.

The Gallery's collection includes Australian and worklwide painting and sculptures, prints, drawings and extensive holdings of primitive art and the arts of Asia. Some curators have been appointed and others will be appointed as appropriate. The Gallery has already commenced a major program of touring exhibitions within Australia.

The Director is responsible to the Council for the general administration and artistic direction of the Gallery. The Director is a member of the Council of the Australian National Gallery and is the Council's Executive Officer. The Gallery is maintained and funded by the Commonwealth Government.

Applicants should have extensive knowledge of the arts, experience in museum, gallery, or similar administration and possess proven qualities of leadership. Suitable knowledge, experience and ability in these areas are considered more important than formal qualifications alone.

The appointment will be under the National Gallery Act Number 61 of 1975. Salary will be commensurate with qualifications of the successful applicant. Applications, together with names of three professional referees, should be addressed to the Secretary, Department of the Prime Minister and Cabinet, West Block, Canberra, A.C.T.

2000. Australia. Applications should be lodged with the Department by September 15, 1976.

Reagan to Schweiker to Ford

Is John Connally Gerald Ford's answer to Ronald Reagan?

... The extremely able, extremely aggressive and-in ... many eyes extremely opportunistic former Governor wof Texas last week endorsed Mr. Ford for the Presidency -- after lurking in the Republican shadows for many months in the apparent hope of emerging a compromise candidate acceptable to both Ford and Reagan forces _ at Kansas City.

That hope has evidently dwindled; and now with ... superb timing Texas's most noted ex-Democrat, silver locks glistening in the summer sun, gallops up to the White House to lasso Mr. Ford-or, perhaps, to be lassoed by him. Even if Mr. Connally's endorsement was ever so slightly qualified-"between the two men ... the President is unmistakably the better choice," the implication being that maybe Mr. Connally would be still better-it did come at a highly strategic moment win the Ford campaign.

It was the very day after former Governor Reagan had thrown a bombshell into his own conservative ranks hy aelecting the G.O.P.'s arch-liberal Senator Richard S. Schweiker of Pennsylvania as his prospective-running mate. From Governor Thomson of New Hampshire to Clarke Reed of Mississippi the anguished cries of Mr. Reagan's most devoted and committed ultraconservative supporters were heard, shouting "betrayal."

And indeed it was quite a lot for them to swallow was at beat the gamhle of a desperate man, it has not only hackfired among erstwhile Reagan aupporters; it has also helped Mr. Ford by extending the spectrum of his appeal. The race has been so close that the President is not yet assured of the nomination at Kansas City; hut the events of the past week have given him an unexpectedly long shove in that direction—with or without

John Connally.

The Viking Spirit

As the first robot researcher putters around on Mars while a companion robot prepares for a landing, it becomes clearer than ever that the Viking program. has dimensions extending beyond the technological marvel of a soft descent hy a complex instrument package onto another planet that is millions of miles from Earth.

There is the exhibitanting sense that man's artifact has caught up with his fiction; that sci-fi has lost a chapter; that we may not be alone in the universe. There is renewed vindication of the promise of space science vand, with Bicentennial affirmations still loud in our ears. of the prowess of American scientists and the potential of American technology.

. It is indeed a cause for shame that human talents and "tesources can be so grandly displayed in space-yet so incompletely, often meanly, sometimes savagely demonstrated on Earth. But space exploration stands on its own ground; it offers a dimension of aspiration and of achievement that all mankind can share.

Named for the god of war, Mars can in future serve the purposes of peace it explorations progress under international auspices. The world needs Mars, as it needed Everest, not only to challenge buman ingenuity but even more to challenge the human spirit, to achieve 'a cosmic perspective of Earth's place in time and in the ever-expanding universe.

Serenity

Out where time sets its own pace, a kind of sweet serenity now possesses the land. The early rush for a place in the sun is over. The trend now is toward maturity. Grapes fatten on the vine. Early apples begin to blush. Wild hrackherries ripen.

The frantic frog chorus that was so loud a little while ago has relaxed to the slow rumble of the frog grandfathers whose voices echo in the night. On ponds and quiet backwaters appear large patches of green algae. Cattails lift green bayonetted ranks from the mucky margins, Dragonflies in the hot afternoon, swallows in the cool of evening, seine the air for mosquitoes.

The heat of midday throbs with the cleada's shrill drone, one of the drowsiest of all summer sounds. When the cicadas rasp you know the last of the insect hordes is out of egg and pupa and moving toward that stage again. Beetles swarm in the grass. Grasshoppers rattle into the air ahead as you walk the pasture path. Green hornworms gnaw at the tomatoes, strange creatures that become broad-winged sphinx moths and haunt the flower beds at dusk.

The struggle for life goes on, but the great baste of the green world is past. Even in the insect world a kind of balance is struck. It is as though we were bidden to watch and listen and understand, relax the little worries, know the big ones for what they are, and strike our own balance on serenity.

Antitrust Lives..

."Antitrust," said the late Prof. Richard Hofstadter of Columbia University, is "one of the faded passions of American reform." Faded it may be, yet it never fades away. For, despite the disillusion of many liberal reformers and the disgruntlement of some conservatives, strong underlying forces keep anlitrust alive as an essential element in the American polity and economy.

Curiously enough, the constituency for antitrust includes both conservatives and liberals. For conservatives, antitrust is the means of asserting that competitive markets exist and of warding off a wider encroachment. of government regulation or control. And liberals see antitrust as a crucial defense against the unchecked growth of monopoly power, whether in the political arena or in the marketplace.

The pendulum has been swinging in recent years toward greater support for the good sense of the antitrust laws. In part, this trend has resulted from the rise of the consumer movement, and growing realization that competition (as in the provision of better eervices at fairer prices, in such cases as stock brokerage, banking, comnunications and transportation) is likely to yield better protection of consumer interests than hureaucratic regulation of legal monopolies.

The growing constituency for antitrust also results from a greater recognition on the part of many economists, husinessmen and government officials that competition (safeguarded by antitrust) makes for greater efficiency, when there is no basis for natural monopoly and no justification for "artificial monopoly," whether created hy government itself-or by private groups, and then sanctioned by government.

It is striking that the principal Presidential candidates. President Ford and Governor Carter, have both declared themselves to be strong supporters of strict enforcement of the antitrust laws, despite heavy pressures upon both. of them not to overdo their zeal.

Mr. Ford deserves particular credit for his nomination this week of Donald Baker, professor of law at Cornell University, to become the new head of the Justice Department's Antitrust Division. Mr. Baker will bring to the job outstanding professional competence, halanced and nondogmatic realism, and deep dedication to the free marketplace. Even in the six months remaining before a new Administration may take over, Mr. Baker has an opportunity to map new directions and set new guidelines for antitrust policy and its enforcement.

.But Needs Strengthening

Having a first-rate professional at the helm of the antitrust Division will be particularly important if new intitrust legislation, now working its way through Congress, ia enacted this year. The Senate has already passed hotly debated omnibus antitrust enforcement bill, ponsored by Senator Philip Hart of Michigan, an outtanding Democratic liberal, and by Senator Hugh Scott f Pennsylvania, the Senate Republican minority leader.

This co-sponsorship does not imply that a love feast antitrust has developed among liberals and conservaives. On the contrary, business interests opposed to too wigh an enforcement of the antitrust laws have leaned -with considerable effect-on both Congress and the resident, and there has been extensive watering own of the original Hart hill. Similarly, in the House, ntitrust legislation-divided by Representative Peter odino'a Judiciary Committee into three separate bills has been subject to intense business pressures.

Nevertheless, it now looks as though the two bouses f Congress are converging toward new antitrust legislaon that will do three valuable things:

• Enable state attorneys general to bring antitrust suits to protect the citizens of their states in cases where antitrust violations might otherwise go unpunished;

• Require large companies to give advance notice of planned mergers, thereby allowing time for the antitrust authorities to seek to block such mergers if they believe they would be anticompetitive;

• Broaden the Justice Department'a investigative authority, which until now has been limited in antitrust cases to obtaining only documentary evidence from the corporation directly under investigation. The new legislation would permit subpoents to be issued to obtain oral or written testimony from third parties, auch as suppliers and competitors, and to obtain evidence on potentially illegal mergers before they are consummated.

None of these elements changes the substance of existing antitrust laws; but all three should help produce more effective enforcement of the laws, if the antitrust officials are determined to use their expanded powers vigorously, and get good backing-or at least noninterference-from the President and state governors.

This bill shapes up as the most significant antitrust legislation in decades. It could help to preserve and enlarge competition in the American economy.

Mr. Reagan's Choice for Vice President

One's first impulse as a conservative is to interpret Mr. Reagan's identification of Senator Richard Schweiker as his running mate as a terrible act of political expediency as indicated by the fundamental and irreconcilable differences in their a priori views.

A moment's reflection on the variety of political ideologies and the peculiarities of Californian politics changes this, however. Mr. Reagan's choice is consistent with libertarian philosophy and surely represents a manifestation of this current, often overlooked, species of political belief. Libertarianism has attracted into its camp those on the traditional left as well as on the traditional right. In a profound and legitimate way it transcends these customary, but perhaps hereafter less relevant and desirable, political distinctions.

Libertarian beliefs and values are exemplified in the fiction and nonfiction of the American writer, Ayn Rand, notably in "Atlas Shrugged" (1957). As a sociopolitical prophecy, it is difficult to think of a book which better seems to characterize, and conceivably suggest the solutions to, our current political; economic and cultural problems. It would seem to be a most accurate and intelligent statement of the new ideas toward which the Republican, Democratic and independent parties are at present obtusely groping.

If Mr. Reagan can thus be excused, his act must be re-evaluated in terms of what political sense it makes or does not make. But a conservative's choice of a consistent opponent of gun control, abortion, Federal welfare, balanced budgets and school prayercould equally be applauded as an act of insight as deplored as an act of transparent and foolish political

In the Editor: Ronald Reagan's choice of ultra-Sheral Senator Schweiker as his running mate can only cause disappointment, disillusion and disgust among his supporters. I had always considered Mr. Reagan as a man of high principle, and I admired his strong and effective support of Senator Goldwater in 1964. But this cynical, transparently political maneuver is just too much to take. I believe that this move will boomerang and result in a firstschool busing and an advocate of ballot nomination of President Ford. JACQUES BRAMHALL JR.

Campaign Financing

To the Editor:

In connection with your July 26 editorial, "Exit the 'Fat-Cat,'" Presidential campaign finance reform, one important aspect of this legislation has not yet been sufficiently remarked by the press.

This reform legislation, with its provision for public funding, has been criticized for contributing to a further weakening of the parties, principally because of its provision for making funds available to individual candidates seeking the nomination. Now that Governor Carter has been nominated, bowever, the grant of $20 million of public funds for the general election campaign, which is contingent upon a refusal to accept any private contributions whatever, can contribute mightily to unifying, and therefore strengthening, the Democratic Party. The same will also be true of the Republicans' when they select a nominee.

Veterans of past campaigns will testify that much party discord was generated by the need to determine of the proceeds when the Presidential nominee addressed fund-raising affairs sponsored by state and local organizations or lesser candidates. Now that the Presidential nominee cannot accept private contributions be is cast in the role of Lord Bountiful, lending his presence to help others while asking nothing for himself. If, as Jesse Unruh used to say, money is the mother's milk of politics, our Presidential candidates can be expected to nurture large numbers of grateful political offspring in the months RICHARD F. Capital Punishment

To the Editor: Mr. Justice Powell's ruling staying the Supreme Court's capital punishment decisions is just a first step. Nong of the prisoners still eligible for the death sentence under the Court's decisions should be considered for execution without further state judicial proceedings. The reason for this is simply that the jurors who sentenced them, in all probability, did not helieve the death penalty would ever be imposed.

No prisoner has been executed in the United States since 1967. A series of Supreme Court decisions culminating in the Furman case in 1973 made it appear likely that no one would ever be executed again in the United States. Therefore, jurors who voted for capital punishment may well have dane so ant because they in fact wanted to impose death in the particular case, but rather because they wanted to assure that the defendant would be imprisoned for life, or as a protest against the Court's rulings. Fairness now requires that prisoners eligible for capital punishment be resentenced by jurors who know that, barring clemency, the death penalty will actually be carried out.

Apathy on Viking 1

To the Editor:

The Times reported on July 21 that at least one space scientist was disgusted at the "apathetic" reaction of the public to the Viking I Mars landing.

I think or hope I understand this reaction. I stayed up all night with Walter Cronkite over the first moon landing in 1969, even wept. I went to Canaveral with millions of others to see a subsequent Apollo launch. I was thrilled to the marrow, I could say I saw it with my own eyes, all ten seconds of it.

But it's all over now. It's history. We won't see anything more like itnor does the public want to, until the possible time in the far future when atomic power is cheap, safe and

Why? Because we've learned that there are conflicting priorities: the life, the health, and the happiness of man and his earth, Also, the motive for the muon landing was mainly nationalistic, chauvinistic, political competition-flagwaving-as has been so much of that of the Vikings. But the moon trips brought back pictures of the beautiful world, which among other things like the women's movement, has greatly helped us grow away from the intense, jingoistic, selfish macho glory-hunting of days past.

Against the Chorus, but for the 'Movement'

By Jonathan Kozol

Many young people in the last few years have started to accept a quite persuasive, but extremely dangerous, idea-one that many people in the right wing of this country dearly hope they will believe. This is the idea that something very special, once known as the "Movement," is all over.

There are at least three points about this issue that should be restated loud

The "Movement," first of all-whatever news reports might seem to say -is not something that "began," like a mushroom popping up after a rain-storm, one day back in 1960 or in 1963 and ended on a warm spring day in 1972 when Richard Nixon told us it was time to give up our conscience and go back to class. The whole idea of social struggle, whether it is called a "rent strike," "protest action," "student boycott," "union battle" or full-fledged "rebelhon," started long before the 1960's. Few of us ever got a chance in public school to hear about the major laborunion battles of the early 1900's. Few students ever hear about the genuine labor leaders of the working poor. Fewer, still, ever have the opportunity to read about the first authentic grassroots labor movement in the United States-the LW.W .- or "the Wooblies."

All the better reason, then, that we establish, here and now, that what some people call the "Movement" is not something that began ten, twelve or fifteen years ago and died of weariness in 1972. Toe principle of permanent struggle in the cause of justice goes back, in this nation, to the women organizers of the Massachusetts mills, to Emma Goldman, Big Bill Haywood, Woodie Guthrie and Joe Hill-and, in an earlier era, Wendell Phillips, Frederick Douglass, Theodore Parker, Garrison, Thoreau. It is essential that we do not let the television networks, textbook corporations or the daily press deny us our real heritage of struggle and revolt. A second point is that the reckless statement heard so often nowadays, that "kids are quiet in all sections of the nation," is, in literal terms, not so. I have visited and talked at length with kids, at something like 200 colleges and high schools in the last five years. In some cases, studeots are supporting the farm workers. In others, they are fighting for they stand up in support of ethical teachers who have been improperly suspended or expelled.

The truth is not that students are less active than they were in 1964. The truth is—they are far more active, but in battles far less grandiose and less flambovant.

This leads to one final point: To a large degree, the press not only tells about the truth, but also makes it so. If television keeps saying that the kids are "quiet" now, thousands of studeots start to say, "I guess it must be so." If Time devotes a cover story, as they did a few years back. to something they designate "The Cooling . of America," thousands of students respond, understandably, by saving to each other: "Well, I guess we must be cooling down." The point is that it isn't true unless we want it to be true. If the editors of Time attempt to tell us things are "cooling down," it's in our power to "heat things up"—and prove it

The student scene (the "mood on campus," as reporters like to say) isn't something loog ago and far away, congealed in heaven and decided on television. Editors in New York don't the rights of women. In others still, know any more about the "student scene" than do the squirrels in New Hampshire. The only people anywhere who know the student scene are those who are the student scene. .

History is not something that is done to you or me. History is made by men and women, ft will be changed by men and women too, if it is ever changed at all. If there is a battle to be fought against racism, hunger, war and sickness and the exploitation of the poor, it is a battle which depends upon the solidarity of young and old, of black and brown and white, of rebel rich and devastated poor, right here and now in our own hour, in our own nation, by our own energy, exhilaration-and our nerve. We can be exiles from the transformation of an unjust social order, or we can step forward in the vanguard of an army of nonviolent rebellion. The choice does not belong to men and women who create the news and cut the tapes at CBS and

There Was Once Money. Wasn't There?

By David B. Saxe and Dorothy F. Pariser

The largely unheralded development of Electronic Funds Transfer Systems is moving a credit-card-conditioned society toward a completely cashless environment, with severe repercussions for the American consumer.

The systems accomplish the electronic transfer of funds from one person's or company's bank account to that of another, providing a completely integrated computerized financial system through which the intermediate steps of paying unmerous bills and charges by cash or check would be eliminated.

Thus, John Doe enters a supermarket, collects his groceries, inserts his personal plastic EFTS card at the checkout register and, after authorizing $100, automatically pays $19.93 for his purchase and receives $80.07 in change. He then returns home, in: serts the same card into a slot in his telephone, dials a series of encoded numbers, and pays his rent and utility bills. Restaurant bills and theater tickets are similarly handled.

The system is activated by Mr. Doe's EFTS credit card, which instructs a master computer to debit his account by the amount he spends or specifies, count of the establishment providing the services or goods. .

Embryonic systems now exist in some banks. In certain retail establishments with point-of-sale terminals. at the time of purchase the credit of the individual can now be verified, his account charged and the sale totaled by means of a computer.

An advanced system would appeal to the consumer because of its convenience. The need to carry cash, the often burdensome task of writing checks, and the need for mailing bills would be eliminated.

- EFTS has the potential of offering dollar savings to the consumer. Computerized computations should improve the accuracy of billing and payment systems, and the consumer will have direct computer access to his bank account at any time. The payment of stated, periodic charges can also be handled automatically. Through its automatic verification system, EFTS will eliminate bad checks, bank overdrafts, and failure to pay reoccurring fixed expenses when due.

Nevertheless, this system may present serious drawbacks to the consumer. EFTS will take away much of the consumer's active control of his finances. If at any time his bank balance is insufficient to cover the payment of fixed, programed bills, he

> An even harsher blow to the consumer would be his inability to stop payment of a check if the purchased goods were defective or the services rendered unsatisfactory, a powerful weapon available to him against unscrupulous businessmen.

Accordingly, some mechanism must be built into EFTS to permit consumers to retrieve a completed transfer within a reasonable time.

Furthermore, tangential problems might arise. No longer would a periodic, easily understandable statement be sent to the consumer enabling him to maintain accurate control over his banking transactions. With no canceled checks, what legal proof of payment would the consumer be able to offer?

The centralization of the financial transactions of a consumer in the EFTS also poses enormous problems in the area of consumer fraud.

A felon operating in an EFTS environment could manipulate the accounts of the master computer and credit his own account with limitless funds. Although voice prints or finger- - fers systems.

The most ominous drawback of helps consumers to "float" large ex- : EFTS for the consumer is the potential for invasion and loss of privacy. Every transaction that an individual makes would be centrally recorded, thereby permitting a complete profile of an individual's spending habits and whereabouts, Legislation would be needed to control the type of information collected and to regulate its dissemination.

The growth of EFTS is inevitable. Yet no consumer groups have taken positions to insure the integrity of consumer rights as EFTS progresses. In fact, these groups appear to be largely unaware of the system's evolution_

Consumers must be informed that while an Electronic Funds Transfer System offers many practical benefits, could portend the early arrival of an Orwellian society if not properly regulated.

German Conquest

By C. L. Sulzberger

PARIS-One of the most significant recent developments in Western Europe has been the agreement between British trade unions and the British Government to extend the so-called "social contract" between labor and employers for three more years, thus avoiding new strike waves and consequent new inflation.

A similar kind of formula has applied for decades in West Germany which is at present also—like England - administered by a social democratic regime (in coalition with a liberal minority). The German system, known as mithestimmung or "co-management," has developed a unique form of cooperation among employers, employees and legislators.

West Germany has only one labor federation and it contains less than twenty unions. Therefore it is considerably simpler for worker, executive and government representatives to negotiate new contracts. And the country has perhaps the highest degree of democratic participation by employees of any land.

The system was introduced in Bonn by the Social Democrats in 1949 and is not linked to indexation of wages and prices. Available funds and credits are increased when necessary by federal banks to insure adequate abundance of money on the markets.

This formula has continued almost three decades under alternating Christian Democratic and Socialist governments. It has resulted in exceptional

The key is acceptance by German unions of the idea that it is preferable to negotiate wage increases of about 5.4 percent a year and be paid in rea money with fairly constant purchas ing power rather than to gain exag gerated settlements soon negated b runaway inflation.

West German political leaders headed by Chancellor Helmut Schmid: feel British Prime Minister Jame Callaghan and his head of the Exchequer, Denis Healey, recognize the validity of this approach. Indeed Bonn regarded Callaghan's ability t coovince restive unions as the key t bis success as a leader and to the chances of Britain's recovery.

No one has ever questioned the surprising moral qualities and vast talent of the English, provided they are well led. As London's inflation figures decline (although they have a long, long way to go; and in the wake of the new social contract, there is spreading hope things will start look ing up across the channel, even if the pound sterling still continues to suffe: from pernicious anemia.

There is no reason why Britis! unions, which have great political power, cannot be summoned to use that power with restraint and in the national interest. West German union: also have great political influence:

But the secret of the "German miracle," once the currency reform came shortly after World War II, has been joint efficient management of economic problems with shared oar ticipation by government, workers and employers. As they gained experience in this relationship, the unions behaved with increasing wisdom and restraine

The number of strike days lost to production each year has been eoor-mously higher to Britain—and worse in Italy — than in Germany where unions have now gotten into the habit of negotiation and compromise. Ulfimately this has been shown to pay off in wages for the workers and calm.for German society. Moreover, in the massive coal, iron and steel industries union representatives occupy 50 per cent of the seats of boards of directors and elect their own workers councils by secret ballot.

Prime Minister Callaghan's pledge seems to aim at a somewhat similar formula for Britain, He promised "the mutual commitment of all parts of the labor movement to maintaining the momentum of social, industrial and economic advance which is under way." He said "close consultation and understanding . . . will remain the linchpin of the social contract." All this, he hoped, would hold down prices and inflation and solve the balance of payments difficulty.

Of course, to achieve the plan and targets laid out for them, the great British people will have to concentrate on displaying their famous stiff up lip for a considerable time to come But, let us face it, the Germans weren' in the best possible shape in 194 when their initially tentative mitne stimmung formula began.

Britain had heroically stood in alone to Hitler's Germany and led conquering it, at an incredible cost it life and treasure. Maybe in some strange way the German Democrate pragmatic social contract formula now on the road to conquering British with their social and economic dogge

Phillies Set Back Mets, 2-1

By PAUL L MONTGOMERY The Mets treated 22,792 spectators at Shea Stadium to a comparative rarity-a home run by the bome team -as a punchless New York took on first-place Philadelphia in an afternoon contest.

However, as things turned out Milner's homer was the only run the Mets were to get and the Phils won, 2-1.

John Milner provided the marvel in the first inning with a drive into the rightfield seats, the first homer in 13 games. Larry Christenson, the Philadelphia starter, was the victim of the clout. He was later replaced by Tug McGraw when he strained a back muscle on a fielding play.

Jon Matlack, seeking to break a losing streak, pitched four hitless innings against the free-swinging Phillies, then yielded two runs on four hits in the fifth.

Matlack had gotten off to the fastest start of his career this season, compiling a 10-2 won-lost record by July 1. He had not won since then, losing three decisions in the interim.

Each of the five Olympics would have enough sports for a big stage—like eight acts at th New York Palece rather than your own show alone in Feoria. There would be enough athletes, countries and sports for opening and closing caremonies, yet a manageable size for an Olympic Village and the oew housing project this "village" would become. Perhaps we must divide our two Oympic shows into five. Certainly we oeed to keep the Olympics bigger and better than ever in a jaded world that needs pacetime heroes. The five-Olym-pics plan would allow more cities and countries to be hosts to the Games and to dream Olympian dreams.

Birds Do It, Cats Do It, Let's Play a Game

it was Sunday afternoon. Mankind was at play with its endless variety of rules and games. On the terrace a simpler game was et hand and it was a blood sport.

It was a main event between the Port Jefferson Cat (obviously an old World Football League franchise) and the Smithtown Wrens (Finches? Night-engales even, so wretched an ornithologist is the observer.)

The wrens were warming up by fly-ing from an overhanging bough to the terrace wall and back. The cat began to stalk them, using the wall for concealment and with yellow murder in his cealment and with yealow murder in ms.

eyes. His problem was that it was an easy spring to the wall, but his momentum would carry him over to an eight-foot fall to the garden.

The birds, perceiving this, landed regularly on the wall and edged back

They began chirping at the cat. How

It is widely known that cats are very averse to losing home games before sellout crowds. The cat went into a modified zone, waiting for the action to come to him. The birds, apparently pour le sport," and noting that the cat had no real shot at them from that angle, changed their offense in the second period.

They flew to the back of a lawn chair on the terrace. This made it a whole new ball game. From this angle, the cat could use ell his strength and speed if he could get within field-goal distance. One of the birds would fly to the back of the chair while the bench got on the cat hard. Every time the birds exchanged places, the cat im-proved his field position. Finally, both birds got on the back of the chair. Looking the cat in the eye, they began

Johan Huizinga, the behaviorist, say in "Homo Ludens, A Study of the Pla Element In Culture:" "Play is a volutary activity or occupation execute within certain fixed limits of time an place, according to rules freely accepte but absolutely binding, having in it aim itself and accompanied by a feelir of tension, joy and the consciousne that it is 'different' from 'ordinary life.'

He poiots out that this activity is fa from peculiar to menkind. He note: "Here we coma across another, ver positive feature of play, recates order is order." Or perhaps a minimalizatio of disorder.

If I read Professor Huizinga co rectly, play oo all levels is a metaphs for life, which so to speak clarifies life. The contest or game, although fr quently dangerous, is not execute where outside danger or confusion likely to prevail. Infantrymen just t turned from a fire mission may get t a game of softball, but it will be outsit sniper range. Small animals of may species will gambol and frolic, but n where a predator is likely to be.

Many different common-sense re sons are offered for the compulsion play. Naturalists say that the gambo of young animals are necessary to but muscles, wind and survival technique Football coaches call it "instillir character" oo the somewhat shaky pr sumption that "character" is a s technique in buman society. Farley Mowat in "Never Cry Woll tells of an extremely dignified pac leader who alleviated boredom by ir ducing the rest of the pack to chas him. The leader, holding a nice at vantage, suddenly doubled back aroun a boulder, like Jelluicoe crossing th 't'at Jutland or a crack-back blocker knocked one pursuer flyiog, tussle briefly with another. Then they a trotted up the hill, the best of buddies Game opened, rules understood, game played, game over. Back to the rea world with all its uncertainties.

This writer is not deeply steeped it animal psychology and can point ou only one other personal experience with an animal of a truly sporting character This was a cat in our local saloon we taught to play goalie. Cats are hard to teach, but this animal seemed to catch the idea. It would bat away shots on goal and never went after rebounds, which would have been na-

I am unsure what, if any, significance the above anecdote has except to suggest that the instinct to play, even dangeroualy, may be deeper rooted in the universal vertebrate psyche than must or any of us are aware. At any, rate, no marter bow unscientifically ar rived at, this is an argument that, if appreciated by golf and foothall widows, might lead to a more comfortable bublg penalty against Syd Howe of the Red Wings. He had cross-checked Gus Bodnar with a few minutes left in the game and the score tied, 1-1. While Howe was io the peoalty box, Babe Pratt of Torooto scored the winning goal and Toronto got the Stanley Cup. That infuriated Adams and Norris, the Red Wiogs' owner. From that time on, every year I'd be sent for an eye examination, and in my opinioo it was at Norris's instigetion. Actually, the fact that Norris and Adams wereo't food of me was the greatest thing that ever happened because it meant that the other five governors were for me. But don't think I wasn't still uoder a lot of pressure. We all were, except that officials felt it differently than they do todey. One big difference was that the dressing room of the referee and linesman stood practically open to the coeches and managers. As a result, they'd almost wait in line outside just to get io and intimidate us. There was no such thing as keeping your door closed. After every period somebody would come in complaining and trying to intimidate.

My problems started when I called a Nowadays, though, the referees have all the protection in the world. Meanwhile, I was going along and doing my best. Ironically, every so often some fan io the balcony would yell down at me. "Chadwick, you blind "!x(;," and I'd chuckle to myself because I knew they were balf right.

My condition didn't hamper me. I had 20-20 vision in my good left eye and was on top of the play even more than they are oow, I was never away from the oet when there was a play on goal and I didn't bave much trouble from the players, except for a few. Maurice Richard of the Canadiens and

Ted Lindsay of the Red Wings gave me the toughest time, although I orver thought they were picking just on me. I believe it was because of their per-sonal makeup and their character. They would have done it to anybody.

Richard was possibly the fiercest competitor I've ever seeo in any sport. If you weren't playing on the same team with Maurice Richard you were bis enemy, and that applied if you were a referee giving him penalties.

I remember being et a Lester Patrick Trooby dinner once, on the dais with cluding Richard and Milt Schmidt, I tried to get an eutograph for my son from everybody there. I asked Schmidt for his and naturally he gave it to me. Richard was sitting beside Schmidt, so I asked him oext.

"I give you no autograph; you only give me penalties," be replied. He was serious; it wasn't any joke with Richard and I wound up without his autograph.

Because of the way Richard and Lindsay were oo the ice, I had a special thing I'd do with them at the start of every season, and to this day I'm not sure whether I did it purposely or not. In the first three or four games of every season I'd give Richard and Lindsay misconduct penalties. I'd do it right away because if I didn't they might think I wasn't the boss. I had to assert myself early, and it was easier to do it . then instead of later on.

I'm pretty damn sure Richard and Lindsay knew I had only one good eye, especially with guys like Jack Adams in Detroit and Frank Selke in Montreal. And there was one time when the fact actually busted out in priot,

It was io a Detroit paper when I was asking for a two-week draft deferment to allow me to clear up the Stanley Cup playoffs before being drafted into World War II. The headline in the in toto on sports in the Soviet a or the other Communist counthao in the United States, or that is less interest in sports here. One take into account sports such as all and American football, in which is no organized international comon, and professional sports of all latter inclusion is quite justified. th not professionals in the Amerir European sense, the Communist es are professionals in that governsupport relieves them from finanressures and allows them to devote time to athletic endeavor. This is of professional athletes elsewhere, but the support, rather than being supplied by government from its economic resources, is furnished by the public at large in the form of fees paid for attendance at sports events and, in some sports, in part by corporate or private noncommercial contributions.

Mr. Karlson edvocates the creation of increased interest in sports of inter-octional competition that are not especially popular in the United States by the intensive use of public funds. His asons are apparently twofold: First, the increase in national glory to result from increased medal totals in the Olympics and international competition, and second, increased physical bealth among the general public.

Let us-consider the latter; if Mr. Karlson is taking Communist countries as models, I think he first must demonstrate that the average physical fitness of their citizens is indeed higher and that furthermore this arises from the sums spent in encouraging participation in international sports. Citing vast oumbers of citizens with sports awards is oot in itself sufficient if the standards of such awards are not known; one can also counter with the vast numbers of people who beve "lettered" in high school or college sports in this country, As to the first reason, I find a national concern with the number of medals garnered puerile, at best. Let us oot forget that once before we have seen the injection of political and national objectives into sports on the scale used by the Communist oations. Programs very similar were used by Nazi Germany, with similar claims for the results. For all the embarrassment over Jesse Owens, Hitler's Reich won a disproportiocate share of medals at the 1936 Olympics. I do not believe citizens of Communist countries beve a greater "right to sports" than those elsewhere. What they do bave is less ability to control the financial foundations of sports. How far do you suppose a Soviet citizen would be allowed to go in organizing a baseball league? There is no open debate of public policy, in particular concerning public spending. There is here, though, and if Mr. Karlson and others attempt to inject more politics and oationalism into sports and try to mold public interest in sports with Federal funds, be assured that I will vote against them every time and write an endless stream of oegative letters to my representatives in the Government.

LAWRENCE S. LICHTMANN Ithaca, N.Y.

American Way Means Winning Isn't Everything To the Editor:

It is appropriate to introduce some perspective into a view of the Olympics, which, to judge by the outrageous gush

it as a triumph of the Communist way of doing things and a challenge to America to do things the same wey. Some facts should be remembered. Only a totalitarian regime could produce such lately feted androids as Nadia Comaneci and Valery Borzov. The argument that their system is "superior" because it cops gold medals just updates the ob-servation that Mussolini made the trains run on time.

It must also be remembered that our best athletes are professional, having freely decided to do for pay what they do best. The Russian basketball team, consistent over the years, would be no whose members bave been remarkably match for the Boston Celtics: Or per-haps the Government should disband the National Basketball Association and recruit its members?

Shirley Babashoff has been accused of sour-graping for her observations about the East German robots she lost to. This bardly addresses her quite sensible message. It is oot conductive to humanity to live in a country in which the government runs everything. Finally, let's not forget that the support we give both our Olympic and our domestic professional athletes is voluntary: we decide to pay the price. Did the momes tthat supported Kornelia Ender's training come from voluntary contributions?

Nationalism Gives Spirit to the Olympics

MONTREAL July 31—As the curtain drops on the Games of the XXI Olympiad, this image emerges: Remove nationalism from the Olympiad and the Olymp pics and there can be no Olympics. Let the purists moralize and the editorial

Analysis writers agonize, but the sad fact is—for better or for worse - nationalism is what the Olympics are all.

The truth of this was written in every quivering rafter of the Forum on Tuesday night when the United States team won the basketball gold medal by defeating Yugoslavia American flags waved against a backdrop of faces screaming "U-S-A, U-S-A" and the scene was one of rampant nationalism.

There were voices and flags for the Yugoslavs, too, and earlier for the Russians. and the Canadians risk sounding the country there would have been heither cheers nor flags—betry there would have been cause there would have been Luders A Succession Starvin

Culture parties of the people were there to scheer not individuals and individual performances but to vent the strong feelings of patriotism and to see their unational team win. These are primitive feelings, the same kinds that excite opponents of prize fighting when they watch two men pummeling each other.

It is fashionable and chic and one-worldish to expound the joys of competition for its own sake, but the human spirit needs something more to cling to. Eliminate the majesty of the opening Olympic cere-mony, the parade of nations,

the flags, the ethnic costumes. Let the athletes march only as individuals, under one generic flag with only an Olympic anthem to sing. Should these things happen, the Olympic movement would soon die of financial mal-nutrition.

The moneyad man who propound and support the Olympics know—though they wallow in idealism and talk only of individual effortthat most nations that engage in these quadrenmial games are motivated by self-ish interests and national pride From the Soviet Union, which uses the Games as a political tool, to little Liech-tenstein, hungry for tourism, the Olympics serve specific purposes, The United States' motivation? It can be read between the lines of statements made after the basketball final.

"When you've grown up in the United States and they raise that flag and play the National Anthem, that's really something," said Dean Smith, the American coach. "I think a let of people would be grateful for the job we've done for America," said Scott May.

The athletes, the coaches and the officials did not talk of personal achievement, but rather the honor they had brought to their country.

All this, of course, runs counter to Olympic idealism. But the tears in the eyes of many of the basketball play-ers on the victory stand as the flags were raised and the National Anthem was played blurred them to individual effort: national pride came to the fore.

Eliminating team sports would not solve any prob-lems. That same nationalism dazzling parade of nations at the openiog ceremony; at the boxing bouts, at swimming, at track. There is no way to deny it, no way to escape it.

Perhaps the answer, then, is to lower our idealized sights end accept the Olym-pics for whet they are. To uoderstand that without na-tional prida there would be no national money to put national teams in the Games. To let each country openly stress athletic competition aa a national goal and make this a substitute for war. Io short, to stop trying to in, the East German women continued world-record performances

In East Germany, the men and women athletes are treated the same," Professor Schramme said during a recent news conference, explaining the country's formu-la for success. He really means it. East German women swimmers carry the sama workout schedules as the men and spend a mini-mum of 25 percent of their training in out-of-the-water programs such as weight lift-ing and other body-building

By contrast, Shirley Ba-bashoff of Mission Viejo, Calif., who is considered America's top woman swim-America's top woman swin-mer, works out five hours daily. Only about 30. minutes, or roughly 10 per-cent of her time is spent with weights, and the lifting is more diversion than serious conditioning.

Many American women athletes, particularly swim-mers, say they will never adopt serious weight-training methods, that the physiological and psychological effect of seeing themselves with broader shoulders would create further complications in a social life already inhibited by rigid practice sched-

East German women do not feel that they appear unfeminine, and their coaches point to the romance between 17year-old Kornelia Ender, who won four gold medals in swimming here, and Roland Matthes,the former Olympic. backstroke champion, as an example of doing what comes naturally

Some American swimmers, however, see the Ender-Matthes relationship as a genetic extension of East Germany's superman sports concept.

Many European journalists believe that the griping by American women has gone too far and is simply gosslp fed by jealousy. One report-er for Reuters, the British news agency, said that several East German swimmers were insulted over the attitude of some Americans during the Olympics.

They told me that Shirley got on a hus with a few other girls one day and began pointing at them and making fun of them," the woman journalist related. "Thay felt very hurt."

There is an unmistakable difference in the social patterns and life styles that set the two groups apart. American swimmers, for example, are a giggly group of upper middle-class teed-agers, the kind you might expect to find in one of those old Frankie Avalon beach movies. The East Germans appear far more serious, politely deferring much of their private. thinking to coaches.

East German women say they are happy the way they are, and they may be telling the truth. As athletes, they enjoy privileged status in their country, and East Germany's national sports com-mitment makes lifting weights more important than wearing makeup.

East German officials are conscious of the athletes interaction. They refused to allow any photographers for the reunion of Miss Ender with her grandmother, Mrs. Rosalie Lehmann of Salina, Kans: last weekend. The day after the meeting at her news conference in the Olympic Village, Miss Ender, sitting with hands folded through-out, seemed uncomfortable eveo talking about what was ooe of the more human stories of these games.

If U. S. women appear outwardly happier with their freedom, they are churning inside at the recent turn of events. Consider these statistics: at the 1972 Munich Olympics, American women one relay gold.

A similar shift has taken place in women's track and field since 1968. At Mexico

City, the Americans won three gold medals. They were that out in Munich for the first time and have not won a gold here thus far while East Germany already has collected eight golds and bunches of silvers and

"If we're going to compete, it's best that the U.S.O.C. (United States Olympic Committee) understands soorts medicing," said Willye, White. "If we're soons to compete against synthetic athletes, wemust become synthetis athletes.

There are reports that a number of top American women track and field athletes already have begun ex-perimenting with anabolic steroids, a line of drugs that cause the expansion of muscle tissues in the hope of aiding athletic performance.

Yet the absence of any extensive sports medicine programs in the United States has hindered the effectiveness of such experiments. In soma cases, serious withdrawal symptoms reportedly have appeared among some athletes who were forced to curtail steroid intake to comply with Olympic drug-control procedures.

Thus, the question for many American women ath-lates oow is: what price glory? Should they continua to train as they have in the past, or study more serious avenues to a gold medal, sacrificing something along the 'I don't envy our women, said Willye White, who was closing out her illustrious competitive career. "It's a decision they probably wish they never had to deal with. Fields of Friendly Strife

MONTREAL, July 31-The Games of the XXI Olympiad end tomorrow, and not a moment too soon. Another day or so of camaraderie and good will on the fields of friendly atrife and somebody would wind up with a knife be-tween his ribs. Up to now, this sweaty carnival bas run smooth as the course of true love, if you don's count the angry withdrawal of 30 nations, cheating disqualifications, rumors of attempted bribery, political and The Times ideological clashes, threats, bluffs, defections, charges of kidnapping and the use of forbidden

It won't be easy to wait four inng years to see them do it all over again in Moscow. Grantland Rice wrote a poem saying in effect that "wars are made by old men, but oh, how young they are where all the crosses stand." With occasional exceptions, the world's finest athletes who meet in these Games like and respect one another: it is their leaders who stir up trouble. The party here began with the Canadian Government of Pierre Elliott Trudeau breaking its word to the International Olympic Committee. Although the Government had promised that if Montreal got the Games, all teams recognized by the I.O.C. would be welcome, Canada yielded to pressure from Peking and refused to accept Taiwan as the Republic of China, the name accredited by the I.O.C. When hte I.O.C. didn't have the guts to bold Canada to its promise, Taiwan withdrew.

Black African natioos demanded that New Zealand be kicked out because a Kiwi rugby team had played in South Africa, the land of apartheid, The I.O.C. replied that rugby wasn't an Olympic sport, so 29 countries walked out-removing one of the five rings, each representing a continent, that make up the Olympic symbol.

Did the Worms Turn?

In addition to the usual complaints of incompetent or priudiced judges and rumors that this athlete or that team was high on drugs, discovery that a Soviet fencer had his sword wired illegally and disqualification of an American, a Czecb and a Pole for using anabolic steroids enlivened the fortnight of competition. There was also a report that a death threat had caused the withdrawal of the Soviet sprinter, Valery Borzov, from the 200meter dash.

Up to now, however, no male ringer masquerading as a woman has flunked the sex test.

Meanwhile, two Rumaniao athletes and one from the Soviet Union sought political asylum in Canada, This brought no official response from Rumanian authorities but Vitaly Smirnov, the boss Russian here, hollered that Sergei Nemtsanov, a 17-year-old diver. had been "kidnapped." Smirnov said last night that if the kid wasn't returned immediately to Olympic Village, the Soviets would pull out of today's competition and tomorrow's closing

However after meeting with the I.O.C. this morning, the Soviets withdrew that threat. It was explained euphemistically that the I.O.C. had "requested them not to take extreme measures." What probably happened is a that the I.O.C. said in effect: "You pull... out now, and we'll pull the 1980 Gamea out of Moscow."

Admittedly, that would require a form reversal by the I.O.C., which is not noted for displaying the courage of its convictions. If the I.O.C. sat still when a continent walked out of the show entirely, where would it get the backbone to take firm action about one country quitting a day or so ahead of

The Word Is Discipline

One answer may he that if the nation that has been awarded the next carnival were to pick up its toys and go home now, it would do more than embarrass its host. It would throw the whole Olympic movement into turmoil, threatening survival of the Games. With a ready-made club to usa in this emergency, the worms might turn.

Though they didn't go home, the Soviets didn't give Canada absolution for harboring defectors. Mihail Efimov, press officer, told Neil Amdur of The New York Times today that the U.S.S.R. still "reserved the right to make some solutioo in the future."

Did this mean Russla might boycott next September's Canada Cup, an open hockey tournament among Canada, the -United States, Czechosolvakia, Finland, Sweden and the U.S.S.R.? Sweden and the U.S.S.R.?

"Maybe," Efimov said.

Upto now there has been no official word as to young Nemtsanov's where abouts or his motives for defecting. There is a rumor that he is sweet on a girl he met on an earlier visit. However. he isn't the first athlete from beyond the Iron Curtain to defect during international competitions, and love. isn't always the spur.

As the story here goes, John Naber, America's top swimmer, invited his chief rival from East Germany, Roland Matthes, out to dinner, and after consulting his leaders Matthes returned with a long face. "They won't let me go." he is supposed to have said. People can get plumh sick of that sort of thing.

Confusion For Fans Of Track

program today). On Thursday, Arnie Robinson was on the long-jump runway and simultaneously Faina Melnik was in the discus circle. Robinson was the long-jump favorite and win-ner. Miss Melnik, of the So-viet Union, was the worldsecord-holder and favorite in the women's discus (she finished fourth). The spectators who lived and breathed track were watching each one, Most people were looking the other

"I didn't mind not being iotroduced" said Mac Wikins of San Jose, Calif., the world record-holder and gold medalist in the men's discus. "Maybe that's the way they do it at the Olympic Games. It's a warm, friendly atmosphere, but oot for the crowd. They're like a foothall crowd. drunk and rowdy, and they cheer only for their own."

As Wilkins suspected, the silence is more or less the way it is done at the Olymples. The docision not to in-troduce athletes was made by the International Amateur Athletic Federation, the world body of track and field. Each international federation controis the running of its sport at the Olympics, so what holds for the swimming pool alongside the Stadium or the Velodrome next door does not hold for track in Olym-pic Stadium.

The federations, in conjunction with the International Olympic Committee, decide how many athletes can compete in their sports. Each nation can enter one track athlete in each event, no matter how good or how poor he athlete's performance. If it enters two or three in an event, each must meet a performance standard. Even with those somewhat generous gindelines, fields for many women's track events were small. Only 13 women entered the shot-put, so all were passed into the final without qualifying. There were only 1S women for the discus. 10 nations for the 400-meter relay and 11 nations for the 1,600-meter

The reason for the small fields is new. This year, Eastern European nations seem to have entered only athletes they think can place in the first six. Anyone not good enough was left home.

Full House for U.S. The United States has an opposite philosophy. It sends as many track athletes as it can, even if they are not up to international standards. For example, no American woman discus thrower made the Olympic standards. so the United States could enter ooly one. She was Lynne Winhigler of Eugeoe, Ore., winner of the Uoited States Olympic trials last month in her hometown. Fourteen of the 15 women qualified for the final, the lowest qualifier at 181 feet 2 inches. Miss Wiobigier was the only one to miss. Her hest throw here was 158-2. short of her personal best of 174-1 and short of the rest of the world. But the American officials helieve that anyone who can compete in the Olympics should. Some people advocate that any athlete from any nation who meets an Olympic qual-ifying standard be allowed to compete. If that happened, the United States might have 20 men in the 400-meter. dash and the East Germans might heve 15 women in the discus throw. At a time when the Olympics are being criticized as too hig, they would become far higger.

The idea of the Olympics is supposed to be to compete, rather than win, and that is why every nation can enter one athlete, qunalified or oot in each track event. That leads to strange cir-cumstances. Mel Embree of Harvard finished fourth in the high jump in the Uoited States Olympic trial, clear-ing 7 feet 334 inches, and he did not make the team. Only 13 high jumpers here—three Americans, three Canadians, two Russian's and one each from Denmark, Hungary, France, East Germany and Poland—have ever jumped

So while Embrée could not jump in the Olympics, jumpers from Nicaragua, Brazil and Saudi Arahia did. Each failed in yesterday's qualifying round at the opening height of 6 feet 63/2 inches. Should such lesser athletes be allowed in the Olympics? Most people think they should, among them a young woman from Boston and an-other from Foster Clty, Calif.

Like the United States, Cuba had six men in to-night's finals. It began the night with a won-lost record of 39-5 for the two-week tournament. Seventeeo of those winning bouts didn't go the scheduled three-round distance. The Americans, with 13 fewer knockouts than the Cubans, took a 28-5 mark into the program.

For most of the Americans, the climb to the finals repre-sented long, long months, even years, of preparation. Mike Spinks, for example, said he had been fighting "all the time" during the last

Tve been home maybe seven days, that's about all," weight.

Tonight, Mike and his 23year old brother, Leon, had their mother cheering for them in person instead of at home in froot of the television screen. An anonymous beoefactor in St. Louis paid for Kay Spink to leave her home in a public housing project and come to Montreal to see her sons in the finals: But Mike pointed out that ed them to remain boxers. the trip didn't mean she wanted them to remain

"I got a praying family," he said, "and I got myself to remind me about winning a gold medal. But my mother doesn't want us to be fighters. She keeps telling me, 'Don't fight, Mike.' She tells that to Leoo, too. And my younger brothers want to fight, but she won't let them."

According to Spinks, the turning point in his amateur career came in 1974 at a Golden Gloves tournament in Springfield, Ill.

"I went up there and I fought four times, twice on Saturday and twice on Sunday," he said, "and I beat everybody.".

While most ringsiders regarded the Cubans and the Americans as the class of the tournament, at least one sports group, the Federation of Asian Amateur Boxing, has been yelling foul.

According to the Asians, the officiating has been "biased, politically motivated and favorable to e few countries." To solve the problem, the F.A.A.B. has suggested that videotape replays be used to refresh the judges' memories about what they just saw take place in the ring.

"It looked as if the judges came predetermined," a statement by the organization charged, "and took the decisions they made in the lobbies of hotels." Whatever the case, only

Some Olympic followers suggested that the Sovietthreat of withdrawal last night was really a warning to their athletes about the perils of defection. Significantly, security around and inside the Olympic Village was intensified today, particularly within the Soviet administration offices and around Soviet dormitory rooms.

Nemtsanov had completed his diving compellition sension in the wack, finishing nioth, and had been "depressed and distressed," according to So-viet officials. from the Olympic Village last Thursday and reportedly applied for refugee status in Canada. There have been reports that he is touring cen-tral Canada with a friend and checking in regularly with immigration officers. A spokesman for the Immigra-tion Department said today that Nemtsanov's age did not violate Canadian laws for persons seeking political asylum, that there was a "low-key" search for him and that the Soviet athlete was not compelled to leave Canada until Aug. 31, when his Olympic visa expired.

The Blood Scandal

MONTREAL, July 31-The scientific scandal of the Olympics was as quiet as the flow of blood until Lasse Viren of Finland added the 5,000-meter gold medal to his 10,000-meter gold medal. "He has got that extra blood in him," said Ron Dixon of New Zealand. Lasse Viren and other European distance runners are suspected of being strengthened by what is known as

"How do you raise the hemoglobin," he said. "I don't know. Do you know?" That's a noo-denial denial a Watergate denial. Under the Olympic medical rules, blood doping is not illegal. But it is unethical. Other runners call it "cheating", and it is. The problem is proof: By the 1980 Olympics in Moscow, if not before, look for a medical ruling. One sympton is that eventually the body rejects the old blood and the runner develops a jaundiced appearance. Another clue might be a pulled muscle, rare for a distance runner. But with the extra pint of blood, the body is too strong for its own good. Swimmers, cyclists and speed skaters in Europe also have been suspected of experimenting with blood doping. But many athletes have rejected an experi-

In the far corner, tiny Nadia Comaneci always sat under an orange-and-blue New York Islanders poster.

Of all the trackmen, the one that most National Football League scouts would covet is Alberto Juantorena, the Cuban who is the first to win the 400meter dash and the 800-meter run in the same Olympic meet. In the final 50 meters of the 400, he appeared to be running more with the thrust of his torso than the thrust of his legs—the way Secretariat did. Sports writers from the United States wonder where the Cuban would fit best on their National Football League team, at wide receiver or running back. But when Bill Gleason, a historian of the Chicago Bears, was asked, he shook his head.

"The Bears," he said, "would make him a guard."

The most popular Olympic ethnic joke involved the withdrawal of your favorite ethnic) water polo "The horses drowned."

Four years ago a poster of Mark Spitz with his seven gold medals dan-gling on his chest emerged as a collectors item. The morning after the swimming competition here ended, Big John Naber was informed of a request to pose for a news-service photo wearing his four gold medals.

"I'm not going to pose with all my medals," the American said politely. "Comparisons will be made that I don't want to be made."

Miklos Nemeth of Hungary won the javelin throw with a world record of 310 feet 4 inches. Joe Namath whose named once spelled as the javelin thrower's is, can't throw a football that far. But the aerodynamics are the same -keep the nose up.

In the yachting competition on Lake Ontario, a British boat in the Tempest Class was a bad last when its two-man crew decided to set it afire. The flames prompted a Canadian destroyer to come to its rescue but the British crew waved

"We're quite all right," the British skipper said. "We always sail like this." But soon, with smoke obscuring the finish line, the destroyer sank the British boat by ramming it. Down it went, the lake extinguishing the flames.

"It wasn't worth taking ber all the way home," said the British skipper, a 41-year-old undertaker. 'We wanted to giva it a proper Viking funeral."

In bilingual Quebec, the biggest loss in translation was watching a late-night movie with John Wayne speaking in a beavy dubbed-in French voice.

Before the United States teams arrived in Montreal, three Olympians-Shirley Babashoff, Scott May and Frank Shorter-were asked by Sports Illustrated magazine to gather for a pre-Olympic cover photo at West Point, where the women's swimming team was training. Scott May had to be flown in on a chartered plane. Frank Shorter had to interrupt his training for the marathon, But at the assigned hour, they were there and Shirley Babashoff was not. Eventually she was found in powder room.

'I'm not doing it," she said. "But it's all been arranged," she was

"No, it's a finx," she said. Shirley Babashoff finally surrendered. The cover appeared. Shirley Babashoff won only one gold medal and that as a member of the 400-meter freestyle relay in the last swimming event. But the Sports Illustrated cover hadn't finxed her. Kornelia Ender of East Germany

John Tate, the United States heavybout on the Muhammad Ali-Ker Norton card for his debut as a pro if he won the gold medal. All the gold medal winners on the United States team will be invited to the heavyweight title bout Sept. 28 at Yankee Stadium.

Dean Smith's control of the United States basketball team was obvious in their undefeated procession to the gold medal. And after the victory ceremony, he was chatting with newsmen when he noticed Walter Davis, one of his University of North Carolina players, walking into the interview area with the other United States players. Walter Davis was wearing a hlue haseball-type cap with "USA" in red and white that many American athletes were issued. "Walter," the coach called softly. The basketball player turned and saw Dean Smith wava his right hand, as if taking a hat off, Walter Davis took his hat off without a word.

The injustice of the Olympic basketball triumph is that Dean Smith did oot get a gold medal. Olympic coaches become total wrecks.

They'll be slammed into each other in violent collisions. And crashed head-on into other cars at 80 miles per hour.

It's all part of a government crash-testing program that will help establish safety standards for cars of the future. Volvo was selected for this program because preliminary crash-testing showed it had an impressive potential for occupant protection...

We're not surprised. At Volvo, safety has always been an obsession. In fact, Volvo had many safety features as standard equipment years before government regulations required them on cars. Things like seat belts. Padded dashboards. And a safety steering column.

To this day, Volvo still has safety features many cars lack. Child-proof rear door locks. 3-point inertia reel seat belts in the rear as well as front. 4-wheel power disc brakes with dual triangular circuits that give you about 80% of your stopping power even if one circuit fails.

Volvo doesn't build cars with decorative roof panels and tiny opera windows. Because those things restrict visibility.

Instead, Volvo gives you 3,830 square inches of tinted glass. And roof pillars strong enough to support seven tons, yet narrow enough to allow you over 90% of your total horizontal field of view.

Mrs. Spinks Given Seat to See Sons

MONTREAL, July 31-Thanks to an anonymous donor, Mrs. Kay Spinks, who had been following her two boxing sons on a borrowed television set in her small apartment in a St. Louis public housing project, was at ringside to watch them tonight.

"God bless him, God bless him, God bless him," said Mrs. Spinks, after receiving word that the donor has called a St. Louis newspaper and offered to finance tha trip after reading about her. She left her other five children home and flew to Montreal yesterday to be reunited with Leon, a light heavyweight, and his younger brother Michael, a middleweight, in a downtown Montreal hotel.

"This is just like getting a diamond ring for me," she said. "That's the only way I can explain it. I'm just so happy, I pust can't believe it. I've never had a trip like

Lasse Viren after winning the 10,000-meter run

Amid the Strife Emerge the Heroes and Heroines

By JOSEPH DURSO

Special to The New York Times MONTREAL, July 31-They cost $1.5 billion to stage, they were opened by the Queen of Britain, they were saluted by Pope Paul VI and Leonid Brezhnev, they were attended by 9,000 athletes and 2.5 million spectators, they were abandoned by 30 countries and they were captivated by a 14-year-old Rumanian girl who earned three gold medals and seven perfect scores.

They formed the 21st Olympiad of the modern era, which began when the Games were revived in Athens in 1896 after a lapse of 16 centuries. They were awarded to Mootreal six years ago despite bids from Los Angeles and Moscow, and they have been a political issue in Canada since.

For the last two weeks, the "modest Games" promised by Montreal have packed the city with tourists and roy-alty, packed the $685 million Olympic Stadium with crowds of more than 70,000 who paid up to $40 a seat, and filled the television networks of the world with new faces and dazzling performances.

A Diverse Cast

The stars of the cast were the tall, short and small of the 93 nations who stayed to compete after most of black Africa withdrew in a racial protest over the apartheid policy of South Africa, a nation alrealy banned from the Olympics.

They were swimmers like John Naber of the United States, a 20-year-old senior at Southero California and Kornelia Ender of East Germany, an 18-year-old who lists her occupation in the Olympic directory as "high school girl." They were gymnasts like Nadia Comaneci, and elfin figure less than 5 feet tall who amezed the world with ber ballet on the apparatus. And they were giant basket-ball players like Juliyaka Semenova of the Soviet Union, a 7-foot Amazon with a gentle nature and size-14

They were boxers like Teofilo Stevensoo, the 24-year-old heavyweight from Cuba with one-punch knockout power, and runners like Alberto Juantorena of Cuba, who won the 400-meter and 800-meter races and said, "I dedicate this victory to our leader, Fidel Castro.

policeman from Finland, who woo the distance events and was joined in a "victory lap" by five young persons carry-ing huge Finnish flags.

There was Lasse Viren, the

And there was Bruce Jen-ner of Mount Kisco, N. Y., the 26-year-old superman of the show, who shattered the record for the decathion then ran his victory lap carrying a small American flag. A Prize for Seniority

There was Princess Anne, the daughter of the Queen, who fell from her borse while finishing far down the list. There was Guy Drut of France, the son of a shopkeeper, who did not fall while finishing first in the 110-meter high hurdles.

There were three athletes from Eastern Europe who defected and three, including an American, who were expelled because they had taken body-building steroids.
There was, perhaps most mysterious of all, the ranking Soviet fencer, Boris Onischenko, who was sent home after be had "bugged" his dueling epee electrically to record hits that did not hit.

The seniority prize went to J. Michael Plumb, a gentle-man farmer from Maryland, who rode horses in his fifth Olympics. But the persistence prize probably went to Willie fourth Olympic despite his recent rise in track and box-ing; the Russians lost face because of defections and some fallen idols, but kept winning gold medals. The Africans and their great runners were gone, along with the Taiwan Chinese, but the Eastern Europeans were present with growing strength and success

All performed under the tightest security in Olympic history, four years after Arab terrorists had killed 11 Israeli athletes at the last gathering of the nations in Munich. The Olympic Village, where 11,000 person lived behind armed checkpoints, was so tight that even the chief rabbi of the games could not get inside.

The Games were monitored by 8,000 newsmen and re-corded on computers that "answered" 5,000 inquiries and stored 20,000 items a day in a memory bank. But most of all, the Olympics were people—sometimes children — with goals and anese retained the team title, but the Soviet hero, Nikolai Andrianov, took individual honors: the gold medal for his all-round performance and victories in three of the six apparatus events. Peter Kormann, a 21-year-old student at Connecticut State, finished third in the floor exercise and gave America its first medal in 44 years. Swimming

Miss Ender won three gold medals and led the East German women to a remarkable peak: 11 victories in 13 events. She was so good that she earned two medals within an hour. It wasn't until the final event of the meet that Shirley Babashoff and the Americans broke the monopoly by taking the relay race. The Russlans, host to the 1980 Olympics, served some notice of future strength by winning the 200-meter breast-stroke.

But the four-year buildup to a return game with the Soviet Union, which won the dis-puted championship game in 1972, was frustrated when Yugoslavia eliminated the ssians in the semifinals.

In decibel count, the victory ceremony in Montreal's Forum may have set an Olympic record. As the final touched off a din that lasted while 12 gold medals were hung on the Americans, 12 silver on the Yugoslavs and 12 bronze on the Russians. Afterward, Quinn Buckner of the American team said: "It didn't matter to me that we didn't get to play the Rus-sians. I just wanted the big piece of gold."

In women's play, the undefeated Soviet team won the title by downing Japan, 98-75. Actually, the Russians have been undefeated for the last three years and they got the message across this time by beating the United States by 35 points. But the Americans finished third with three victories, two defeats and one silver medal.

Boxing

The American team lived together in the Olympic Village in a 12-man apartment, and prayed together before going into the ring. They were young, and six fought their way into the finnals in search of the biggest haul of gold rings. 1952 gold since 1952.

The Cubans were in force too, led by their heavyweight, Stevenson, who strung to-gether knockouts, but said: "I don't like professional boxing. All professional boxers are used as merchandize, and I don't want to be merchand-

The 6-foot-5-inch 24-yearold was among six Cubans who got to the finals. He knocked out John Tate of the United States in a minute and a half with an overhand right.

For the Americans, the memories of '76 were supplied mainly by Mike and Leon Spinks and Sugar Ray Leonard.

For people who always thought of the Olympics as a track meet, there was plenty of support in the final day's program as championships were decided in the men's high jump, the mara-thon, the women's shot-put, the 1,500-meter run and four relays. But even before the curtain was lowered, it was a year of "doubles"—Juantorena in the 400-meter and 800-meter races, Viren at 5,000 and 10,000 meters be-fore be tackled the 26-mile marathon through the streets of Montreal. Multiply a double by five and you get the decathlon: 10 events in two days. The superman was Jenner, retiring from world competition in a blaze. His chief worry before the event was his golden labrador dog, Bertha, who bad to contend with Olympian security before joining Jenner. His chief concern after clinching the title with an all-out 1,500-meter run was to find his wife in the box seats and belp ber onto the track, which he did.

Mrs. Jenner responded with a kiss and a comment: He's amazing, but to me be's just the man I live with. He's like an old shoe."

There was no old-shoe-comparison in the case of Irena Szewinska of Poland. who won the 400-meter race in her fourth Olympics. She started winning in 1964 at Tokyo and since then has taken three gold medals, two silver and a bronze; set two world records and won eight-European cities. No one is indispensable. The Browns replaced Big Jim with Leroy Kelly, who gained 1,141 yards that year, and they won division titles in three of the next four seasons. Simpson's comitment is to his wife to play on the West Coast, preferably in Los Angeles, where the family lives. But Carroll Rosenblocm, the Ram's owner, did not think be needed Simpson badly enough to give up Jack Youngblood, the defensive, and who is the leam's best olayer, Lawrence McCutcheon and a first draft choice to the Bills in exchange for O.J. So talk of trade to accommodate

Simpson ceased. Running back is the Rams' strongest position, with Mc-Cutcheon, Jim Bertelsen, John Cappelletti, Cullen Bryant. Bob Scribner and Rod Phillips on hand. Rosenbloom sporned Joe Namath similarly last year because he viewed the Jet quarterback as a potential cripple

Which one was beiter. Simpson or Brown? That is a hard choice, although there certainly has been no third comparable running back in the last 20 years. Brown had the better statistics. He averaged 1,368 yards gained for his nine seasons compared to a yearly average of 1,160 for Simpson, and Brown never missed a game.

The Syracuse alumnus from Manhasset, L.l., also played for winning teams every year and enjoyed consistent

Simpson had injuries io his early years, and losing coaches who did not know how to use him. But he also had the greatest single sea-son of all, 1973, when he set records that will bold up for awhile: most yards gained, season, 2,003; most yards gained, one game, 250; most games 100 yards or more, 11; most games 200 yards or

Vic Washington will take Simpson's place. He is a seasoned back who began io pro football in Canada the year before Simpson started and has had his ups and downs since then. The Bills acquired him from Houston last summer on waivers and he did a good job for them. He is from Plainfield, N.J.

Of the two N.F.L. expansion teams, the Tampa Bay Buccaneers were scheduled to play the Rams in Los Angeles last night for their first game while the Seattle Seahawks are set to start today against San Francisco in the Kingdome at Seattle. The Buccaneers planned to start Charlie Evans, the former Giant whom they signed as a free agent, at fullback with Johnny McKay, the son of coach John Mckay at wide receiver. The team is desperate for a middle linebacker, with Steve Reese, the former

Jet, filling the positioo. Players obtained from the other clubs in the veteran allocation draft fill most of the starting positions for both expansion clubs, although the Seahawks will open with a rookie running back, Sherman Smith, who was a quarterback for Miami of Ohio.

No expansion team in the history of the N.F.L. ever its first game. Fran Tarkenton did not even come close when be began his career and that of the Minnesota Vikings against the ooe-year-old Dallas Cowboys at Fargo, North Dakota, 15 years ago. Dallas won, 38-13.

Tom Owen, traded to the Patriots for Jim Plunkett. does not believe Plunkett will last out the season behind the San Francisco 49ers offerisive line. "He won't have four seconds or even three to throw behind that line," said Oweo. "I know. I played with those guys." Owen will be a second-stringer behind Steve Grogan against the Giants tonight at Foxboro,

Although the owners have a new negotiating team of Dan Rooney of the Steelers. Jim Finks of the Bears and Ralph Wilson of the Bills. there seems little chance of a contract being signed between the players association and management this season. A fundamental reasoo is that the owners insist upon some kind of a reserve clause so they can hold on to the players for a few seasons and Ed Garvey, executive director of the association, is adamantly against any reserve system. Should the playera agree to a reserve system now. Garvey believes that could prejudice their position in the N.F.L.'s legal appeal of the Mackey case which outlawed the Rozelle rule and allowed the freeagent players to sign with any team they wished. Garvey bas indicated there will be no strike this year as the association strives to build up its membership past 60 percent and replenish its

MONTICELLO, N.Y., July 31 (UPI)—John Shumate, a former Notre Dame basketball star who now plays for the Buffalo Braves, has been chosen the 1976 winner of the Maurice Stokes Memorial Award, it was announced today by Arnold (Red) Auerbach, the president of the Maurice Stokes Memorial Foundation. The annual Stokes memorial game will be played Ang. 10 at Kutsher's in Monticello, N.Y.

The award is presented annually to the National Basketball Association player who "most typifies the courage and determination of the late Maurice Stokes." Stokes, an N.B.A. star, suffered an illness that confined him to a wheelchair and eventually claimed his life.

Shumate was the first-round draft choice of the Phoenix Suns after he finished college in 1974, but missed all of the 1974-75 season after blood clots were discovered in his lung. Shumate underwent therapy and was able to resume his playing career, although doctors told him there

This is the third year of the rebuilding program instituted ment last year as a rookie by Andy Robustelli, the directackle, to left guard, also tor of operations, and Bill Arnsparger, the head coach, after the team posted a 2-11-1 wonlost-tied record in 1973.

After subsequent 2-12 and 5-9 seasons, the team likes to think of 1976 as the year of the Giant

Whether that step is forward or just across the river to the new home in New Jersey can not be decided in exhibition games. But Giant fans who tune into tonight's 8 o'clock game (Channel II and WNEW Radio) are entitled to dream. Then again, so are Giant haters.

The team that Andy and Bill built could be quite good, quite bad or, maybe worse, just plain mediocre. Robustelli and Arnsparger are not saying. They don't really know.
"We were oh and oh then and we're oh and oh now," said Arnsparger when asked if the team was better than the squad he had in training camp a year

Hoping for Winners

"There's some people I've just got to know more about," said Arnsparger.

That's why the N.F.L. bas six exhibition games and tonight's contest will decide the fate of many players. The Giants have 80 men on their roster, but on Tuesday night the squad must be cut to 60.

Amspar9er will start "on-first group" against the Patriots a team that was 3-11 last year and then traded its quarterback, Jim Plunkett. Winning isn't anything until the regular season opens Sept. 12, so the coach will be using much of tonight's game and the rest of the exhibition schedule to select his final 43-man squad.

That he has some tough choices is an inidication that the Giants at least have plenty of raw talent. Much of it is young, fast and strong. "We've got plenty of good athletes," said Robustelli "What we're hoping is that they're also good foot-ball players." One of the new athletes is a football player and he's the primary reason Giant fans can start dreaming of playoffs (although with the team's schedule, the toughest in the league, perhaps they shouldn't wake up until next vear).

Csonka in Giant Debut Larry Csonka, the million-dollar quarterback the Giants found in the five-and-dime World Football League's closeout sale, will make his Giant debut tonight and the former Miami Dolphin and Super Bowl star gives the team not just the power running back it needed.

Csonka also improves the team at quarterback, the other running back, offensive line and on defense.

Craig Morton, the 33-yearold quarterback who will not play tonight because of a slight calf injury ("why take a chance?" said Amsparger) figures to have a better season because of Csonka, Morton was booed much last season because of the Giants' dull offense, but it wasn't all his fault.

"Before it was second down and 8 and you gotta pass," said Robustelli, "With Larry, we'll be getting a lot benefits from Csonka' presence. Simpson, for example, is better at drive-block ing for an inside ground game than at pass protection. Csonka also makes the other running back more ef-fective. Steve Nelson, one of the four linebackers in the Patriots' three linemen-four linebackers defense, remembers that New England usualbers that New England usual-ly managed to contain Csonka when he was with the Dolphins. "But that opened a lot of boles for Mer-cury Morris," said Nelson. Mercury Morris won't be starting for the Giants tonight. Doug Kotar earned the other setback berth last season. Kotar is the type of doit-all player that coaches love, but hard work and diligence can go just so far in the N.F.L. and if Kotar can'r make it, maybe Gordon Bell has been breaking. Your normal strike delivery should get the job done, but for some inexplicable reason the shot seems so easy that many bowlers forget to "lift" on release and the ball may stop almost dead in its tracks once it gets the pin deck area.

Then, too, the path the ball is traveling is an abnormal one, in that your shot is taking a route much to the left of the normal strike path, which is on the right side of the lane. The ball conceivably could hit an "oily" spot once it reaches the area where pins normally stand and, combined with a lack of proper lift, stop its hooking action and miss on the right The frustrating part of the CHILMARK, Mass .- A giorious shower of spray blossomed around my popping plug and the broad tail of a striped bass appeared mo-mentarily, but the weight of the fish was absent for he had missed the hare altogether.

This was perhaps the 10th striper that had behaved in such a fashion that afternoon but there was nothing I could do about it. They were interested in the plug, but seemed content, for the most part, to merely make a pass at it.

Luciano Rebay and I were surf casting along a rocky section of the shore on the South Side of Martha's Vinevard Island

Earlier, we had hooked and lost e few fish, including at least one large bluefish, and had landed two striped bass in the 10-to-12-pound class, one on a popping plug, the other on a surface-swimming

Stiff Breezes

Then came the exasperating pases, more than a dozen in all, at the popping plugs by striped bass, some of which were truly large. I was sure that the fish would have taken surface swimming plugs solidly, but the problem was one of logistics: The bass were cruising about 80 or 85 yards off to cast the relatively light swimmers that far because of a stiff onshore breeze. The poppers, made by Stan Gibbs, were heavier and designed for distance casting.

Rebay, a professor of Italian literature et Columbia University, was having trouble reaching the fish even with popping plugs because his spinning rod was a foot shorter than mine and he was using 30-pound test line instead of the 20-pound test I had on my rig. (Heavier lines do not cast as far as lighter ones.)

When fishing a rocky shore for stripers an angler is in something of a dilemma. The hooked fish have a nasty habit of running behind boulders and the heavier the line the better the chance of dissuading them from this. Sometimes the line is simply chafed off against the rocks, and at others—this bappened to Rebay within an hour after. we arrived—the bass goes to a rock and tangles the book in sea weed anchored to it. When this occurs the angler often cannot pull the bass

Garner said, referring to

If the A's should overtake tha Royals and win their sixth straight division title, Vida Blue could be in a curious position of pitching against the Yankees, who bought him for $1.5 million, then lost him pending tha outcome of Finley's lawsuit.

Blue signed a three-year, $485,000 contract with the A's because Finley assured bim be wouldn't be sent elsewhere. Despite his feelings about Finley, Blue wanted to stay with the A's because ha liked the area and bis teammates. However, when Finley went back on his word, Bloe was so incensed that now be would love to go to the Yan-kees. In fact, his eyes just about lighted up when he talked of the prospect of

"I know one thing I'm going to do," he said recently. I'm going to get me some Yankee T-shirts. I'm going to give them to my sisters and my brother and I'm going to have some to wear this winter when I run on the beach, in California."

If the Yankees wind up getting Blue and they pick up a Reggie Jackson or two from the free-agent pool over the winter, Steinbrenoer's payroll could become the big-gest in baseball history.

Steinbrenner continues to be a curious figure in his tole as principal owner. As much money as the Yankees are making this year with their vastly increased attendance, Steinbrenner would spend a considerable percen-tage of the profits both for buying players and satisfying the ones he has, to insure a winner. He also is said to be benevolent toward young people who are in need of such things as a college edu-

But to his office employees, he comes across as something else. They are virtually terrified of him. A recent incident serves as an example. Steinbrenner had been yelling about bow too many people who shouldn't be there were getting into the official parking lot across the street from Yankee Stadium. The players didn't like it either that they didn't have specific parking spaces in the

So two weeks ago numbers were painted on the ground at some of the spaces and No. I was reserved for Stein-brenner. The first night the new plan was in effect a reporter unwittingly parked in Steinbrenner's spot.

When the dastardly act was discovered, several employees, including two high-level officials, soccessively sought out the reporter and asked him-nearly pleaded with him-to move the car. They were obviously afraid of what Steinbrenner's reaction might be if he arrived to the stadium and found his

Cubs Defeat Cards With 4 in 8th, 6-2

CHICAGO, July 31 (AP)-Bill Madlock's tiebreaking double, his third hit of the game, and Wayne Tyrone's two-run pinch-single sparked a four-run uprising in the eighth inning today that gave the Chicago Cubs a 6-2 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals. Joe Wallis and José Cardenal singled off the loser, Lynn' McGlothlen, before Madlock doubled to crack a 2-2 tie. After an intentional walk loaded the bases, Tyrone singled off Al Hrabosky. George Mitterwald delivered the final run with a sacrifice fly. Steven Renko went the distance for the Cubs, scattering nine hits. It was his first complete game of the year.

Dancer Believer In 'Horse Sense'

ley Dancer has never forcotten who worked hardest for his money. Many sec-tions of his house on the clean 146-acre farm in New Egypt, N.J., are named for the horses that helped pay for It. Dancer says Candor paid for the first five rooms, Volo Chief for the swimming pool and two rooms, and Canny Scott "won" two new bedrooms and the living room that overlooks the track. And Dancer will also admit that such stars as Su Mac Lad, Nevele Pride, Albatross, Super Bowl and Cardigan

Bay helped put him in the trotting Hall of Fame. In fact, it is said, the 49 year-old Dancer is in the sport not for personal fame or gain, but for the desire to seek, buy, train and drive "super" horses. At present he has a trotter named Nevele Thunder and a pacer named Keystone Ore who may be the best 3-year-olds in the nation.

Dancer maintains that success in harness racing takes commoo horse sense.

It was the first leg of harness racing's Triple Crown for 3-year-olds, to be followed by the Ham-bletonian and the Kentucky Futurity.

"You try not to worry about the race," said Dancer, "but it wouldn't be tellin9 the truth if I said it was just another race. Sure, the horse has more to do with it than I do, hut the pressure of hig races is always greater.
"You look at the tote board and your horse is 1-5 or 1-9 and you realize the public pressure. That pressure mounts when you get into the sulky. Doo't let anybody tell you differently." Mrs. Dancer, part-owner of some of the hundred horses stabled on the farm, said the size of the purse made little difference to her husband. "I think he is just as serious

YONKERS. July 31-Stan- when he is racing for $4,000 or $200,000" she said. Dancer no longer races for small purses, unless on the Grand Circuit. A neck operation, in 1973, followed by a heart attack, has slowed him down. He has given up the five or six nightly drives at Yonkers and Roosevelt Raceways, Instead of 600 to 700 drives a year, he has cut his schedule io half. Last year he had 325, won 95 and mode $825,719. "I miss the nightly drives and seeing the guys every night," said Dancer. "But last year and this year have been outstanding and fun years for us, and Nevele Thunder and Keystone Ore are tha major racers.

For a school dropout

Dancer has done well with common horse sense. He has won more than 3,000 races and his horses have won over $18 million.

Japanese Equestrians Relive Glory Days of 1932 Olympics

Halfway around the world in Tokyo, they still dream of the day in Los Angeles dur-ing the 1932 Olympic Games when Baron Takeichi Nishi rode Uranus to the gold medal in jump-ing. That was Japan's one moment in the sun News in the equestrian jumping events the Olympics. Uranus, who had been purchased in Italy in 1930, is buried at the Japanese Equestrian Center outside Tokyo. Now there is another Japaese team in the Olympic jumping competition in Montreal. It is coached by Koichi Kawaguchi, a 63-yearold former rider who competed in the 1956 Olympics. He's not optimistic. "We picked our team at the end of last year," Kawagushi, who speaks passable English, said. These riders we have on the team are the hest in Japan. We arrived in the United States almost four months ago and have been training since. 'We watch them carefully and try to improve them. But it's difficult because we are not exposed to the other international riders much. "Bert de Nemethy, coach of the United States Equestrian Team, was in Japan late. last year and gave us some hints and Gabor Foltony (a former Hungarian interna tional star) worked with us during most of our stay in the United States. But it has been difficult."

Masayasu Sugitani, Japan's top rider, agreed.

"When we got to the Devon [Pa.] show at the end of April, I was amazed." he said. "The heights of the fences made me wonder how we were going to make a good impression in the Olym-

Sugitani's teammates are Tsunekazu Takeda, Ryuichi Obata and Koichi Higashira. At Devon, one of the three hig shows in which they competed, they did not win a class.
"We were happy with our "Ko-performance at Devon," Kowaguchi aid. "But there's no doubt about it, shows in the United States are tough." Kawaguchi said he has been doing considerabl riding along with the members of

"I'm an amateur," he said.
"and I'm in the forestry business. But I'm also a member of the board of directors of eration. I actually was ep-pointed cooch by the Federation."

Kawaguchi said most of the horses Japan plans to use in the team competition, which will close out the Games today, have come from the United States. "We used to huy e lot of :

horses in Europe," he said. "But in the loog run, it's cheaper to huy them in the United States. We've also gotten some of them from West Germany and New Zealand.

"Truthfully, I can also think of several horses we've bought in Europe that have hroken down. "We've also competed in the Detroit and Lake Placid still don't dream of 1932. shows here. While we were about it, we looked over some horses. Most of the mounts we'll use in the Games were bought on the west coast."

"You know," said de Nemethy, "when I first saw the Jananese riders competing in Europe last year, I thought the horses they were using were too big. 1 told them so when I visited Japan and I guess that's why they came to the United States to buy some.

Kawaguchi said he is aware that his riders still have a lot to learn. 'We don't have a dressage team for the Olympics," he hut there's no substitute for training together."

And They're Off To Saratoga Again

When the calendar turns to August, it can mean only one thing: It is now post-time at Saratoga. The 113year-old race track upstate, where some bettors don't even mind losing, opens for business tomorrow. The track is ready; so are some of the horses.

Tornado Has Cause to Roar

The Dallas Tornado finished fourth in its division last year and averaged 4,638 fans in 11 home games. This season, under a new general manager and a new coach, the Tornado has ied its division News almost all season and averaged 13,853 fans in 11 home games. The two men who have placed the Tornado on the right path in the North American Soccer League this seanon are Dick Berg, the new general manager, and Al Miller, the new coach. Berg went to Dallas after a successful year at San Jose, and Miller left Philadelphia to ioin Lamar Hunt's organiza-

"We've been working hard in Dallas," Berg said last Wednesday at Yankea Stadium before his team lost to the Cosmos, 4-0. "We have had all kinds of promotions, but we've got the best results by asking people to Burn, the marterback for the Stanford team that beat Notre Dame on national television in 1963, has been involved in sports management for several years. After he had become promotions director for the San Francisco 49ers of the National Football League in 1969, their season-ticket sales climbed from 26,000 to 57,000.

'Miller Magic'

"I've had offers to go back to basketball," said Berg, who has also served as assistant general manager of the Seattle SuperSonics of the National Basketball Association. "But I am getting so much out of soccer I don't want to do anything else. "We at the Tornado derive so much satisfaction by going so much satisfaction by going out and asking people to support us. We've been selling the Tornado like a candidate who is up for election. We are asking people to give us a chance by coming out to see us. And, when they do, that's where Al [Miller] steps in. He makes sure we give the people a good show."

Miller, the first American to coach in the N.A.S.L. and the first coach to take an expansion team to a chamexpansion team to a cham-pionship in its first year (he did so with the Atoms in 1973), has what they call in Dallas "Miller Magic." A snrewn student of the game, Miller is a good coach, re-cruiter and scout and was one of the most successful coaches in the college ranks coaches in the college ranks. Ha took Wartwick, 2 little-known small school in One-onta, N.Y., and gave it na-tional recognition.

Miller came up with one of the best American players this season. He is Steve Pecher, a 20-year-old from St. Louis, who despite hav-ing separated his shoulder against Portland in the 18th game of the season, has a good chance of becoming rookie of the year. Not many coaches knew Pecher, be-cause he had played only a year for Florissant Valley Community College in St. Louis and then dropped out to help his father's noveity advertising company.

Miller believes that Eacher could be the rookle of the year. "It's going to be be-tween Steve and perhaps Jan Pollihan," Miller said.

"I was counting on getting a defender from England, but Steve just got better and better in every game," the coach added. "Then I called up England and told them I didn't need a player, I had one in my own backyard."

Miller has four other young Americans in Dallas in Kyle Rote Jr., Nell Cohen, John Stremlau and Fred Garcia. who was an all-American at North Dallas High School. "Soccer has come far," Hunt said, walking toward the monuments at Yankee Stadium. "We are proud that

What They Are Saying

Dwight Stones, United States Olympic high jumper, earlier in the week said: "In Las Vegas odds, i figure I would be about 10-9 to win. You could go broke betting against me."

Vasily Alexeyev, 344-pound Soviet weight lifter who won the Olympic superheavyweight class: "I think my wife will pay more attention to me now."

Tom Johnson, assistant United States-coach, comments on the controversial boxing decisions made by Olympic judges; "It's inexperience. They're sincere. It's just that they don't know. When you don't know, you don't know."

Harry Winkler, United States Olympic team handball player, describes the obscurity of the sport in this country: "You're more likely to run-into somebody with leprosy in Ohio than a team handball

Tug McGraw of the Phils, after a one-hit relief stint against his former teammates, the Mets: "They scrounge for a run here and a run there. So, a lot of pitchers do well against the Mets. If you don't, you're not a good pitcher."

Mike Schmidt of the Phils, using Johnny Oates's bat to break out of a mild slump: "It's an ounce lighter and an ounce shorter than mine."

ATTENTION TEACHERS! ATTENTION LIBRARIANS!

Interesting positions in both the teaching and library fields are advertised in The New York Times Week In Review Section

Look them over. You may be qualified for a number of jobs offered. What's more, you might find an interesting opportunity or two to investigate in another part of the country. More positions also are advertised in The New York Times on Wednesdays. Look for the "About Education" feature and check out the jobs . . . next Wednesday. Incidentally, if you have a teaching or library job to fill, the Sunday Week In Review and the Wednesday "About Education" feature are both excellent coast-to-coast showcases for you. They reach 4,505,000 readers on Sundays and 2,664,000 on weekdays. Reserve your space! And ask about the Sunday/Wednesday combination rate.

INVEST IN SILVERTON NOW: Silverton is the best buy in boating and that makes it the best investment. (Have you priced a used Silverton, lately? Can you find one?) But all boat prices will rise this fall and the '77 Silvertons are no exception. The choice is yours: Buy a '76 now, enjoy the summer on a great boat and watch the value rise when the '77s come out. Or wait 'til next year to discover Silverton and pay a lot more. Simple, isn't it? We'll be seeing you! All models are in stock for immediate delivery. SILVERTON 31' ALL-GLASS Flybridge Sedan

sored by the London Ob-server and the Royal Western Yacht Club, should not be held again. The yachting editor, Bill Robinson, calls it a "shambles." Mike Kane, the top American contender until his trimaran was stove in, says it's "too dangerous." After missing an iceberg by yards, Clare Frances says, "never egain" will she sail

If the race is continued, some think it should become a two-handed race or et least require sailors to check in by radio periodically with monitoriog ships, for safety's sake. Some say another course, rather than the upwind battle, would belp. And others contend the size of the fleet and the boats should be limited.

Kane says he will be back in 1980, even if it remains a solo contest. "I guess you bave to be determined or crazy," he says. That's as close as anyone has come to defining the parameters.

Judy Rankin, Past Milestone, Is Questioned About Another

By LENA WILLIAMS

And now for a look at the first woman golfter to earn $100,000 in a seasoo. Only 24 hours after baving played in the United States women's open in Pennsylvania last month, Judy Rankin arrived at the Ladies' Profes-In sionel Golf Asso-Sports

cietion officea in New York to meet the presa. She had earned enough at the open to put ber over the $100,000 mark, and the first question was:

'Hey, Judy, how does it feel to be the first woman golfer to earn $100,000?" "Good," said Mrs. Rankin, her succinct response bring-ing laughter from the group. "Did you think you could do it io only half a seasoo?"

'I felt the $100,000 year was coming, but not in half a year," she said. Before she could answer one question, another came

"Do you think you can reach $200,000 this year?" "What does your accomplishment do for women's pro "How has it changed your life?"

After 14 years on the L.P.G.A. tour, Mra. Rankin has become accustomed to news conferences, many questions and accasional requests for autographs. Sioce her Tide television commercials, she is more readily recognized on the street.

Praise for Commissioner Showing few signs of weariness in the midst of an exhausting schedule that would carry ber to a banquet later that evening in New York and then on to Columbus, Ohio, for aoother tournament, Mrs. Rankio was ber usual calm and courteous self as she tried to answer questions, pose for photo-graphs and enalyze her echievement.

"It shows that womeo's golf has come a long way,' she said. "Thanks to our commissioner, Ray Volpe, women are now able to play for large-prize purses." Volpe is the young, eager end hard-working commissioner of only a year with the L.P.G.A.

"Many people project she can earn $200,000 this season," he said. "I think she cao do it. How about you, Judy?"

"In order to reach the $200,000 mark, I would have to win as many tournaments the last half of the season as I did the first half," Mrs. Rankin said. "And I would have to stay out of a rest Pleying well is more importent to Mrs. Rankin than are the usual trappinga of the money she has won. OGimerack Blooms Amid the Smokies

Standard lad by JEFF BRADLEY
liking camping or rambling through the woods in humbering motor homes ast year made the Great Smoky Mountains National Park the most isited pack in the nation. At one ime, until the late 1950's, the vistor could count on a minimum of concernation outside the park. The rele who lived in the valleys mindtheir own business, and the few hotels were simple and small Back then the typical tourist attraction was a souvenir stand with a caged (and usually smelly) bear out back.

Now those days are gone forever. There are a few "See the Bear" places left, but they are poor competition when a porpoise show, year-round skiing and an army of wax figures beckon. Nowadays visitors to the Great Smoky Mountains are confronted with example after example of "gen-yoowyne" mountain craftiness.

The park covers 789 square miles and straddles the North Carolina-Tennessee line. Most people approach it from Knoxville, Tenn., the selfstyled "Gateway to the Smokies." Traffic from three interstate highways converges there, resulting in what C.B.-ers term "Malfunction Junction." Locals say the best time to get through town is between midnight

The road from Knoxville is U.S. 441, which passes through some of the loveliest countryside ever to be covered by billboards. The large signs start cropping up even before the highway. leaves the city limits of knoxville, some 41 miles from the park: "See Hank Williams Jr.'s $22,000 Car" and "Explore the Fourth Dimension-World of the Unexplained Mu-

One of the first inkings of the mountain scenery to come occurs when the motorist tops a hill looking: over the town of Sevierville. The sole redeeming feature of the place is a courthouse lower that rises from the nondescript pulltings against a lofty mountain backdrop. Many motorists ere so enthrolled with the view that they fall to notice a sharp decrease in the speed limit and are quickly treated to a view of the made of the courthouse. Several victims have specsomething to do with its strict attitude toward speeders.

MOTHE !

One barely gets out of the magisterial clitiches of Sevierville and back to a depent speed when the town of Pigeon Forge infolds. The wise motorist has by now caught onto the sudden-drop in the speed game, so few are

The first attraction to clamor for attention is Porpoise Island, an array of dancing dolphins and roller-skating parrots. Why anyone would come to the mountains to see a sea show escapes reason, but the parking lot stays full from May to October. (Admission to Porpoise Island is: adults, $4; children, $2.50; under 4, free.)

On down the line is Magic World, promising a combination of flying saucer, earth auger, pirate ship and miniature golf. How they manage to weave this into a narrative is almost worth the price of admission, which is $3.75; children, $2.50, and tots, free.

If one turns left in the middle of Pigeoo Forge, the national beadquarters of the right-wing American Party appears, atanding steadfastly above a souvenir gallery and candle-making shop. The visitor to the party's office is invited to purchase literature, bumper stickers, books and generally stand up for America.

A walk ecross the bridge leads to The Old Mill, which has been in operetion since 1830 and still grinds corn to produce meal. Grist gourmets declare that water-ground corn meal makes the best corn bread, and those who wish to try it can purchase a sack of meal for a small fee. (Admission to the mill is $1.25 and 75 cents for children over 8.)

Beside the mill is the Pigeon Forge Pottery, and if visitors can arrive there between bus tours, they can watch-for free-potters at work making tableware and sculpture. The artisans both mold their wares and throw them on wheels. If one catches your fancy, the shop in the front of the building will gladly sell it to you.

Rejoining U.S. 441 and continuing on to the park, the visitor passes The Water Boggan, a concrete trough carved into the side of a hill and filled with running water. The participant, or bogganeer, climbs to the top, jumps on a plastic mat and is washed to the bottom, negotiating curves all the way. There are two or three inches of water in the trough, and at the bottom the water is about three feet deep, so riders get a real soaking. On a hot day hundreds of people line up for the experience, paying $1.50 to splash around the curves for 30 minutes.

For those whose wallets survive the rigors of Pigeon Forge, it's on to Gatlinburg. Until the national park came along. Gatlinburg was a small village populated by families such the Ogles, the Reagans and the Maples. Now the town can sleep 25,000 tourists without batting an eye, several of whom can stay at Ogle's Creek Bend Motel and Cabins, Reagan's Motel or Maples' Town House.

While obviously enjoying the surge in tourists, Gatlinburg is suffering from a lack of long-range planning. Most of those in political office bave been long-time residents of the area, and few anticipated the problems associated with a tourist boom. The town has been forced to declare a moratorium on hotel construction due to a severely overtaxed sewer system. Occa-

For a resort of its size, Gatlinburg has a surprising lack of night life. Very few of the motels or restaurants offer name entertainment. The season's headliner appears to be Archie Campbell, star of TV's "Hee Haw." This lack of nighttime activity is probably rein restaurants and bars. Nowhere in town can the tourist buy anything stronger than beer by the drink. Package stores only arrived in 1965. Neither of these deficiencies, however, seems to bave burt the popularity of this mountain vacation spot. (There are times when visitors heve to return to Pigeon Forge or even Sevierville to find a room.) Gatlinburg is a very clean town, with oo signs of poverty or grime of any sort. Drugs have made few inroads, and the streets are safe at night—the town thrives oo a family etmosphere. There were over 250 cooventions in Gatlinburg last year; in edditioo, the area serves as a honeymoon center for the surrounding states, end

a decorated car in a motel parking lot is common.

Many vacatiooers use the town as a base camp for setting out oo excursions to the mountains. Others prefer to explore the town, discovering a wide array of shops, ranging from attractive places with tempting imported goods to those which specialize in Smoky Mountain asbtrays and stuffed Gatlinburg is big on wax: There are three wax museums and numerous candle shops. Christus Gardens, one of the museums, is filled with religious waxworks, paintings and statues, all billed as "inspirational." (For this you pay $2; children, $1.) A few years ago Christus Gardens so inspired one bright soul that be opened "A Trip Through Hell," and blanketed the countryside with signs that stated "Go To Hell." Apparently not too many people were interested in the preview, and after a season or two Heli van-

The American Historical Wax Museum is just that, while the World of the Unexplained Museum specializes in the occult. One display changes a man's face into that of e werewolfright before your eyes. Visitors, after having the Uoexplained explained, exit through a magic shop where clerks attempt to change money into sales slips-right before your eyes. (The wax museum charges $2 and $1 for children; a look at the inexplicable costs $2.50 and $1.25 for youngsters.)

If a replica of the Eiffel Tower made from toothpicks or a copy of the Circus Maximus done in sugar cubes Is your forte, Ripley's Believe It Or Not Museum is the place to go ($2.50; $1 for childreo). Included is a model of Abe Lincoln's cabin done in 175 pounds of pennies and a ship constructed of chicken bones. (For those who are thereby inspired, there's a Colonel Sanders down the street.) Sooner or later most visitors notice the Gatlinburg Aerial Tramway. For $2.50 (children, $1) visitors are taken aboard what is billed as "the world's largest cable car" and whisked up to Mount Harrison, bome of Old Heidelberg Castle, which is oeither e castle, nor old, nor even faintly Germanic. In hopeful anticipation of an ice age the Gatlinburg Ski Resort was opened in the early 1960's. The snow failed to fall often enough, so the owners have just installed "the world's largest artificial ski surface." Now one can enjoy fake skiing at a fake castle for real money. The summer rate is $6 for two hours of skilog, including rental egripment and lift ticket. Lessons cost $8 for two bours.

Some of the finer thiogs found around Gatlinburg lie to the east of the town, along the oorth side of the park. One of these is Hunter Hills Theater, five miles out oo State Route 73, where the cast, made up of University of Tennessee students, proves nightly that outdoor theater is aliveand well. The offerings this summer include "Guys and Dolls," "The Sound of Music" and 'Dark of the Moon." Assuming there is no Rain of the Sky. curtain time is 8:30 Tuesday through Sunday. The actors often have to compete with a tree frog chorus, but the competition is well worth seeing. The productions are staged so that the visi-

Prehistory Lives In Fields of Eire

The high can be infuriatingly casual about their national treasures. I bad seen in a hook a photograph of a par-ticularly for notion—a graceful stone structure herit in prehistoric times as a tomb and road that it was in Kil-cloosey, Chanty Donegal, but no such place appeared on the map. The owner of the diffic hotel in Ballyshannon when I was staying with my husband and stepson knew the whereabouts of the dolmen, however. In fact, he said, he used to graze his cattle in the pastive where the dolmen stands, and the Stone Age monument came in handy monuments because they are so rich in them. In addition to dolmens the countryside is littered with tumuli (earth mounds containing tombs), cairns (stone mounds, also tombs), the ruins of ancient forts and dwellings and circles of boulders that were the rinial sites of the Celts. While Ireland has no single field antiquity as large or elaborate as England's Stonehenge, it has more field monuments and a greater variety than any other country

My enthusiasm for these stones marked me as a tourist as plainly as my lack of a brogue. They have held me in thrall for many years, during many visits to Ireland. They are curiously beautiful, particularly the dolmens, which resemble dramatic modern sculpture. And unlike castles, cathedrals and other such attractions, little is known about who erected the monuments and why, so I have been as free almost as the most scholarly archeologist to fantasize about their

It wasn't an interest in archeology. but a love of the Irish countryside that started my husband and me searching for field antiquities. Tracking them down gave us an excuse to tramp over fields and down country roads. Not that an excuse was called for, there are almost no 'no tresspassing' signs in Ireland. The ancients preferred to build their forts and tombs on highground, so visiting these sites often gave us the exercise of an uphill hike and rewarded us with views of the surrounding landscape, What's more,

More than any country of Europe, Ireland is rich in Stone Age monuments such as dolmens (above). The author's search provided an excuse to tramp fields and talk to strangers.

since many field antiquities are unmarked, our quest also gave us a reason to talk to strangers; more often than not we had to stop in a pub or epproach a passerby for directions. And the krish are usually eager to give directions (even when they aren't sure of the way) and tell what they know about a landmark. In short, whatever the monument had to recommend it was enhanced by the thrill of the bunt. And bunt it ofteo was. Though numerous, Irish field antiquities can be tricky to find, Some are marked with green-and-white signs that indicate official poiots of interest, but many are not. Guidebooks tend to give inadequete directions, if eny, to the field antiquities they describe. Of some belp are the paperback "Guide to the National Monuments of Ireland" by Peter Harbison and the hard-bound "Shell Guide to Ireland"-this the more comprehensive of the two, but too beavy to lug around the fields. Also useful. oot as e field guide but as a quick course in archeology for the layman, is "Antiquities of the Irish Countryside" by Sean O'Riordain.

Government-issued Ordnance Survey maps are spottily available at booksellers and news agents. Drawn on a scale of one-half inch to a mile, they note the locations of some antiquities, but since each map covers only a small piece of Ireland and sells for about $1, we bought them only in districts where we were bunting in earnest. Even when we were armed with explicit directions and detailed maps, the antiquities could elude us. If overgrown with briars or hawthorn, a fort or tomb is as good as invisible frome only a few yards away. Sometimes, after several hours of driving around, walking around, scrambling over rock walls, sidestepping cow pies and poking through thickets, we'd give up. Other times, ao arduous starch would

A. H. & M. A. said the organization had asked a branch of the Internal Revenue Service to audit the records of colleges and universities listed in the guide to determine whether the income derived from their innkeeping activities is taxable. "The rental of college and university dormitory rooms to tourists or other translents—those not enrolled in courses at these institutions is an unfair use of tax dollars competing with private industry," said Paul D. Galeese, the association's president. "Colleges and universities can charge lower rates for dormitory rooms than hotels and motels because they do not pay local property taxes."

With the end of summer and the start of a new school year, the controversy over dormitory room rentals tends to solve itself annually, only to rise again when school recesses the following June. At the local level, compromise often provides a temporary solution, as it has in the case of the Vermont institutions, Lyndon and Johnson Colleges, near Burlington.

Their recent venture into innkeeping not only brought a quick response from hoteliers and restaurateurs in the area but also elicited a reprimand from Vermont Gov. Thomas P. Salmon, who said, "It's not the intent of this administration to be in competition with private enterprise in activities such as the hospitality industry."

To appease the protesting businessmen, the two colleges agreed to make dormitory rooms available only to people from out of state; to rent no rooms for fewer than five days (no one-night stands) and to insist that reservations be made 15 days in ad-

THIRD CENTURY AMERICA

"Third Century America," the only exposition officially sponsored by the United States Government during the Bicentennial, has attracted more than 300,000 visitors to Florida's Kennedy Space Center this summer, and it is scheduled to continue through Labor

The exposition, which is designed to provide a glimpse of America's lifestyle in the century chead, features exhibits by 16 Federal agencies, 10 major industrial firms and numerous colleges and universities. The exhibits are arrayed inside 15 huge geodesic domes and in the space center's Vehicle As-flight to the moon, has been decorated with the largest United States flag ever painted (209 x 110 feet), which covers the south wall overlooking the theme park area.

"Third Century America" is subtitled the "Bicentennial Exposition on Science and Technology" and aims at showing the role science and technology are playing in improving the quality of life in America. Among the exhibits are a home heated by solar energy, a saw that cuts wood by laser beam, leaving no sawdust, an electric automobile, simulated rocket launchings and hundreds of others.

Visitors are briefed on the history of the Space Shuttle, which will be launched from the Space Center in 1979, sent into orbit and then piloted back to land at the center.

Among the special events scheduled from now through the end of the exposition in September are aerial demonstrations by Air Force Thunderbirds (Sept. 1-2), the Navy's Blue Angels acrobatic jet teams (Aug. 25), and the Army's Golden Knights parachute jump team (Aug. 3-4) as well as concerts by

The Kennedy Space Center can be reached via the National Aeronautics and Space Administration Causeway from U.S. 1, two miles south of Titusville, and Florida Route 3 on Merritt Island. Visitors can drive directly to the exposition area south of the V.A.B. Admission is $3 for adults and $2 for youths 12 to 18 and $1 for children 3 to 11. The gates are open from 10 A.M. to 7 P.M., with the Visitors Information Center opening daily at 8

NUDITY ON CAPE COD

A mass demonstration to protest the ban on nudity in the Cape Cod National Seashore in Massachusetts is scheduled to take place at Truro next Sunday, and the sponsors, an organization called Free the Free Beach, say the turnout could exceed the 4,000 who appeared for a similar "beach party" last summer. The organization is demanding that the National Park Service establish managed, "clothes optional beaches" within the National Seashore and that it desist from its present policy of "harassing" nude bathers in isolated areas of the seashore. Letters: Mixing H₂O And Travel Checks

I wonder if the general public is aware that American Express traveler's checks and water do not mix. On a recent trip to Florida we found this out the hard way. In the course of washing my husband's trousers, I missed one pocket and later found that the traveler's checks had been washed also. We spread them out on the line to dry and they (the checks) looked fine though a bit wrinkled.

We were due to leave Florida in a few hours and my husband wanted to cash a traveler's check for our trip home. The cashier looked at it and said, "I can't cash this. It is void." Sure enough, in big letters across the check was the word, VOID. We had not noticed it. All the remaining checks were similarly affected.

A call to the American Express office was made and we were told that they were very busy but they might be able to help us if we could get to the downtown Fort Lauderdale branch. Our time was short, and a friend let us have some money to return home.

My husband was able to exchange the checks when we got back to Boston, but it would seem that some kind of cautionary note should be written in the directions for use of the checks, warning the holder that he should be careful not to let them get

[American Express says the "voidine" device that is built into the upper signature block of its traveler's checks is part of its customer protection and security system, designed to prevent criminals from eradicating the owner's signature and replacing it with their own. The few traveler's checks that are inadvertently "voided," among them reader Wass's, are replaced by the company without charge, a spokesman said. The company feels that it would weaken the system to advertise this "voiding" device-though, of course, once a criminal tries an eradicator on one check, he'll know better than to try it on another.]

Other firms tssuing traveler's checks have similar devices for preventing attempts to alter or erase signatures but declined to go into specifics for security reasons.—Ed.]

BUDGET BUS

. To the Editor:

I took the London-to-New Delha route this past October on the Intercontinental Transit bus discussed in Rod Townley's article, "A Budget Bus Trip Across Europe" (Travel Section. July 18), and in response to Mr. Townley's question of whether I would do it again, I would say, "Yes, indeed."

It was a fantastic 36 days, despite one week of solid rain, a very leaky bus, broken windshield wipers, no heat, and no toilet on board (one gets used to heading for the nearest bush. dry gully or barren hillside and to the courtesy of men and women heading in separate directions).

What is the minor inconvenience of a night in an Iranian flophouse (found for us by the local police when we had nowhere to stay) or the bus breaking down every other mountain in Afghanistan, compared to the sights and sounds of Asia-camel caravans, nomad tents, bazaars and more?

Our particular trip had the added bonus of having on board a delightful and tough 70-year-old woman (the average age was 23; I was the only American and the second oldest person at 32). Where we had our pocket knives hanging from a belt, she had her reading glasses in a crocheted pouch, She was a source of inspiration, heading to the bushes with the rest of us, although a bit slower, never complaining (and so how could we?).

East Orange, N.J.

To the Editor:

Regarding your article about traveling in Europe by bus, I recently left a Danish coach because of clouds of tobacco smoke. Shortly after leaving Copenhagen bound for Yugoslavia, I discovered there are no rules against pipes, cigars or cigarettes.

Three cheers for our Trailways and Greyhound buses, where the only blue haze you see is outside the hus. JOHN MULHALL

LONG BRANCH - The et has made luxurious watering spots easily accessible to those who can afford them, but many affluent Jerseyans and New Yorkers have found what they consider the good life right in their own backyard.

Its name is a misnomer, for Harbor Island Spa is not situated on an island; instead it occupies a choice piece of property, hard by the rouring Atlantic in the fastgrowing West End section of Long Branch.

have been coming back for generations, too in the late 19th century by sea; the coastal steamship docked directly at a nearby landing. One of the attractions that brings them back is 1,000 feet of private shoreline on Eggemoggin Reach, where the "refreshing" waters range from 50 to 70 degrees in summer, depending on tides and currents. The less hardy bathe on the sandy shore of a freshwater lake five minutes' walk away, where the water temperature rises well up to the 70's. There's also golf at the Blue Hill Country Club 12

Oakland's main house, which looks much the same as it did in 1889, offers a few spartan rooms on the second and third floors, some with only a bath et the end of each hall, but comfortable rooms with baths are available in a spacious waterfront guest house and in 10 family-size cottages with views of the water. Capacity is 70 guests.

Meals, served in the main house, run to bountiful portions, including fresh Down East seafood, home-baked pies and the like. On a Sunday night we sampled the weekly buffet: lobster Newburg with a high lobster content; chicken salad; two aspics (one lime flavor, with bananas, raisins and nuts, the other strawberry flavor with blueberries); and, for dessert, chocolate meringue with ice cream and fudge sauce, or for the faintstomached, merely assorted ice creams

Wa later moved to David's Folly in West Brooksville, about midway on the peninsula. This is a saltwater farmhouse built foursquare and solid in 1819 by David Wasson, a shiphuilder who retired to become a farmer. ("Folly!" scoffed Mr. Wasson's neighbors at the idea of farming so near the sea.) The house still stands in the midst of 300 acres of pinewoods and fertile pastureland that roll down to a cove of Penobscot Bay.

A lively ledy from around Boston, Minerva Cutler, transformed the farmhouse into an inn in 1946. Sha did a handsome job of restoring, wide floor boards and all, furnishing the old farmhouse with Americana and converting the adjoining barn to guest rooms and a lounge. The atmosphere is informal; guests eat family-style at large tables, then gather after dinner in tha farmhouse living room or barn to play cards, chat, dip into the extensive library or leaf through the Harvard Magazine, the Atlantic and other such proper Bostonian fare. During the dey, guests may swim or go boating in the David's Folly cove, half e mile down through the hay fields, or play golf or tennis et the Castine Golf Club.

Miss Cutler, a dedicated organic gardener, scorns chemical fertilizers; she makes her own compost heaps and even raises her own earthworms. Organically grown fruits and vegetables come fresh-picked to the table. A brace of college-girl cooks turn out creditable meals; for example, a splendid quiche Lorraine for lunch. Blueberry muffins and blueberry cake abound-underfirst opened its doors July standable considering that the county grows the second-largest blueberry crop in Maine. One night a week is lobster night. At bedtime, there's a snack for everyone-milk, cookies and such-set out in the hig, old-fashioned kitchen. The capacity is 24 guests.

David's Folly, centrally located, serves as e convenient base for exploring the rest of the East Penobscot Bay region. Our first excursion took us to Castine, the chief repository of local history, a town of about 1,200 on tha bay. After the French established tha first trading post here, called Fort Pentagoet, the Pilgrims swooped no from the Massachusetts Bay Colony and took over. Then for 150 years the French, British and Dutch (for a brief period) hattled over the territory. Hence, four flags have flown over Castine, including our own. Baron de St. Castin, a French nobleman who gave the town his name, beld tenure for some 34 years the 17th century, perhaps because he showed the good judgment to marry the daughter of an Indian chief and set up housekeeping. "Hardy, tenacious, adroit," a local historian called him.

The town today delights the eye with its grand 18th- and 19th-century mansions, almost all painted white, set back from tree-sheded streets. Intricately detailed doorways and fanlights ornament many of the early Federalist bouses. At almost every corner, wooden markers with antique letteringabout 50 in all-celebrate the town's historic sites, giving a play to the French, tha British, the Americans and even the transient Dutch. "Here Capt, Jurriaen Aernots of the Dutch frigate 'Flying Horse,' having captured Fort Pentagoet August 1674, took formal possession of Acadia, in the nama of his sovereign William, Prince of Orange, naming the conquered territory 'Nova Hollandia."

On Perkins Street, where the lawns of elegant houses march down to the harbor oo Penobscot Bay, stands the restored John Perkins House and adioining Wilson Museum. The museum exhibits range from tha prehistory of Europe (the founder, besides being rich, was en anthropology enthusiast) to local colonial artifacts. Working exhihits include a smithy, a brick bake oven, weaving and spinning, with demonstrators in period costume. Tha museum is open daily except Monday, 2 P.M. to 5 P.M., through Sept. 15; tha Perkins House from 2 to 4:45 P.M. except Monday, through Sept. 5. Museum admission is free; Perkins House $1.

Castine is also the home of tha Maine Maritime Academy, which trains some 600 four-year students for careers in the Merchant Marine. The training ship State of Maine, a converted passenger vessel moored at the Waterfront, is open to visitors & A.M. to 4 P.M. daily. A hrisk half-hour tour reveals tha mysteries of the bridge and engine room. as well so the discipline under which cadets operate. Every time a cadet passes an officer, he salutes and bellows, "Excuse me, SIR!"

On a hill at the edge of town rises Fort George, a Netional Historic Site, scene of a critical battle of the Revolution. The British built the fort-rather eketchily-in 1779 to protect the approach to Canada. Commodore Saltonstall (of the Massachusetts Saltonstalls) was ordered to ettack the fort with his men. The British had only three sloops of war, 750 men and tha beginnings of a fort. Saltonstall, nevertheless. dallied offshore for weeks refusing to attack. By the time he finally launched an allout assault, seven more British ships turned up, sailed into the midst of the American fleet, chased it up the Penobscot River and annihilated lt. The expedition cost tha Massachusetts treasury $8,469,780.04, a pretty penny in those days, and virtually marked the end of the Continental Navy. Commodore Saltonstall was "court-martialed for cowardice and cashiered," So says a large sign in the fort, spelling out, without glossing over, this inglorious enisode in American history.

Off the lower end of Penobscot Bay lies Deer Isle, connected to the peninoula by way of Littla Deer Isle and a high-arched suspension bridge. It is the fifth largest island along the United States Atlantic coast, 28 square miles of granite substratum that rose up 300 million years ago. Stop at the Chamber of Commerce information booth on Little Deer Isle, just across the bridge, for a map. The booth is open daily 10 A.M. to 5 P.M. during July and August. .

One Deer Isla legend holds that an islander, given the choice of heaven or heil at church one Sunday, said, "I doo't want to go nowhere. I like it right bere." Right bere is where a number of artisans—refugees from the cities -hove settled happily in recent years. One such couple are the Lawtons, Muriel and Don, whose barn studio and gallery outside Deer Isle village displey an astonishing variety of their own handicrafts, including pottery, glass, paintings, woodcarvings and jewelry. An occupational therapist originally from New York City, Mrs. Lawton says, "We have unlimited time to try out new ideas. There are no cocktail-party rounda here. If we want company we ring e bell, and the neighbors come."

On the west side of Deer Isle, Haystack Mountain School of Crafts stands amid tall pines abova a rock-bound coast. Its contemporary module huildings of gray cedar shingles and glase manage, surprisingly enough, to blend into the natural surroundings. The school teaches ceramics, glass-blowing and fabrication, graphics, jewelry making, weaving end textiles-each in a separate studio. There are four three-week summer terms, and enrollment is limited to about 65 resident plus 10 non-resident students. The work is serious, the mode of living opporently relaxed; a bandlettered sign in one studio read, "Love Peace & Grass = Kids." For information on tultion and courses, write Høystack Mountain School of Crafts, Deer Isle, Me. 04627 (tel: 207-348-6946).

On the east side of Deer Isle on a deeply wooded shore lies another attractive place to stay, Goose Cove Lodge. It comprises a large main lodge of native logs plus 10 motel units and nine scattered cottages, on 70 acres and half a mile of shoreline. Boating is the big activity here, provided by a dozen boats, including three sail (one a 32foot sloop) and six outboards. Golf and tennis are available at the nearby Island Country Club.

Goose Cove Lodge's owner, Dr. Ralph Waldron, who holds a Pb.D. in botany, takes guests on morning nature walks. He writes instructive little essays on the geology and plant life of Deer Isle, imprinted on Goose Cove Lodge table mats. He goes so far as to name his cottages for the prevailing flore growing erouod each one. If you live in Ephygea, you're force of 37 ships, 328 guns and 2,000 all over trailing arbutus. I can't report on the food because we didn't stay for a meal, but on Friday nights you can count on lobster.

Stonington, a town of some 1,300 at tha tip of Deer Isle, lives largely on fishing, lobstering and summer restdents. It's as picturesque as a Mediterranean fishing village, reproduced in wood. Square frame bouses with cedar shingles rise up the hills above the harbor like a child's building blocks. Along the waterfront street there are a few shops—an antique shop, an art gallery, a bookstore and other such lurea for summer visitors. About 100 fishing, lobster boats and pleasure craft bob in the Stonington hauls in 2 million pounds of lobster e year and maintains the largest lobster cooperativa in Maine. On the town dock. I talked to James Seger, 57 years old, 30 years e lohsterman. A solid, big-beltied man with a rocklike jaw and white stubble of beard, he wore faded blue sweat shirt, rubber hip boots and a green peaked cap. His speech was so far Down East I had troubla translating some of it.

"Lobstering's getting worse every year," he said. "There's too much gaveh [gear, or lobster pots] out there. The lobsters don't get no rest. Helf the catch here gets shipped up to Nova Scotia, where the season'e closed in summer during shedding time. Nova Scotie'e so goddamn much smatter [smarter] than this state it'e pitiful." He shook his head. "Lobstering used to be fun. You could baul 100 pots and get 300 pounds of lobster beck. Now you haul 300 pots and get hack 100 pounds."

Nodding toward tha harbor, he continued. "Thet's my boat out there-the Blue Chip. I've got 200 pots and haul ebout 100 of them e day. The co-op paye me $1.61 a pound. If I can catch 100 pounds I take home shout $150, counting my everyday expenses. But if I doo't feel like going out, the hell with it-I stay home. There's only myself to take care of. Us old fellows just dub along.

We sampled the catch at Eaton's Lobster Pool, a rustic restaurant out over the water on Little Deer Isle. (An Eaton was one of the first Deer Isle settlers, in 1762.) A lobster dinner, including salad, dessert and beverage, goes for $6.50. Bring your own liquor, beer or wine; the management supplies setups. Reservations are advisable; tel: 207-348-2383.

In Stonington, I talked to R. Nathaniel W. Barrows, publisher and managing editor of Island Ad-vantages: "Your East Penobscot Bay Weekly Newspeper." A serious young man with a luxuriant moustache, he showed considerable concern over the direction tourism might take, particularly in Stonington, a dead eod on the peninsula.

"I've seen what tourism has done to other coastal towns in the southern part of state," he said. "It makes them uninhabitable for three months a year. We did an extensive survey in town about four years ago, and 80-some percent wanted no further development of tourism whatsoever. That means no motels, no bars, no dancing places or anything like that. Right now it's fine. The only thing to see here is the quaint town. But if 1,000 people crowd in looking over each other's shoulders to see

It, It won't be so quaint." He convinced me that visitors to Stonington-or any other part of the East Penobscot Bay region, for that matter-would do well to infiltrate inconspicuously, walk softly and talk softly, so as not to disturb the peace.

What's Doing in the LOIRE VALLEY

By HERBERT LOTTMAN

THE SITE — Few regions in the world have assembled in a relatively small area so great a collection of architectural delights as the Loire River Valley south of Paris. During the Middle Ages the river was fortified with impressive from famparts and cren-silated eastles. Then, by the time of the Renaissance of the 16th century, with a consolidation of territories, there was time for pleasure. The castles were en-larged and more attention was paid to decoration, exterior as well as interior, less to the thickness of wells and the width of mosts.
While the French kings enjoyed hunting and caronamy in the benign vailey, enhanced by excellent products of the soil (including, of course, wine), their courtiers were obliged to build their own castles and manors. The result is an extraordinary countrysids dotted with eastles. There are a score of famous castles, but another 100 or more scarcely known outside their own neighborhoods—not to speak of the churches and forti-fied estates and fine old stone houses in villages and towns. There are any number of ways to visit the castle country: Detailed itineraries are available in guide-books, and one is suggested below. But if you can afford the time, simply wander through the region, following a sign to a castle here, a church or monastery there and —nearly everywhere—a vineyard offering free wine tasting.

GETTING AROUND --- YOU may want to use an automobile to in-crease access to the Loire castles, which are often found in country. settings some distance from the nearest town. A new section of expressway links Paris to Tours in the heart of the castle country. Leave Paris by the Autoroute dn Sud (A6), then follow signs to-ward Chartres and Orleans (A10); for an unknown reason the final destination. Tours, is not posted. It's a fast 150 miles to Tours with one-way tolls amounting to $7.10. Gas stations, spack bars and restaurants line the way, bot the food is usually more expensive and always less interesting than what's ovailable just off the highway in a village. (If you must eat on the autoroute, the restaurant at Orleans-Saran offers complete meals of $5.80.) The old highway to Tours via Orleans is not recommended because it is cluttered with billboards, auto-parts shope with billboards, auto-parts shope and other junk. For a longer, more laisurely journey, leave Paris by way of Valles de Chevreuse, then on Highway N306 wist Ramboul let and Chartres and follow Alo to Tours by way of Chateaudum. Railroad service from Paris'e Austerlitz station is fairly fre-quent, but the trip takes two hours Monger on local trains) and sometimes requires a change of trains. One-way direct-class tickets are $13.20, second class $8.80. From Tours, you can visit the castles mail. Oct. 3 by alghitseing buses operated by the Prench National Railroads. Four full-day circuits are available taking in major castles. Half-day tours, each covering three castles, two of them including visits to wine cellars, are also offered, and there are three evening tours, each taking nn. a sound and light performance.

St. sound and light evenings run $7:50. Information and tickets at the Tours railroad station and tho adjacent tourist information office. If you decide to use Blois or Angers as a base instead of Tours, comparable bus tours are available at the railroad station in ALL IN A DAY—Suppose you can only allow a single day for your tour of the castles. Its village bas become one of the most honkytonk of the region, marred by souvenir shops, but the castle, a delightful Renaissance jewel with svocations of the medieval, is protected by a vast park. One can walk sround the castle — It is lovelier on the outside than the inside—by purchasing a 55-cent ticket. The charge to go inside is $1.30, and the bours are 9 A.M. to noon and 2 to 6:30 P.M. Then proceed to Ussé, which was said to have inspired the fairy tale "Sleeping Beauty." The approach by road will tell you why, as yoo begin to catch glimpses of the towers and turrets nestled in the woods. It is s splendid marriago of feodal, Renaissance and neoclassical, so successful e marriage that the different styles may have that the different styles may have to be pointed out to you by the guide. Open from 9 to noon, 2 to 7 P.M., admission $1.50. The adjacent chapel (admission free) ecotained a famous tapestry evecation of the story of Joan of Arcuntil it was stolen last winter. Next on the route, the castle of Chinou need not be visited, but walk or drive sround the ruins of this medieval fortress where Joan better not break the set or over-stay your time limit if you want to get it all back. The summer season includes a ballet program in the gardens of the Fino Arts Museum through Aug. 15. A small but amusing flea market (bric-abrac, old books and paintings) is beld outdoors on Place de la République. Barrier, oue of France's 17 three-star restaurants, is just outside town to the north. Outstanding dishes include a terrine of three Loire River fish, and full meale run about $28 (tel: 54-20-39). Local Bourgeuil wine is available.

COMING EVENTS-Major castles are open year round, though with reduced hours in winter. Sound-and-light shows are given from late spring through sarly fall. At almost any time during the season there will be a theater, dance or music festival at one castle or another. For example, Amboise is holding its festival through next Sunday; Blois will present concerts on Ang. 13, Ang. 27 and Sept. 10; Cheverny offers trum-pet concerts on Ang. 14 and Ang. 21.

SOUND AND LIGHT-In the evening, all major Loire Valley cas-tles are illuminated, and e drive of Arc met Charles the Dauphin. Chinon's old neighborhoods, where Rabelais grew up, are also worth a visit. Now drive east to Chenooceaux, the favorite of many travelers, with its famous halls built as a bridge over the Cher River, its gardens of Henri II's queen, Catherine de Medici, and her rival, Diane de Poitlers. Open from 9 A.M. to 7 P.M., admission $1.50. If there is time, you can see the castles of Amboise, Chaumoot and Cheverny, but save the final visit for Chambord, the most extrava-gant castle of the Loire Valley. The plaything of Francois I. it is the largest chatean in the region (440 rooms) and is currounded by his hunting grounds. (You'll be asked to drive slowly because deer and wild boars still roam freely.) A distant view of Cham-bord is unforgettable, with its hundreds of rooftop spires and chimney pots; onco inside, you won't forget its double-spiral staircases either. Open from 9 to 11:45

A.M. and from 2 to 7:15 P.M., closed Tuesdays after Ang. 31.
Admission $1.10, parking 45 cents.

What you get with sound and light: a place to stand, usually in the garden or courtyard; a musical and narrated evocation of the history of the site, with major scenes acted out, and lighting that changes in color and intensity, with various build-ings, wings of buildings, even particular windows illuminated turn. Except at some castles where an English translation is provided, the narration is only in French. The greet sound-and-light shows include Chambord, admission $1.30; Chenonceao, $1.30 ploe 20 cents to rent earphones to hear the performance in English; Azay-le-Rideou, $1.30 plus 40 cems for earphones. Blois offers a performance in English follow-ing the French show (also $1.30). The show at Le Lude is more than twice as long as the others (nearly two hours), has 330 livo performers, fountain displays and a ballet. It is given on Thursday, Saturday and Sunday; tickets rango from $2.15 to $4.75. If you are staying in Tours, note that buses for Le Lude leave from the railroad station square at 8:30 P.M. on Thursdays and Saturdays through September; the price for boe and performance ie $7,50. Sound-and-light shows in the above-mentioned castles are given at varying hours depending on the mouth, so it is wise to ask your ROOM AND BOARD-Visitors doing the castles by bus, with the town of Tours as bese, will find adequate quarters at all price anequate quarters at all price levels, such as the American-modern Meridien (doubles about $33) and the traditional Metropole ($28), which is known for its restaurant, where you should figure on $10 for dinner. More modest are the Trianon (top price $15) and the Voltaire ($10.75), but neither of them has a restaurant.

With a car, some of France's most delightful inns are available to you. You can even live in a castle transformed into a hotel; a convenient and reasonably priced example, just a mile east of Am-boise, is Châtean de Pray (Tel: 57-23-67), where the tho best tower room with a plunging visw over the formal-garden, 25-acre park and the terraces down to the Loire at its loveliest costs $25.80. Dinner (obligatory) runs $9 a person and up. Bou Laboureur et du Château at Chenonceaux (Tel: 29-90-02) has a restaurant that has long boasted a Michelin star. Rooms are provided in one of ecveral small houses, sometimes with delightful private gardens: doubles from $11.40 (without bath) to $24 (with), Restaurant menus aro $6.70 and $11.60; a nico local Bourgeuil red wine adds $5.80 to the bill. You are steps away from the entrance to Chenoneeaux eastle, which also means you can attend the 10:30 P.M. cound-and-light performance after dinner no matter how much wine you've had. And, next morn-ing, walk up and through the vineyards only a few bundred feet from yoor doorstep. At Langeais, five minutes oo foot from the castlo drawbridge, the Hotel-Restaurant Hosten (Tel: 55-82-12) bas long had two Michelin stars. Doubles had two mithelm stars. Doubles begin at $9.45 (without bath) and run to $21 (with); ask for a room away from the traffic side. A meal (obligatory) will run from $16.80 to $25.20. Guinea chick stuffed with pig's feet, a house specialty, comes to $9.90 for two; a pike-like local fish, sandre, with a special white-butter sauco is a feature of the $16.80 menn. Bourgeuil wine of the $16.80 menu, Bourgeuil wine at $4.30. Even breakfast ($2.15) is two-star, what with brioches and three kinds of bread, fruit juice, and o strainer to skim oue's milk. Add 15 percent for services charge. All through the region small inns and roadsido restaurants tempt the traveler; prices are posted outdoors. The torrist office in Tours can emply tourist office in Tours can supply a list of Logis et Auberges.

WINES OF THE LOIRE-Often wines of the Loire—Often excellent, they can also be disappointing. The best known, white Saumur and Vouvray, for example, aren't always the best tasting. Avoid sparkling Vouvray. The surprise, to many first-time visitors, will be the reds: earthy Bourgeuil and Chinou and their lighter relative Saumur-Champigny, all grown in a 60-mile stretch all grown in a 60-mile stretch between Tours and Angers, Often the wine cellars, like the bomes of the growers, are dug out of the chalky eliffs on either side of the river. Signs along the road invite travelers to visit the cellars and taste the wines without charge. Some of the cellars carved out of the rock are veritable buildings, with a succession of rooms. One example: La Grande Vignoble, jost west of Montsorean between Chi-non and Sammur, whose owner, Michel Gourdon, lives in the adjacent house also carved oot of the cliff. He offers red Sanmur-Champigny at $1.70 a bottle, hard and dry white Saumur at $1,50. Avoid establishments billed as "ceves touristiques," which charge admission, since all the others allow free visits. Your itinerary from one castle to the next should take you through the vineyards of the Loire, where toward the end of this mouth and early in September, during grape-picking and pressing time, you may find the vineyards as exciting as the castles.

ODDS AND ENDS-Posters of many of the castlee can be bought many of the castles can be bought for $2.50 each opposite the ticket counter at Chateeu Azay-le-Rideau. The English-language Michelin green guide to all the castles, featuring bandy maps, particularly one with drawings of the major eastles, is un salo throughout the Loire Valley, also at $2.50. But note that admission at $2.60. But note that admission prices to castles and other moun-ments have risen again this year and are higher than even the new-est guide reveals (up to 25 percent higher). A steam engine takes passengers on turn-of-the-century railrood cars for a two-mile ride from Chinon to Richelieu and back on Saturdays through Aug. 28 and on Sundays through Sept. 12, with wine and chaese tasting along the way (round trip $4.30). In Amboise, a stone's throw from the castle, is Close-Luce, the last home of Leonardo da Vinci. A carsfully preserved Renaissance manor, it preserved Renaissance manor, it contains period furniture and scale models of machinery designed by Leonardo. For those interested in crafts. State Route 73 holds other treasures, for it leads to the Great Smoky Crafts-Arts Tour. Three miles from the madding crowd in town, the circuit leads from shop to shop of some of the better crafts people in the area. The personwho takes the time to drive out there will find quilts, jewelry, brooms, paint-ings and wood carvings of great quality. As a bonus, at most of the places one can watch the items being made. A left turn at Glades Road begins this

Those not totally seduced by the worldly pleasures of Gathinburg tend to head into the Great Smoky Mountains National Park. Traffic can be frostrating, particularly when one gets behind a car with Midwest Ecense plates. These flatlanders often seem to delight in driving at a smail's paceand refusing to pull over for anything less than a bear.

Upon entering the park, a stop at the Sugarlands Visitors' Center is recommended. There one can gain maps and advice from rangers in pianning what to do. Hiking is a favorite activity, and the clogged roads tend to make it more so. Hikes can range from nature trails of a few hundred yards to overnight sections of the Appalachian Trail Anyone planning to camp in the park must have a permit, available free at the ranger stations. Clingmans Dome is the highest point, but should not be visited on anything less than a sunny day. Otherwise the view is restricted to that of a nosetip at 6,643 feet above sea level. A perennial favorite of touchts is Cades Cove, a broad mountain valley that was home to several generations of pioneers, Some of the caling have been restored, and there is a guistmill that operates delily from May to Octo-

If You Go

. . to the Great Smoky Mountains National Park, you will find over 120 hotels, motels and cabins in Gatlinburg alone, Reservations are generally unnecessary, except during the fall foliage season. Gattinburg has a small airport, but most air travelers will arrive at Mcgee-Tyson Airport in Knoxville, where there are daily scheduled flights to New York. Rental cars are available at the airport.

For those arriving by car, the least commercialized routes into the park are: Interstate 40 to U.S. 129 to Marvville, then State Route 73; or I-40 to State Route 32, then 73 to Gatlinburg. Your choice of soutes depends on which end of the park you wish

A Holland America vacation ends this waste of precious vacation time. The minute you board in New York, you can begin circling the dance floor instead of an airport.

While you cruise, you can shoot skeet over the ocean, drive golf balls into the world's bluest green or just sit there and watch the flying fish go by.

And there's no better way to cruise than on a Holland America ship. Only Holland America offers you a complete breakfast and lunch out by the pool or in the dining room every day. And Holland America not only serves you superb meals, but offers you a choice of mealtimes most convenient for you. Plus our midnight buffet and 24-hour room service. All with no extra charges, and no tipping required.

You can also enjoy first run movies, first-rate entertainers and all the dancing you can stand. It's the most vacation you can get in 7 days. And you can get it on Holland America's s.s. Rotterdam to Nassau and Bermuda (the only 7-day cruise that includes both) and on the s.s. Statendam to Bermuda (with 3 days at sea and 4 days at Front St. in downtown Hamilton).

If you have a little more time, you can get even more vacation on the s.s. Veendam's 10 and 11-day

Each ship offers you the elegant service and experience of a cruise line that's been cruising the world for 103 years.

So if you'd like e vacation that gets off the ground fast, check the schedule below. Call your travel agent or mail the schedule with your name and address to Holland America Cruises, Two Penn Plaza, New York 1000i. Or call (212) 760-3880.

S.S. ROTTERDAM

17-day cruises New York to Nassau & Bermuda.
Every Saturday, April to November. From $420 to $845. S.S.STATENDAM ☐ 7-day cruises New York to Bermuda. Every Saturday, April to November. From $410 to $830.

Come to The Princess. Bermuda as it was in the beginning.

lt's a lovely way to stay in ... Bermuda-in the island's prestige location overlooking the pretty Harbour, just a stroll from the shops and sightseeing of Hamilton town.

Right from the Pool Terrace, swim in either of 2 poois, sail a sunfish, waterski, board a fishing boat or a sightseeing cruiser. Or spend a day at the Princess Golf, Beach & Tennis Club-on one of the pink cove beaches that made Bermuda famous. (Complimentary transportation.) Try snorkeiing, paddla boating, scuoa.

Enjoy tennis at the Princess Tennis Club at the Southampton Princess. (Complimentary transportation.) 11 Plexipave courts have resident pros, instruction, exhibition matches. After tennis, enjoy a sauna and use of exarcise equipment at the Princess Health Club.

Also included: full breakfasts and dinners supervised by Princess chefs who were winners at the Societé Culinaire Philanthropiqua Show. Which makes dining a special event every day. Afternoon Tea is held in the classic Adam Lounge, and you'll be our guests at the Monday Rum Swizzie Party. We'll also provide your transportation between the airport and hote!...both ways.

Stalking Prehistory In the Fields of Eire

end with a disappointing specimen—a shapeless heap of stone rubble or an 'unimpressive lump of earth. On the other hand, we would serendipitously discover wonderful monuments. We have found the best time of year for stalking stones to be summer, when long days allowed us to search well past tea time if we wished.

Whether through diligence or luck, we found scores of field antiquities during three weeks that we spent in Ireland this year. Most were on the west coast, simply because the beauty of that part of the country made us linger there. A few in particular stand

Drombeg-We had read in a guidebook shout the stone circle, that most mysterious of Irish monuments, and a cooking place, both at Dromheg, near the southernmost point of Ireland in County Cork. Typically, the book was vague about how to get there, but the site proved easy to find. A turn off the coast road, three and a haif miles west of the village of Rosscarberry, was marked by a green-and-white sign. The oarrow road sooo became a grassy track, and wheo it was impossible to drive farther we struck out on foot. The track ended at a wall with a stile, and beyond, e perfect circle of stones about 20 feet in diameter. As we approached, a horse grazing on the sitesnorted his annovance and moved off. At Drombeg, unlike any other site we were to visit, was a sign bearing a lengthy - and welcome - explanation of whet we were seeing. The circle with 16 upright stones and one "recumbent" was excavated by archeologists in 1957 and 1958, the sign noted, and the cremated remains of e child were found in its center. We also learned that the sun sets over the recumhent stone on Dec. 21, Midwinter'a Day-a common pheoomenon with stone circles, causing some archeologists to think they were crude calendars or ceoters for sun

Next to the circle were two tumbledown cooking huts connected by a stone walkway. One hut cootained an oven for roastiog and the other a pit for boiling. A well in the boiling hut was still full to overflowing and alive with tadpoles. Water from the well trickled out of the but through an ancient stone-lined drain, spiiliog into a 20th-century cattle trough.

Glenfahan Beehlves-Rounding Slea Head In County Kerry, the road hugs the side of the mountain. Above are steep, rocky meadows and an occasional farm house. Below it's a straight drop to the Atlantic. It's easy to see why this finger of land is thought to have been inhabited by early Christian monks who wanted to live close to God and, before them, holy men of other persuasions. This is the last stop before New York, the local joke goes, and the people who lived here centuries ago when Ireland was the western edge of the known world thought it was the last stop, period.

We were looking for traces of those early settlements, specifically "heehive cells." These huts are remarkable in that they were constructed without mortar by the careful halancing of stooe oo stone in such a way that the walls eventually met in domed roof -thus the name "bechive," We would find the beehives, we knew, scattered over the mountainside above. Homemade signs posted outside farmhouses advertised beebives; it was obvious that that was a rare instance of farmers who figured to profit by the antiquities on their land. When we pulled into one farmyard an old woman came ont to collect 20 cents from each of us. She pointed the way to the site, past a field of placidly grazing sheep and frisky lambs.

What we found was a cluster of five roofless huts surrounded by thick walls. From their large size, we judged that the huts were not true beehives but had originally had thatched roofs. In the wall of one hut was something interesting, however: the entrance to a souterrain. As the name suggests, souterrains are underground passages or chambers that were used as storage areas, hiding places or escape routes when settlements were attacked. In modern times they have been used as weapons caches by the Irish Republi-

Without hesitating, my husband's 17year-old son lowered himself into the tunnel feet first. He inched his way down oo his belly, shouting back first that the tunnel oarrowed and snaked to the left and then to the right. Because he had no flashlight, he went ooly 20 feet or so, then shimmied out. On the way back to our car, we met a freckled old man in the farmyard and asked him if he knew where the passage ended. He had been in it many times as a boy, he said. It ended in a room large enough for a man to

We drove on to the next farmhouse displaying a sign. This time a redhaired girl, about 7 years old, came out to collect 40 cents from each of us and show us the way. Your neighbors charge only half as much, my husband teased her, are your beehives twice as good? Yes, she responded earnestly. And indeed they were. Here was a perfect beehive, every stooe in place, including those forming the roof. Other huts on the site were roofless. One contained a hearth and another, a souterrain. The girl, who told us her oame was Mary Houlihan, crawled into the man-made cave and stood up inside to show us its size. Returning to the car, we passed a beehive with a cemeot roof. Mary said it wasn't an authentic ancient heehive, but ooe her great-grandfather had built as a dairy. It was evident from the cement that be either hadn't mastered the building techniques of his ancestors or hadn't their patience.

Carrowmore-A few miles outside Sligo city, Carrowmore is one of the largest concentrations of field antiquities in Ireland-acre upon acre of unopened tumull and cairns, dolmens and circles. We approached it from the south and while we were still some miles away, we could see a bump on a mountaintop that we knew to be a cairn. From the town of Balisodare, We took the road to Strandhill, turning off at a green-and-white sign that read "Carrowmore 1 mi." No sign marked the actual site, but many monuments lay close to the road, so we had little trouble finding them.

After a hasty picnic of soda bread, cheese and bottled stont, we set out to explore the monuments. All those circles and mounds in one place made me giddy. The lichen-spotted dolmens were smaller than we had hoped, including a miniature one that looked like a tortoise, but they were not unin-

Near one stone-ringed mound, a man and woman were tilling a small garden patch. When the man learned we were tourists, he hailed us with the traditional Irish greeting "Cead Mile Failte" -"One hundred thousand welcomes" -and told us their name was Parks. "We're living in the heart of a graveyard," Parks said gleefully of the monuments on his land, and he recalled how, as a young man steering a horse-drawn plow over the fields, he had accidentally dug up human

Mrs. Parks took a much more solemn view of the tombs. "There's supposed to be a crock of gold in there," she said, indicating the nearby mound. Kings and queens were ouried here with all their possessions, she added. Why, I asked her, had oo one ever dug up the gold? "If you dig, you die withio 12 mooths," she replied. "That's what they say."

We followed the road back the way we came, in the direction of the heather-capped mountain with the hump. The mountain was called Knockparea and the cairn was known as Queen Maeve'a Tomb, named for a mythical Irish queen. Turning right at the church and left at the school, we found the green-and-white sign that marked the path up the mountain. While not much of an ascent by mountain-climbing standards, it was steep enough to make me ponder about the prehistoric people who carried stones up for the cairn. The walk took my husbaod and me half an hour and my athletic stepson 20 minutes.

The cairn was little more than a large pile of rock. It had oever been excavated and it was frustrating not knowing what was inside. But the view was breathtaking. To the oorth, with its distinctive profile, was Benbulben, Boa and White Islands-I was willing to take risks. In fact, a few days before I had stepped in front of a pawing oull in order to get to a stone circle. But I was nervous about crossing the border from the Republic of Ireland to Northern Ireland. In the end, though, I gave in to my curiosity about some carved stones just over the border.

The stones were pre-Christian fertility figures and were situated on Boa Island in Lough Erne, a boomerargshaped lake nine miles long from end to end. Our plan to drive our rented car from Ballyshannon in Donegal to the island, which is connected by oridge to the mainland, was scrapped when we learned our auto insurance would be invalid in Northern Ireland. Too many rental cars, it seems, have been commandeered, loaded with gelgnite and used as car-bombs. So the Northern Irish Tourist Board asked a County Fermanagh resident to drive across the border to fetch us. Our other recourse would have been to hire a Ballyshannon taxi for the day, but at the time we didn't know how to direct the driver.

From the border town of Belleek we drove along the northern shore of Lough Erne exactly 10.3 miles on the neter to a gate and lane leading to the right. No sign marked the spot and the gate was like any other gate. The lane ended in an overgrown churchyard, and it took a few minutes of thrashing around in the vegetation to discover the figures. It is not unusual to find pre-Christian monuments in old Christian burying grounds since the church often took over the holy places of the pagan religions it apperseded.

The two roughly human figures were similar. Each had a face on the front and the back of its heart-shaped head. Each also had what appeared to be crossed arms on the front and back. of its torso, so that a single figure suggested two embracing bodies. The stones were unmistakably phallic in Having ventured this far, we decided to see more carved figures, these on White Island, also in Lough Erne. After e 10-mile drive to the lakeshore outside Kesh, we found the Aghinver Boat Company, owned by a red-bearded young man named Mickey McCaldin. who agreed to take us across the short stretch of water to White Island. A few yards from the island's dock were the ruins of a church, and on one of its walls seven stone figures were mounted. These figures were carved in early Christian times, but they were in the same pagan style as the Boa Island figures. All were human, of debatable gender, and most were holding something, such as a crozier, book or quill. One was unfinished.

For the first time in our antiquity hunting, there were other people on the site when we arrived. A party of archeologists from the Ulster Museum in Belfast were examining the stooes, and a workman was painstakingly cleaning one with a toothbrush. Characteristically, the archeologists were disagreeing over what the figures stood for. Theories abound as to what the stones represent saints, early churchmen, Old Testament patriarchs, Christ? The smallest figure is thought to be a shella-na-gig, a kind of pagan fertility figure that early Christians included in their iconography, just to be on the safe side. Mounted on another wall was a faintly carved flat stone. Young McCaldin yanked up a handful of grass and rubbed the stone until a cross and inscription became visible.

The man with the toothbrush, it turned out, was the official ferryman and caretaker, Willy Shannon. On weekends only, he takes tourists

some deserved attention, even under the title of food, in Herbert R. Lottman's article "Bologna's Food: The Best in Italy?" (Travel Section, July II). Bologna is such a darkly fascinating city that, coming from Florence, I was shocked to note the lack of tourists. Never thought I'd miss them. but wanted others to appreciate the continuous surprise of the streets, with their arches, the courtyards, the absurdity of those two leaning towers. The courtyards sometimes enclose charming gardens with small sculptures and a view that remains permanently in the memory; an entranceway ending with a closed grilled gate leading to a cobble-stoned yard. Straight ahead was a painted gateway, a trompe d'oeil look down steps faded yet somehow still vivid, with a sheet hanging from a window over one corner. The realistic-unrealistic joining of elements was a Surrealistic dream.

For more practical matters. yes, the food is superior. We wandered into a small restaurant called the Eiffel Tower, crammed with décor and Bolognese families. We seemed to be the only foreigners present, and the food was delicious. I recall particularly the dessert, a small cylinder of cake and icecream with a few tiny straw-

I take up the cudgels for Pappagallo. While there were few clients when we were there, I have been in other restaurants as poorly patronized without receiving such attention: samples of elegant ice-cream (which we did not order and sensed no reproach) : cigarettes offered (also not accepted, and ditto), and in general very good service indeed.

MRS, ARTHUR FRIED Peekskill, N.Y.

FRENCH AUCTIONS

Herbert R. Lottman erred in his otherwise informative French Auctions: article, Lively, Eccentric" (Travel Section, July II), by referring to the paper on French country sales as Gazette de l'Gare d'Orsay. It is called Gazette de l'Hotel Drouot. I receive this paper regularly and also buy it when I attend sales in Paris.

ERNEST M. WERNER New York

IRISH RELATIONS

To the Editor:

I have little sympathy for "Irish .. Husband" who wrote in the Letters Column (Travel Section, July 18) to complain of the selfishness of visiting relatives from the United States who planned to use his home as a hotel. He and his wife did not have to cancel their own vacation plans. The words, "Thanks, but no thanks" would have sufficed. Why did he and his wife consent to be exploited by their American relatives when all they had to do was write, "We are bitterly disappointed but your planned visit just happens to coincide with our own trip to the Algarve" (or Athens or Sweden or wherever). "Do consult us in advance another time, So sorry to miss you."

HELEN M. FRANC Great Neck, L.I.

BIG THICKET

To the Editor:

Concerning the article, "Big Thicket: Eight Separate Worlds, Side by Side in Texas" by Linda Scarbrough (Travel Section, May 2), I have just received word from G. Watson, the guide, that her fee is now $25 a day, plus $10 for the use of her boat and 10 cents a mile for use of her Volkswagen van.

BERNICE WINSTON Great Neck, L.I.

THIS WINTER, HOLLAND AMERICA'S NON-STOP VACATIONS GET YOU OFF THE GROUND WITH A FREE FLIGHT TO MIAMI.

If you'd like to take flight from winter this year, Holland America is offering free airfare to Miami with free transfers from the airport to your s.s. Statendam cruise.

And there's no better way to cruise than on Holland America's s.s. Statendam. Unlike the usual Florida cruise ships, the Statendam is a true luxury liner with plenty of room for you to luxuriate in. And only Holland America offers you a complete breakfast and lunch out by the pool or in the dining room daily. Plus a choice of mealtimes most convenient for you. And no tipping required.

What's more, the greatest vacation spots in the Caribbean will be within walking distance. You can have a look at the drive in volcano on St. Lucia, swim in the underwater national park near St. Thomas, visit the year 976 on the San Blas Islands. Even have a look at South America's Andes from Caracas Mt. Avila.

All with the elegant service and experience of a cruise line that began cruising the Caribbean before most cruise lines even began.

So when you compare fly and cruise vacations, make sure you compare the deal on the cruise as well as the deal on the flight. Call your travel agent or Holland America Cruises at (212) 760-3880. Or mail the coupon. The s.s. Statendam is registered in the Netherlands Antilles.

am a fable. Discover Magellan's Continent with me." M.S. Kungsholm

People make the M.S. Kungsholm a fable. The people who come aboard as guesss—and the people who staff this world-famous luxury vessel. There is an atmosphere on Kungsholm that you will feel the moment you step aboard. Gra-ciousness and real hospitality. You will be amongst friends-and isn't it much more pleasant to sail with people who treat you as a person? There are loss of things to do on Kungsholm—swimming, sports activities, lectures, entertainment, music. There is a beauty salon, sauna, and boutique. But if all you want to do is sit on deck and read—or just look at the sea -- you can do that without anyone insisting that you be

And when you are ashore visiting the wonderful places on your itinerary our own staff go with you—so that you are always comfortable, no matter how exotic the place. And when you return to the ship after one of your adventuresthe finest food and wine await you-and the pleasure of being back home.

As you can see by tracing your course on the chart—your ports of call include trips to some of the most exciting places in South America. In Peru, Lima-the Inca ruins at Macchiu Picchu. Vina del Mar and Santiago at the foot of the Andes

You will cross the Straits of Magellan to Punta Arenas—past the breathtaking fiords and glaciers of Tierra del Fuego. Buenos Aires in Argentina and then Brazil with stops at Santos-and trips to Sao Paulo, Iguassa Falls, and of course romantic Rio de Janeiro. Then north to Salvador, Bahia.

Your voyage continues into the Caribbean with stops at Barbados and St. Thomas.

Once you've experienced the very special quality of Kungsholm ambiance and people-you will probably feel-as many of our regular guests do-that she is without peer among cruise ships. You'll know why we say she's a fable.

ONLY MON-STOP FLIGHTS TO MOROCCO WITH ROYAL MOSPITALITY SERVICE

Take Amtrak's Colonial to Busch Gardens' "Old Country" in Virginia, U.S.A.

Amtrak's newest and most beautiful train, the Amfleet, can take you to Williamsburg, Virginia near Busch Gardens' Old Europe theme park. You can speed into the past while riding in the future.

Amtrak's new Amfleet has the smoothest ride going. An air cushion suspension system, dual climate control and deep reclining seats keep you comfortable all the way into the past. So why bother with the hassle of flying or driving?

See the Old Country.

Celebrate "Oktoberfest" in August, in a Munich music hall. Drive the twisting Le Mans race course. Meet the ghosts of Shakespeare's Globe Theatre. They're all in Busch Gardens' fascinating new theme park where time stands still in enchanting European hamlets, romantic Parisian cafes, circus acts, compah bands, folk dancers and exciting flume rides. It's the best way to enjoy Europe this side of the Atlantic. And the best way to get there is on Amtrak's Colonial.

Visit the Old Country Monday-Thursday and Save on Lodgings.

Make one of these relaxing motor inns your historic headquarters. Each has swimming, dining and other activities right on the premises. And the prices are right.
